I now refer to the size of the land bank that is presently owned by the Metropolitan police. In 1988, the Metropolitan police estimated the market value of their 29 sites at about £22 million. In some cases there have been no clear aims and objectives about the way in which such sites should be used. I do not want to pre-empt anything that the PAC may do on Monday, so I shall say nothing more about that matter. However, if, in future, the Met could make much better use of its assets, more money could be redeployed to provide better facilities and services for the force. I am encouraged to know that the Home Secretary has confirmed that new capital controls will be introduced with effect from 1 April 1990 that will provide an incentive to dispose of surplus assets by allowing free use of a specified proportion of receipts. That is a major step forward and I congratulate the Home Secretary on it. We all know from our experience of public life that there is little incentive to make better use of assets. The money goes into the common pot and those making the savings see little benefit from them. I hope that we can look forward to a completely different system.

I agree with the hon. Member for Huddersfield (Mr. Sheerman) that the commissioner's report is excellent. It deals, among other matters, with traffic. Like my hon. Friend the Member for Beckenham (Sir P. Goodhart) I am concerned that the strength of the traffic warden service declined in 1988 by almost 100 to 1,444. In addition, the reduction in the traffic division, which was carried out by a previous commissioner, is seen by many members of the Police Federation as reducing the Met's ability to combat traffic congestion.

In Uxbridge, which is in what some describe as outer London but should be described as being in the county of Middlesex, there are more cars per family than in any other London borough, and the need for traffic management schemes is urgent. When my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary replies to the debate, I hope that he will be able to tell my hon. Friend the Member for Beckenham and I when the Home Office working party will report. I have been tabling parliamentary questions for the past year or so trying to obtain some information about what will be done.

I understand that primary legislation is needed if local authorities are to be able to employ traffic wardens and use the income from fines to finance more off-street parking. The need for that in outer London areas such as Beckenham and Uxbridge—[Interruption.] My hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) makes the point that this also affects his constituency, and I am sure that it affects all of outer London. Action is urgently needed in all these areas.

It must be possible for local authorities to employ traffic wardens so that the chaos which becomes more evident as the weeks go by, can be dealt with. We must give some relief to the people who live in residential streets where parked cars make it almost impossible for municipal services to travel into and out of the streets.

Mr. Tony Banks: I entirely concur with the hon. Gentleman's point. He demonstrates that there is concern on both sides of the House. I ask him to place it on record —it is important for a Conservative Member to do so— that if borough councils become responsible for the warden schemes, they must have the resources to carry out their responsibilities efficiently and effectively. The Government frequently give more responsibility and place more duty on local authorities while at the same time taking more and more resources away from them.

Mr. Shersby: I take the hon. Gentleman's point. My local authority's view is that the operation could be financed from the proceeds of fines. However, it can do so only if the legislative changes to which I have referred take place. I hope that the Home Office will announce its decision before the recess because there is great agitation about this in London.

I shall refer to the sensitive and delicate issue of public order and the difficulties experienced by the Metropolitan police when handling the recent marches in opposition to the publication of "The Satanic Verses". A number of Metropolitan police officers are worried about what constitutes reasonable force when handling such a difficult matter. I am sure that hon. Members on both sides of the House will pay tribute to the way in which the Metropolitan police handled the incidents in its area, and I am equally sure that the Home Secretary will take account of the concern that exists.

The Home Secretary referred to the recruitment of specials. I should like to make it clear to him that the Police Federation is not opposed to specials; it believes that they have a role to play helping officers of the regular force, as they have done for many years. The federation does not believe that they can take over from the regular force, nor has the Home Secretary suggested that they should. The federation is worried, as my right hon. Friend knows, about the proliferation of private police forces in docks around the country, set up under the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act 1847, under which specials can be sworn in to replace regular officers. I am grateful for the way in which my right hon. Friend listened to the federation's views on this matter and for the steps that he has taken to consult the Secretary of State for Transport on whether we need to continue creating such private forces under a Victorian Act that was never intended for that purpose.

Hon. Members have referred to the need for private security forces to be regulated. As I understand it, Government policy so far has been to rely on self-regulation by those forces, but that will need to be kept under observation—to use the favourite buzz word, we shall need to monitor the position. In shopping malls in many towns there are now private security guards who deny access to people who want to go about their usual business, and that sometimes causes anxiety. In the recent European election campaign it was made clear that the candidates were not welcome in a shopping mall which I know. That raises questions that concern us all, and the matter needs careful and sensitive treatment.

I want to put down a marker about the policing of our streets. Many hon. Members on both sides will share my firm belief that the streets should be policed by the regular officers of the police forces throughout the United Kingdom. I do not want private gated streets policed by private police forces. I know that the Adam Smith Institute has advocated that, but it finds no support from me.

Another matter important to every London Member is the policing of the London Underground. I pay tribute to the 80 or so Metropolitan police officers who have been seconded to help the British Transport police in this difficult task, and I welcome the support that the Metropolitan police have given. It has reassured Londoners, and I hope that, if it proves necessary to strengthen the British Transport police in the future, that need will be accommodated in the overal policing structure of London. British Transport police play a valuable role and it may be necessary at some stage to supplement their ranks.

There has been some comment in the debate on racial incidents and attacks. I was glad that the commissioner's report referred to them. There has been an increase in such cases, but of less than 2 per cent. since 1987.

I did not read only the commissioner's report; I had a look at the report on the policing of Uxbridge that was recently sent to me. In 1987, 17 racial incidents were reported, and 22 have been reported this year. Resulting from the 22 complaints, 14 people have been identified as suspects. There has been some difficulty gathering enough evidence to start prosecutions, and in other cases the victims have refused to prosecute. In eight of the incidents the suspects were not known or traced.

Not all coppers in London are brutal, racist and corrupt. They handle racial attacks very well and with great sensitivity and they should have the support of the House for the way in which they tackle those matters.

Mr. Tony Banks: That is a generalised statement. I assure the hon. Gentleman that the position in Uxbridge is markedly different from that in Newham. Although, according to the report, there has been only a 2 per cent. increase, that statistic masks the enormous upsurge in some areas of London—specifically, the east end—so the hon. Gentleman must be careful with it.

Mr. Shersby: One of the good features of a debate such as this is that one is constantly reminded of the great diversity in the population of London. I accept that there is a great difference between the hon. Gentleman's constituency and mine, but the police have made a significant contribution to dealing with this problem.

We have heard today about the community police consultative groups, one of which is in the borough of Hillingdon, in my constituency. The police in my area have drawn to my attention the difficulty in attracting young people to serve on those groups. I hope that the Home Office and the Met can do more to encourage young people to come forward so that they are constantly in touch with what is going on at local level.

I particularly welcome the paragraph in the commissioner's report dealing with victim care. I see that the force made over 100,000 referrals to victim support schemes in the past year. The hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) will remember, because I recall his being in the Chamber when this matter was debated, that only a year ago we were pressing my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary for financial assistance to make such schemes possible. They give great comfort to those who have the misfortune to suffer sometimes violent attacks and who are cared for and counselled by those who work on the schemes.

I must also mention the courts and the work that the London magistrates do in complementing the Metropolitan police in the policing of our capital city. The magistrates' courts around London are experiencing serious difficulties because of the shortage of court clerks. I have raised this matter in two Adjournment debates, one in 1972 and another this year. The problem can be tackled only if my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary can persuade my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer to make available additional resources for the recruitment, training and retention of good court clerks. If that does not happen, courts will be closed because they cannot function properly and that will make the policing of London more difficult.

I welcome the good relations between the Police Federation and my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and his officials. I am delighted that my right hon. Friend has shown his willingness to meet officers and the federation in Surbiton soon. I pay tribute to Sir Peter Imbert and his colleagues and all the officers of the Metropolitan police for the excellent job that they do for all Londoners. We are proud of them.

Mr. Tony Banks (Newham, North-West): I start where the hon. Member for Uxbridge (Mr. Shersby) left off, by paying tribute to Sir Peter Imbert. I am the chairman of the London group of Labour Members of Parliament and our useful meetings with the commissioner have shown him to be courteous, co-operative and constructive. However, our complaint is that they are not frequent enough. Although the relationship between Members of Parliament and the commissioner and senior police officers is all that one would expect, unfortunately that cannot be said as one works through the ranks and sees the breakdown of relationships between our constituents and police officers, both on the beat and in the station. I am glad that we have a good relationship with Sir Peter, but I am far more concerned about the relationship between my constituents and other Londoners and the ordinary police officers. Much needs to be done to improve that relationship.

I thank the Home Secretary for his meetings with us. At least he meets us, and, although there is no great meetings of minds, we have useful exchanges.

A number of hon. Members have complained about the absence of their colleagues. I shall certainly be sending a note to my Members in the London group pointing out that I should have expected to see rather more of them. [Interruption.] I cannot be responsible for Conservative Members, who are not here either but, unlike Conservative Members, I do not want to make cheap party-political points. I shall save those for later.

Many hon. Members do not regard our debates on policing London as quite the useful occasions that they ought to be. There is no great exchange of views but, merely a series of speeches. We have had an opener from the Home Secretary, and the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department will do some fielding and no doubt introduce his own bit of party-political venom, as he always does. There will be a lot of heat but not a great deal of light.

That is not the way to achieve accountability or a proper working relationship between Members of Parliament and the Metropolitan police. The Opposition want accountable police authorities set up in London on which elected members—MPs and local councillors—can debate and discuss and set police priorities on behalf of those whom they represent. We do not want them to control the day-to-day operations of the Metropolitan police—that is one of the grotesque caricatures that Conservative Members have drawn of our proposals for the public accountability of the police in London. We want to set police priorities, to serve the community and to allow the community through its elected representatives —with the ballot box as the arbiter—to decide exactly what should be done.

Mr. Hurd: The hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) is contributing to a long-standing debate. He must understand that his proposal—that elected authorities should set priorities for the police—goes well beyond anything in the Police Act 1964 and well beyond the powers available to police authorities outside the capital. The hon. Gentleman seems to advocate entrusting to local authorites—to police authorities or politicians—the setting of priorities, as between public order and the policing of the right to work, for example. That amounts to domination by politicians of the operational priorities of the police, and that is a proposition that we must contest.

Mr. Banks: I know that there will be no agreement between us on that point. The law will be there to be enforced by the police, no matter what the law happens to be. Of course the law will be much more enlightened under a Labour Government than it is under the Conservative Administration, whose divisive, controversial and essentially anti-union laws project the police into political situations. That is one highly contentious matter. Under a Labour Government those divisive laws will not be there to put the police into situations in which they cannot win. I do not like to use this expression, because I am a vegetarian, but at present the police are very much the meat in the sandwich. They do not like that, and no responsible politican would want to impose that burden on them.

There is no reason why we should be frightened of police accountability and the setting of police priorities. The police are there to serve the community and they must be directly answerable to the community. They are not a law unto themselves. One of our great problems—especially with the Metropolitan police—is that they so often seem to be, and act as though they are, a law unto themselves. That is not acceptable to Londoners and it should not be acceptable to Members of Parliament.

The knee-jerk reaction from Conservative Members is that all police officers are wonderful and that there should be no hint of criticism. If Opposition Members say anything even mildly critical, however constructive, we are denounced as being anti-police. That grotesque caricature of our position does not serve the interests of democracy or policing.

I want the police to support the community and to have the support of the community, which is essential. I challenge any Conservative Member who talks about Labour being anti-police, because we are not. We are far more pro-police than Conservative Members are. We would give the police the necessary resources to carry out the policing priorities that we set. We are pro-police because the constituencies we represent in London are largely the areas of the greatest social and economic deprivation. We have far more of the problems on the streets, so we suport the police, but we want to ensure that the police support us.

Mr. John Marshall (Hendon, South): Can the hon. Gentleman tell me why, if his party is so pro-police, several Labour-controlled local authorities do not co-operate with neighbourhood watch schemes and do not encourage the police to talk to school children?

Mr. Banks: If the hon. Gentleman had been here a little earlier he would have heard some of those points made. Since he makes the same tedious point, which is based far more on his imagination than the truth, I must point out to him that the experience around London of the relationships between the boroughs and the local police differs markedly. Some boroughs have good working relationships whereas others do not. However, the political complexion of the boroughs where there are good relationships can be identical with those where there are bad relationships. It is not a matter of Left and Right, but of the way the police operate. The hon. Gentleman always presents the matter as if it were the fault of councillors and as if they were anti-police. He knows little about the relationships between the local authorities and the police in certain areas of London where relationships have regrettably broken down. It takes two to tango. Those democratically elected local authorities have taken decisions on their experiences. I suspect that the hon. Gentleman is speaking, as ever, far more from ignorance than knowledge. I will give way to a knowledgeable Member.

Mr. Cohen: My hon. Friend makes the case for accountability. The Home Secretary has now left the Chamber. As well as being scathing about Labour's policy for improved public accountability for the police, he claimed that Labour wanted to interfere with the operational requirements of the police. Will my hon. Friend confirm that that is no part of Labour policy?

The Home Secretary also implied that Conservatives do not interfere with the operational aspects of policing. Will my hon. Friend cast his mind back to the miners' strike, when we saw the police suddenly adopt a range of powers that they had not used for years, including harassing people collecting for the strikers? Was that not Conservative interference with the operational aspects of policing?

Mr. Banks: My hon. Friend is absolutely right. I made the point earlier that through certain pieces of legislation the Government have put the police into a high profile political position. I might add that some police officers have applied themselves to the task with far more enthusiasm than is seemly. They should beware. If they are seen to be over-enthusiastic in the way they apply partisan and divisive legislation, they will further erode the confidence of Londoners in their ability to act impartially, as they should, to enforce the law. However, police officers would do far better to say on certain areas of law that for them to enforce such a law would only lead to more trouble than letting that law go by. I expect police officers to be able to make such judgments to the Home Secretary, but I suspect that if some did so, the Home Secretary would denounce them as being political.

Mr. Corbyn: Earlier, the Home Secretary said that he had a hands-off approach to the running of the police force and it was a matter for the police to carry out their policing duties. However, as my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) pointed out, during the miners' strike there was the greatest interference in policing and police tactics.

During the printers' dispute at Wapping there were daily statements from Ministers and from Tory Members saying what the police should be doing and encouraging them. Subsequently, Northampton police were asked to undertake an inquiry into the events at Wapping in January 1987, and as a result a number of officers have been suspended. We are still awaiting a statement about what charges will be brought and about the future of the officers involved. If there is to be any confidence in the Metropolitan police, there needs to be a clear statement of exactly what will happen to the officers involved in the disgraceful incidents at Wapping.

Mr. Banks: I agree with my hon. Friend. That case is another example demonstrating that the laws that the police have to enforce are socially divisive. I pay tribute to the Northampton police and Chief Superintendent Wyrko, who did a great deal of work and faced a great deal of obstruction from within the Metropolitan police in conducting his investigations.

I suspect that a cover up is going on and that there will be a whitewash. They are waiting and delaying for long enough so that the rules of evidence would point to there being no fair trial for any officers that are being accused. That is what is happening. We know precisely that that is the way in which the Government are trying to angle it. Where they are able to apply subtle pressures, no doubt they will do so. They cannot afford to allow the police officers who acted so brutally to be brought to account as that would cast doubts on the impartiality of the Metropolitan police and their actions at Wapping. It would throw into sharp relief the unpleasant nature of the legislation that involved the police in the first place and allowed people like Murdoch to sack so many good print workers and hard-working people who made a great deal of profit for that nasty little man.

I have to make progress as a number of Conservative Members still wish to speak. Turning to accountability, if we had a Grand Committee for London or a police committee sitting on a regular basis, we would not have to rely on this inadequate way of debating issues in a non-conclusive fashion. We would be able to talk to police officers and cross-examine the Home Secretary, and that would be far more satisfactory. It would not meet all the points that Labour Members have made about accountability, but it would be far better than the wholly inadequate system that operates at present.

The 9 per cent. increase in sexual crimes and sexual violence is wholly unacceptable. Although the police are handling such matters in a more sensitive manner, I suspect that they are still under-recording the incidence of sexual violence which is predominantly and overwhelmingly against women.

Crime on the Underground is getting worse. It is linked to lack of investment by the Department of Transport and by London Regional Transport in the Underground and bus services, as anyone who travels regularly around London will know.

Life in London today is more brutal and violent than it has been for many years. The social values of our society give the lead to that increasing brutality. I made the same point last Friday on the subject of litter, as these issues are linked. When the Government's philosophy is largely predicated on personal greed and selfishness, there must be a causal link between that philosophy and increasing crime, violence and brutality in our society. I blame Tory philosophy for the increasing incidence of violence in London. Public property is treated with contempt by the Conservative Government, who believe that private property is sacred but public property can be treated with contempt and abused. It is sold off or allowed to run down. That attitude spreads its disturbing way through society like an infection. People do not regard public property as theirs, because they are not encouraged to do so. They are taught by the Government, and particularly by the Prime Minister, that what is public is not good and what is private is sacred. The sense of community in London, as elsewhere, has been sorely damaged by the economic and social policies of this unpleasant and divisive Government.

The hon. Member for Uxbridge said that he did not welcome the idea of private roads and police forces, but that is inevitably the way that we will go. He might not like the idea, but I assure him that many Conservative Members do like the idea of private roads that can be shut off. Of course, those roads will be in the nicest areas and those in which the wealthiest people can afford private security guards. That is what is happening in the United States now. If hon. Members want to see what it will be like in this country in 10 years' time I suggest that they visit the United States.

The Opposition want proper policing and more resources for the police, but we want to ensure that the priorities of the police accord with the priorities of the communities that we serve. That is why, when we talk about setting police priorities, we do not mean interference with their day-to-day operational running; we mean "These are the things that you must do, but, when we will the ends, we must then will the means." My hon. Friend the Member for Huddersfield (Mr. Sheerman) will be there in the Home Office as a Minister, so he will agree that a Labour Government would ensure that the police in London have the necessary resources to meet our demands on them on behalf of the people whom we represent.

I hope that the Minister will say something about the alarming growth in civil damages paid out by the Metropolitan police in cases where police officers have been accused of ill discipline or malpractice, and the police decide to pay out rather than have the matter go to court. That strikes me as being sinister. I know that the Minister is a lawyer and, no doubt, he will tell me that the rules of evidence in civil cases are far less demanding than those in criminal cases. That may be so, but the Metropolitan police would hardly hand out hundreds of thousands of pounds to those who make complaints against the police if senior police officers and the authorities concerned did not believe that there was more than a substance of truth in the complaint.

We want to know why the amount paid in civil damages has risen so much in recent years. We also want to know what happens to the police officers after those damages are paid. It is outrageous that London ratepayers have had to shell out hundreds of thousands of pounds in civil damages for complaints against police officers, but in the end those police officers are left serving on the patches from where the complaints originated. It undermines confidence in the police to know that there is a growing number of bent coppers in the force. That is not something that one says with any great enthusiasm or pleasure, because if the confidence between the police and the community is eroded, that will damage all of us. If bent coppers are allowed to remain in the force, good policemen will also be damaged.

I would ask the Minister to comment on the Metropolitan police and the poll tax. Next year the poll tax will be introduced, but all the Home Office and the Metropolitan police receiver have said is that a set amount of the poll tax will go to the Metropolitan police. Local authorities have asked for full estimates to enable them to plan ahead, but they have not yet been given them. There could be two reasons for that. The first is that Whitehall and the police receiver have not yet got their act together and worked out the necessary sums. The second is that they might have worked out their sums, but they are keeping the figures quiet. The Government are far too frightened to release them, because of the increased costs that they will clearly impose on the London boroughs.

My borough has estimated that Newham will find that its contribution will rise from £6·4 million to more than £10 million, or perhaps as much as £12 million, for its contribution to the Metropolitan police. We demand the right to know those figures today.

I have already said that Newham has the highest police recorded level of racial attacks in London. I deeply regret to say that one in eight London incidents occur in Newham. The problem with racial attacks, as with sexual offences, is non-reporting. We estimate that, in Newham, only one in 20 incidents are reported to the police. In that context it is important to consider the quality of the police response. From 1985 to 1988 arrest rates in Newham have fallen by half and that clearly suggests why people under-report racial harassment incidents. In 1985 an arrest took place once in every eight police-reported incidents; in 1988 it had fallen to one in every 17.

I acknowledge and pay tribute to the improvements that have been made. In north Plaistow we have the country's only action project, but more resources should be made available to the police in Newham so that they can deal with this worrying and disturbing increase in racial harassment.

Mr. Cohen: Is my hon. Friend aware that two years ago the police undertook a pilot project in Redbridge? It lasted for six weeks and the police issued lots of extremely good leaflets about racial attacks and the need to report them. The police had a good response and the pilot project was successful. The police showed themselves to be active in the fight against racial attacks. Does my hon. Friend have any idea why that pilot project was not put into action on a permanent basis in the East End and in other areas where racial attacks are a serious problem?

Mr. Banks: Were I Home Secretary I might be able to answer that question, but the Minister heard it and I hope that he will respond to it later.

We need a greater commitment from the Government through action and resources rather than through words. More resources would deal with the upsurge in racial harassment in the East End.

The safer cities initiative, which is part of the action for cities programme, is aimed at crime prevention. My council applied to be one of the areas to take part in that initiative, but it recently learnt that it has not been chosen. Newham has a higher than average crime rate, one of the largest ethnic minority populations in the country and the highest incidence of racial harassment in the country. My council has a proven track record of working with the police, the Home Office and local groups to eliminate crime. Why was my council bounced? Why was it not included in the safer cities project? My council could not have been rejected because it does not work closely with the police and the community. I have already described the economic and social deprivation of my borough and the crime level. What do we need to do to prove that we have a right to get those additional resources through the safer cities initiative?

This debate has at least enabled us to raise some interesting points, but, frankly, it is not satisfactory. The Metropolitan police should be far more accountable and, if that accountability is to be through the Home Secretary alone, it is up to us here to improve the way in which it operates. A police committee in the House would not truly satisfy us, because we want proper police committees in London along the lines that I have described. I would settle for a police committee of the House, however, as the sparse attendance on both sides of the House suggests not the House's satisfaction with the Metropolitan police and the annual report, but our dissatisfaction with the wholly inadequate way in which Parliament attempts to exercise some form of accountability, through the Home Secretary, for the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Ivor Stanbrook (Orpington): The Home Secretary was wise not to display any complacency when he talked about the crime statistics. During the past two years the overall figures may have decreased, but violent offences are still increasing—by 19 per cent. this year, I believe. Every Londoner knows that we are nowhere near getting crime and lawlessness under control. The situation is absolutely appalling. The rate of street crime, such as stealing and breaking into vehicles, is terrifying in some parts of London. Burglary is still rampant and, in addition to crimes of violence, drug misuse and drug-related crime are increasing. We are about to suffer an appalling epidemic of drug misuse due to the consumption of crack. Police resources are inadequate to deal with the problem, which will take up much police time and resources to the detriment of their other work. For London alone, we can do much more by providing more resources and more policemen on the streets. Given the scale of crime, lawlessness and the need for enforcement of law and order and public order in London, we must have more than the current 28,000 police officers. We need at least 38,000, and perhaps 48,000, police officers to look after us in London.

The current organisation of police in London could be improved. I do not understand why so many minor police forces within the Metropolitan police area are not under the operational control of the commissioner. Why should there be a separate police force for the Underground? We are all aware that it is a source of crime. To the detriment of the Metropolitan police, the Home Secretary has arranged extra officers for London Transport police. We know that the scale and fear of crime are increasing on the Underground, and it is a public disgrace that the problem is as bad as it is. There should be sufficient officers to provide at least one policeman for each Underground station in London. Why on earth are London Transport police so undermanned, and why on earth does the commissioner not have operational control? Surely the commissioner is in the best position to react tactically to day-to-day demands. Why are the Royal Parks police not under the control of the commissioner? We must consider these problems and give the commissioner greater operational control, and preferably structural control.

As a large number of hon. Members have said, Londoners are fortunate to have a police force of such quality, efficiency and integrity. The Metropolitan police are extremely well led and a high proportion of their senior ranks are well-motivated officers who are dedicated to public service. It is little wonder that they provide recruits to senior posts in provincial forces. No matter how many police officers we recruit, however, and no matter the size of the force in London, we can touch only the surface of the social malaise. The lack of respect for other people, for public or private property and for authority lies at the root of our problems. If only we could change attitudes by increasing the number of police officers in London, and if only we could instill a sense of esteem among young people who misuse drugs.

Perhaps it is not surprising that attitudes are determined not by the police or the law but by people in authority and influence, who should and could set a better example. It is no wonder that poorer people imitate people in the City, who so easily, and with so little respect for others, acquire fortunes in an afternoon and so easily buy and sell firms without regard for their employees. When the Church spends so much of its time on its own domestic problems, such as the ordination of women, and when priests use their pulpits as political platforms, it is no wonder that so many people are confused about their moral duties.

The local environment is dirty and the streets in many London boroughs are strewn with rubbish. Anyone who, like me, has a constituency in south-east London and has to drive through Peckham and Lewisham is appalled by the rubbish that lies on the streets all the time, not just after a market. It must be infinitely depressing to live in such an environment.

Mr. Sheerman: I have enjoyed listening to many of the hon. Gentleman's remarks, and I agree with some. I hope that he is not being too politically partisan. When I am in London I live in the City and the squalor in some parts is appalling. During the Euro-elections, I spent some time in the Ilford area. I agree that there is appalling rubbish, litter and urban decay. I hope that the hon. Gentleman accepts that this is a universal problem and not one based on the political complexion of the area through which he drives.

Mr. Stanbrook: I am sorry that the hon. Gentleman has introduced the element of politican partisanship into the debate. I am not talking about political parties, nor am I talking about any party that is in control in a particular area. There are London boroughs that neglect the public collection of refuse and allow their streets to be filthy. They may be controlled by different political parties. I know of areas in Westminster that suffer from this disease. I mentioned the route from central London to south-east London because that happens to be the one I take to my constituency. One passes through two boroughs. Although they spend money on things that I do not regard as essential services, they are content to allow their citizens to live, work and travel in squalor. It is a comparatively easy, efficient and cheap exercise to keep the rubbish off their streets. Enforcement of the law in this respect is important in giving assistance to the police.

The police alone should not be responsible for enforcement of the law. They need the backing of the public and of councils. It has been said that some councils —I shall not say which political party dominates them —refuse to give police officers permission to enter schools to speak to children. It is desirable for the police to visit schools. Every school should have a police officer, preferably the local home beat officer, who drops in from time to time to take part in school activities and have chats with the children. Those authorities that refuse permission should be ashamed of themselves for not co-operating with the efforts of the police to produce a law-abiding society.

There should also be an improvement in the efforts of individuals. It should be a duty, especially for wealthy and powerful individuals, to set an example. It is disgraceful that Sir Terence Conran, a wealthy, apparently proud and arrogant man, has recently announced that his Storehouse group of firms will open on Sundays, in contravention of the Shops Act 1950. Not everyone agrees with that legislation—there have been debates in the Chamber and elsewhere about how we should amend the law—but it nevertheless remains the law. If Sir Terence Conran arranges for his shops to open, thereby deliberately setting out to break the law, not only is he setting a bad example to young people and other people who have less power and wealth than he has, but he deserves to be sent to prison until he learns to respect the law. It is disgraceful that Sir Terence Conran or anyone else, through the firms that they control, should contravene the law and encourage others to do so. How on earth can they expect humble people to respect the law and not commit petty offences when the rich and the powerful get away with it scot free?

We need more policemen in London and we need more resources. The present allocation is not adequate. Much more must be done if Londoners are to be reassured and provided with the regime of law and order that the capital deserves. Above all, we need more discipline in society, more respect for the law and more determination on the part of politicians like us and other responsible citizens to enforce the law. Only then and by giving the police the moral backing that they deserve shall we begin to redress the balance.

1.35 pm

Mr. Harry Cohen (Leyton): On 16 February last year the Home Secretary, in a Written Answer gave the figure for the net revenue expenditure of the Metropolitan police in 1988-89 as £1,000,004,967. For the first time, the expenditure exceeded £1 billion. Obviously, the figure will have increased substantially this year. A great deal of that burden is placed on local authorities. Their ratepayers—and in future their poll tax payers—will have to fund that sum, but they have no democratic say. I shall not repeat the detailed arguments made by my colleagues today. However, there should be a democratic, London-wide police authority. The Home Secretary cannot be accountable, as he is not even a London Member of Parliament.

This is an unsatisfactory forum in which to debate the various issues relating to police and policing in London. Speeches in this debate must include various different issues. The hon. Member for Uxbridge (Mr. Shersby), who spoke as the paid representative of the Police Federation, does not have sole claim to speak on behalf of police interests or for the protection of the police.

I want to raise a point that the hon. Member for Uxbridge did not mention. We must consider prisoners and people in police cells who might be suffering from AIDS or HIV. That is a serious problems for the police. At the moment, the police have responsibilities, but those are of a general nature. The police general orders refer to people who require medical assistance and it sets out the responsibilities and duties of police to obtain medical treatment for people brought into police stations and those already detained. Often it may not be apparent that a prisoner is suffering from an illness. Some prisoners may try to conceal their illness or they may not be aware of their condition.

Often prisoners are admitted to the Brixton prison medical wing so that extremely sick prisoners are not detained for long periods in police or court cells. However, HIV sufferers are often not considered to be extremely urgent cases. There is insufficient accommodation in prison medical wings, and prisoners are often detained in police cells, which is a problem for local police forces.

To minimise risks to police officers, there should be a high standard of hygiene in cells. According to a report that was published this week, many problems in police stations clearly reflect the lack of hygiene. The Home Secretary should institute a major programme to improve the hygiene of police cells and to give proper advice to police officers. In spite of the precautions that are taken, each year many police officers seek medical advice after contact with infected prisoners who have bitten or scratched them or pricked them with needles. There appears to be a lack of action on the part of the Home Office to produce clear regulations on treatment for AIDS prisoners and to issue guidelines to the police to establish effective training for officers and assistance for officers who contract AIDS. That important issue has not been discussed in the debate. The Home Office is also ignoring its own health officers' advice on taking effective action to stop the spread of AIDS in prisons. The same criticism applies to police cells. Police officers are at risk, and the Government are responsible.

The Police Federation has expressed concern about burglaries. That matter was not referred to by the hon. Member for Uxbridge, who is the Police Federation's representative. A recent report in "The Job" the Metropolitan police newspaper, pointed out that the police are upset about the Government's policy on burglary cases. The Director of Public Prosecutions is reluctant to prosecute burglary cases, even when the intruder's fingerprints are discovered, saying that they are not sufficient evidence. I agree that it would be difficult to rely on the fingerprints of a member of the family or a friend who visits regularly, but the fingerprints of an intruder into a burgled home are clear evidence and should be used in court. The DPP should not make that claim about insufficient evidence as a reason why a burglary case is not taken to court. I have written a strong letter to the Attorney-General backing the Police Federation on this important matter and I hope to see some strong action by the Government.

Ms. Diane Abbott (Hackney, North and Stoke Newington): Will my hon. Friend join with me in congratulating our hon. Friend the Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on his occupation of the Opposition Front Bench and hope that his tenure there will be long and happy?

In the run-up to the Notting Hill carnival, will my hon. Friend the Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) join with me in hoping that we have a crime-free, constructively policed carnival? Nobody wants crime and disorder at the carnival. The police have a role to play. Will my hon. Friend join with me in congratulating Mr. Frank Critchlow of the Mangrove association, who was recently acquitted of several charges? I hope that the Metropolitan police are as committed as Opposition Members are to keeping the Notting Hill carnival on the streets as a crime-free, happy and community-based event.

Mr. Cohen: I echo every one of my hon. Friend's words. The Notting Hill carnival is a great spectacle for Londoners. I also want it to continue to be successful and crime-free. I echo also my hon. Friend's comments about my hon. Friend the Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn). It was a timely intervention.

I shall mention racial harassment, although I do not wish to make a detailed speech on it. The House will know that I introduced the first and only Bill relating to racial harassment—my Racial Harassment Bill. The majority of measures in that Bill must be implemented if we are effectively to tackle racial harassment. However, I shall leave my speech on that for another day. The Government should have a debate on that subject, because they have published their own proposals on it.

In this debate we should have answers from the Home Secretary about the debacle involving Saatchi and Saatchi and the £35,000 worth of leaflets which went down the drain. What steps have ben taken to recoup that public money and, even more important, to re-publish the leaflets and have them properly distributed? Perhaps local authorities should be invited to tender for distribution of the leaflets, because they could obviously do a better job than a private company such as Saatchi and Saatchi.

There is a tendency for police action against racial harassment to slip down the list of priorities. The Home Office must bring legislation before the House to make racial attacks and harassment specific criminal offences. Until they do so, the ability of the police to take action is hampered.

I should like an answer from the Home Secretary about the recruitment procedure of the police force and whether the ethnic minority receives equal treatment. An article in The Independent on 24 April stated:

"The Home Office has refused to alter a police entrance test which is known to discriminate against blacks. 70 per cent. of white applicants in London sitting the Police Initial Recruitment Test are successful, but the ethnic minority applicants have only a 40 per cent. pass rate. The principal employment officer of the Commission for Racial Equality says the test relies on the literary ability of candidates and requires a knowledge of English phraseology which is not so understandable to those who have not been fully educated in this country.

A Home Office spokesman, admitting that the test is biased, said it would cost £170,000 to replace it but that the money wasn't available this year."

We are talking about a budget of well over £1 billion, but the Home Office will not get rid of the test and institute a fairer one because it would cost £170,000. Clearly, the Home Office does not want equality in recruitment practices if it cannot come up with such a paltry sum. I want an answer on that point.

I raised with the Home Office the matter, of the lay visitors scheme. Waltham Forest lay visitors' panel made a number of points in its recent report which I forwarded to the Home Secretary. It talked about conditions in police stations, and said that all stations had only one wash basin for detainees. It is vital to improve hygiene standards. The panel also talked about the lack of privacy, particularly for the occasional female detainee, and hoped that the Home Office would take steps to give such prisoners the facilities to wash privately.

The panel said that Leyton police station facilities were inadequate for longer stay prisoners. Leyton divisional chief superintendent sought approval from the Home Office for the provision of a shower which, in the circumstances, should have been given immediately. It also said that there were insufficient grounds and that steps should be taken to secure an area of the station grounds so that prisoners could take outside exercise. The panel also talked about the absence of in-house food and drink facilities, particularly when people were detained in cells after 9 pm.

The response by the Home Office when I raised these points about exercise and washing facilities was:

"The Prison Service have made funds available to provide the most essential facilities, such as access to toilet and washing facilities, at stations holding Home Office prisoners. However, only limited funds are available and have to be used where the need is greatest."

Those limited funds amount to £50,000 per year, which is a pittance given the increasing need for hygiene in prison cells. The Home Office Minister must increase that amount enormously and immediately——

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Douglas Hogg): The hon. Gentleman has been talking about prisoners in police cells. He will be pleased to know that there were only 26 such prisoners in the Metropolitan area yesterday.

Mr. Cohen: I am pleased to know that, but we are used to that sort of information on the day before a police debate in the House. At other times the figure shoots up to well over 200. Nevertheless, I welcome the information and hope that there will be only 26 a day, a week and a year after the police debate—but somehow I doubt it.

The lay visitors also mention duty solicitors' attendance. Many people in cells do not get the chance to speak to a duty solicitor, and sometimes solicitors will deal with cases only over the telephone, which is unsatisfactory. The Home Office view is:

"the Legal Aid Office would be interested to know of any instances".

That is not good enough. The lay visitors panel has clearly identified this problem and the Home Office should tackle it.

Lay visitors are not informed of the outcome of complaints against police officers. That must be wrong, as they can then do nothing to rectify the problems. I hope that they will be notified of the outcome of such investigations in future.

The lay visitors complain about interpreting services for alleged illegal immigrants detained in cells. The visitors do not have interpreters and there is no legal requirement for the services of lay visitors to be extended to detainees of this sort. The Home Office response to this has been less than adequate—from a budget of £1 billion it will not provide the money for interpreters for lay visitors.

The debate so far has been largely devoid of statistics, which the House needs. The Prime Minister came to power pledged to restore law and order as a fact and as a concept, but her failure has been startling. Crime has undermined the standard of living of affluent Londoners. Overall, crime in London increased by 29 per cent. between 1979 and 1988 and violent offences rose by two thirds in the same period. Robberies almost trebled. There were 1,196 notified drug addicts in the capital in 1978; last year there were 3,230, and we know that the true number is between five and 10 times greater.

I want to record reported notifiable offences in London. In 1979 there were 16,194 violent offences, and in 1988 there were 27,215—an increase of 68 per cent. In 1979, 2,751 sexual offences were notified and in 1988, 4,071—an increase of 48 per cent. The figure for burglaries went up from 119,366 to 143,721—an increase of 20 per cent. Furthermore, in my constituency the clear-up rate for burglary has fallen to about 10 per cent. and the figure across London is similar. The figure for robberies went up from 6,275 to 17,929—an increase of 186 per cent. The figure for theft went up from 321,047 to 375,602—an increase of 17 per cent. The figure for fraud and forgery went up from 26,361 to 30,279—an increase of 15 per cent. The figure for criminal damage went up from 71,651 to 121,505—an increase of 70 per cent. The figure for other offences increased from 542 to 5,702—an increase of 952 per cent.

In total, the number of notifiable crimes went up from 564,187 in 1979 to 726,024 in 1988—an increase of 29 per cent. So much for restoring law and order as a fact and as a concept. The Government have a miserable criminal record, and we should get rid of them so that we can tackle crime in London and elsewhere.

1.56 pm

Mr. Jeremy Hanley (Richmond and Barnes): The hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) criticised Conservative Members because only a few of us are present, although we well outnumber the Labour Members who are present. One reason for absences is that if Labour Members make speeches of 41, 26, 24 and 25 minutes, Conservative Members do not get a chance to contribute. I hope that in future speeches will be shorter and more to the point.

Mr. Deputy Speaker (Mr. Harold Walker): Order. Hon. Members from both sides of the House have made lengthy speeches.

Mr. Hanley: Thank you for pointing that out, Mr. Deputy Speaker. The point is that speeches from both sides of the House have been lengthy. I hope that in future debates all hon. Members will have an opportunity to take part.

Like all other hon. Members who have spoken, I represent a London constituency, and my constituents look to the Metropolitan police for their protection. Apart from two isolated cases in the past year, the relationship between my constituents and the police has been happy. There can hardly be any closer or more harmonious relationship in a London borough than that in Richmond upon Thames, with regular co-operation on crime prevention and safety for the elderly, the education of children, the maintenance of traffic control and support, financial and spiritual, to the victims of crime.

I was pleased to work with my hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Mr. Wheeler) on the Select Committee on Home Affairs, which looked into the way in which society deals with the victims of crime. The victim support scheme movement largely grew from that. I pay great tribute to the victim support scheme in Richmond, which gave evidence to the Committee, and I thank my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary for his support of such schemes through the Home Office.

My knowledge of the Metropolitan police began when I was under four. I remember seeing my father, Jimmy Hanley, in a police uniform one evening. This was not because he had signed up but because he was making a well-known film, "The Blue Lamp", with the late Jack Warner, who was playing PC Dixon. Only twice in our history has somebody risen from the grave, and one of them was Jack Warner. He came back from the dead and was even promoted to sergeant in the television programme.

Many people ridicule the cosy, "Evening, all" attitude that the police were meant to have in those days, but that attitude showed how people trusted, liked and knew the local policeman and it is popular still today. Many people would like us to return to the times when the local bobby on the beat was a normal part of everyday life.

I am pleased to note that Sir Peter Imbert's excellent report for this year shows that street duty increased by 9 per cent. in 1988. That happened largely in response to public demand. Street duty enables communities to see the police and to see that, far from being remote, they are friendly individuals whose sole purpose is to protect their local community. Street duty is good for the police and good for the public, and I hope that the increase will be repeated in years ahead. The courtesy, kindness and good humour of the local bobby on the beat are something that we want to see much more in future. We should get the police out of the Panda cars, which resemble armoured cars shooting through the streets of Londonderry. That approach may be necessary in some contexts, but in London the human relationships that go with local beat police are most important, especially in encouraging good race relations.

It cannot be a complete coincidence that burglaries have fallen by 5 per cent. this year and the clear-up rate for residential burglaries has risen by 12 per cent. Even street robbery is down by 10 per cent. The presence of beat police must be partly responsible for that figure, with co-operation by local residents—which is further encouraged by good relationships with the police—also playing its part.

I fully accept what my hon. Friend the Member for Beckenham (Sir P. Goodhart) said about parking, and I agree with the comments of my hon. Friend the Member for Uxbridge (Mr. Shersby). We need more wardens to police the streets of outer London and if they could keep a share of their resources, they would have a further incentive and people would be more readily deterred from parking in antisocial and dangerous places in the streets of outer London.

Sir Peter said in his report that there hardly has to be an incident in Amritsar or Teheran or an election in El Salvador for thousands of people to take to the streets of London. Freedom of speech and the right to protest are part of our tradition, but demonstrations clog traffic and threaten—sometimes violently—innocent citizens going about their business. They can cause great disturbance and damage and they are extremely costly. I would ask those considering demonstrations to exercise self-control and to remember that their demonstration is likely to have little effect. I also ask for self-control from the media, which often attract attention to such events and make them grow in size.

In the previous Parliament I served on the Select Committee on Home Affairs and its race relations and immigration sub-committee. I attended many police courses and visited police stations to see how the police try to teach policemen at all levels awareness of the different races and cultures in our community. I addressed a conference in Manchester attended by senior police officers and I was most impressed by the care that they were taking in this matter. The racial minorities must understand what their civil rights are. It does not help matters if they believe that the police are automatically against them. Often, it is not so much the police who are responsible but the fact that the racial minorities have not been trained, as they should be, to realise what their civil and criminal rights are, or the duties of the police and the restrictions on them in dealing with civil matters. We should all help to inform the racial minorities of their rights. The police are now recognising their responsibilities in this regard, and the dramatic increase in the clear-up rate for racial crimes shows their determination.

I thoroughly agree with my hon. Friend the Member for Orpington (Mr. Stanbrook) about the London Transport police. Their independence of the Metropolitan police is an anachronism. Time dictates that I cannot expand on this matter, although I feel very strongly about it.

I pay tribute to the 1,143 specials in London, who give up much of their time. Last year, they underwent nearly 50,000 hours of training and put in nearly 250,000 hours of duty, with good humour and patience. I hope that the force will grow and that younger people will join as special cadets.

The police are being most unfairly criticised for deaths following car chases. No policeman in a car chases another car merely for fun or because the police started the chase. The chase starts because somebody has stolen a car or is suspected of having committed a criminal act. The public must support the police, who are properly trained and can avoid accidents better than the person who is trying to sprint ahead in the car in front. We should properly criticise those who cause the car chases and support the police in their efforts to protect us from individuals who have committed crimes.

We should all support the police a great deal more. In the past year, there were 5,294 complaints against the Metropolitan police, which is a reduction of 8 per cent.

[Mr. Hanley]

Some might think that appreciation was not readily expressed, but there were 6,278 letters of appreciation last year, an increase of 11 per cent. I am pleased that that has occurred under the stewardship of Sir Peter Imbert, to whom I could not pay greater tribute. I hope that we shall see continued good progress in the Metropolitan police and a continued excellent relationship with the people of London.

2.5 pm

Mr. Sheerman: By leave of the House, I shall have a second bite of the cherry and reflect quickly on the debate. We have had an interesting and constructive debate. Labour Members have framed their remarks in a constructive spirit. However frustrating, this is our one opportunity to call the Home Secretary to account in his role as the person responsible for the Metropolitan police. As many of my hon. Friends have said, it is a weak weapon of scrutiny. When we have a Labour Government after the next election, we shall move to a properly democratically accountable police authority for London.

The Home Secretary trailed many red herrings today. I remind him that we do not propose a body that would interfere with the day-to-day operational aspects of police work, as he knows well. We have made some strong suggestions about what we want to see happen and there have been some positive comments from Members of various parties. Looking to the future, I see two problems that have been expressed today only in a minor voice; I am surprised that hon. Members have not stressed those problems more.

First, there should be more emphasis on dealing with the young. I know that I tend to go on about this, but we must achieve the right responses to young offenders, not only in terms of catching them, although that is part of the process, but in deterring them in the first place and in giving them creative alternatives, which largely do not seem to exist in London at present.

The second issue that will dominate police work in the next few years, to which we shall come back more strongly this year and next, is the vulnerability of women in London and every other urban centre. Although we agree that the burglary figures and those for other crimes against property look a bit better than they did for the previous year, the figures for crimes of violence, crimes of violence against women and sexual violence against women are horrific. As my hon. Friend the Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) said, there has been a 9 per cent. increase in the most recent year. It is a disgrace that 50 per cent. of women in this city believe that they should not go out after dark. That comment is not based on only one piece of evidence. One piece of evidence after another shows that women feel unsafe walking down badly lit streets, and on London buses and the Underground at night. If women are afraid to go about their legitimate business to such an extent, the Metropolitan police, with the Government's backing, must protect women in a way that they do not protect them at present.

We have not talked much about the causes of crime, because we have tried not to be too party political today, but I must conclude by saying that policing is difficult enough in a society with a strong community that backs the police and in which people treat society as a priority. However, in a selfish, individualistic society which has had the imprint of the Prime Minister for several years—it is a fact that the Prime Minister admires such a society—there is a breakdown in community feeling. In a society from which community spirit has disappeared, the role of the police and their job become impossible.

If we are to make the Met work as we want it to work—it is a good police force and we are trying to make it better—it will need the backing of the community. We believe that that must be a democratic relationship, but it must also be the basis for co-operation and exchange.

2.10 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mr. Douglas Hogg): We have had an interesting and important debate, the tone of which suggests that there is an ever-increasing recognition among hon. Members and people outside the House that the Metropolitan police are becoming yet more effective in carrying out their policing functions within the capital. That is a correct analysis. My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has mentioned some of the key crime figures. They bear repeating because they demonstrate the reasons for modest optimism.

The commissioner's report for 1988 shows that overall crime figures fell by about 2 per cent. and the figures for the 12 months ending March this year show an overall fall of 4 per cent. In a two-year period there has been a welcome reduction in recorded crime of 6 per cent. The reductions have been most acute in burglary. In the 12 months ending March this year there has been a fall of nearly 6 per cent., or 25,000, in recorded cases of burglary. I must inform the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) that there has been a significant improvement in the clear-up rate of burglaries. The improvement in the Metropolitan police area was 7 per cent. Those reductions in the volume of committed crime have the effect of freeing officers for more operational time on the streets.

I accept that the crime statistics reflect the anxiety about violent crime. However, there are signs of modest encouragement. For example, the number of homicides fell by 46—23 per cent.—and figures for street robbery in the 12 months to the end of March this year show a 3 per cent. reduction. There are also encouraging improvements in clear-up rates. In 1988 the clear-up rate for robbery rose by 7 per cent. and for violence against the person the clear-up rate rose by 27 per cent. Those are significant improvements which are due to a variety of factors. They arise from better deployment of resources, more effective police practices and, undoubtedly, crime prevention—to which I attach very high importance—and from a substantial improvement in the resources dedicated to police work in London as a result of Government policy. We should recognise that since 1979 expenditure in the Metropolitan police area has risen by almost 60 per cent. in real terms.

The Metropolitan force is now at its record strength. Its strength is up by 5,400 and the establishment has improved by 1,826. The House will know that in April my right hon. Friend approved a further 300 police officers and 150 civilians, together with a further 100 civilians, the purpose of whom was to speed up the process of civilianisation. For Opposition Members—most notably the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks)—to pretend that a Labour Government would have increased the resources over and above that which the Conservative Government have provided is frankly ludicrous. The truth is that they probably would have cut the resources. In no sense would they have matched the increase that our good management has allowed.

The hon. Member for Newham, North-West mentioned the Underground, so I shall make a specific reference to it.

Mr. Hanley: Is it also true that when the Labour Government left office the Metropolitan police was 4,000 under strength?

Ms. Abbott: Crime was falling then.

Mr. Hogg: My hon. Friend has made an extremely important point. Crime was rising fast, and the most striking thing about 1979 was the wholesale demoralisation of the police force. Most notable was the fact that experienced police officers, especially around sergeant level, were leaving in droves, partly because they were grossly underpaid and partly because they did not like seeing, for example, Labour Cabinet Ministers standing on picket lines supporting those who rioted and abused the police force. Let us make that entirely plain, because I am now coming to the question of accountability.

Mr. Corbyn: What riots?

Mr. Hogg: The idea that the Labour party has changed its spots on this matter is a complete illusion.

Mr. Corbyn: What riots?

Mr. Hogg: Grunwick was a riot.

Mr. Corbyn: Will the hon. Gentleman give way?

Mr. Hogg: I am not proposing to give way.

The sight of Labour Cabinet Ministers standing on picket lines is profoundly unsatisfactory. That happened not only at Grunwick. We also saw the support of the Labour Front Bench on the miners' picket lines. That is the kind of party with which we are dealing.

Mr. Corbyn: Will the hon. Gentleman give way?

Mr. Hogg: No, I will not give way.

Hon. Members will appreciate why I approach this matter with a degree of scepticism.

Mr. Corbyn: Will the Minister give way?

Mr. Hogg: No, I will not give way to the hon. Gentleman. I should have thought that I had made that entirely plain—even by his standards.

Mr. Corbyn: Will the Minister give way?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order.

Mr. Hogg: I will return to the question of accountability.

Mr. Corbyn: On a point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker. Is it in order for the Minister to describe Labour Cabinet Ministers in the last Government as being involved in a riot when he knows that that is not true? He has not stated which picket line they were on or admitted that none was arrested or charged with any offence. Is it in order for the Minister to mislead the House about Labour Cabinet Ministers?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have heard much that is highly provocative, but not yet out of order.

Mr. Hogg: Or for that matter, Mr. Deputy Speaker, inaccurate.

Mr. Corbyn: On a point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker. The Minister has claimed that what he said was not inaccurate. In that case, he must state which Cabinet Ministers, which picket line, when, who was arrested and with what offence they were charged—otherwise, he is impugning the honour of former and current Members of the House.

Mr. Hogg: The hon. Gentleman is showing very partial recollection of the events. If he cannot recall what happened on the Grunwick picket lines he is guilty of extraordinary self-deception.

Mr. Corbyn: I was there.

Mr. Hogg: That has been a feature of——

Hon. Members: He was there.

Mr. Hogg: I had forgotten that or I did not know that.

Mr. Corbyn: Further to my earlier point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker. In replying, the Minister has impugned the honour of Members of the House concerning events that happened during the lifetime of the last Labour Government. He has clearly claimed that Labour Cabinet Ministers were on a picket line and were arrested. Unless he can substantiate——

Hon. Members: Involved in a riot.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order.

Mr. Corbyn: I beg your pardon, Mr. Deputy Speaker. They were involved in a riot. I suggest that he is impugning the honour of former Cabinet Ministers and he is not prepared to substantiate his allegation. As he is not prepared to substantiate it, because he knows it not to be true, I suggest that he be invited to withdraw his comments.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: General criticisms made by one side of the House about the other are usual in here, and while discourteous and distasteful, they are not out of order. It is when hon. Members identify other particular hon. Members and reflect on their honour and integrity that it becomes a matter for the Chair. I do not believe that we have quite reached that point.

Mr. Sheerman: On a point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker. We were having a constructive debate until the junior Minister got to his feet and he has reduced it to his customary level. With respect, Mr. Deputy Speaker, the Minister said that Privy Councillors were involved in a riot and he specifically mentioned one incident and one strike. He must withdraw——

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I judge what must be withdrawn——

Mr. Hogg rose——

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. So far, the Minister has not identified the matter. In referring to a particular situation and to Privy Councillors he has not gone so far as to identify a particular individual Member of the House. When he does so, I shall feel an obligation to reproach him.

Mr. Sheerman: Further to that point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker. Everyone knows that only five Ministers were involved.

Mr. Hogg: After that interesting exchange, during which Opposition Members did not cover themselves with credit, I shall proceed to the question of accountability.

Mr. Corbyn: On a point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker. This is a serious matter. The Minister has alleged that Cabinet Ministers of the Labour Government were involved in a riot. One of his hon. Friends was overheard to say that it was at Grunwick. The Minister clearly made that statement, but he cannot substantiate it because he knows it not to be true. Surely he must withdraw his remarks. Otherwise, if he is allowed to make statements impugning the integrity of——

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I thought that I had made a clear statement on this matter. I hope that the hon. Gentleman will not persist, as I have ruled on this matter. I have already said that until the Minister identifies a particular Member of the House and reflects adversely on that Member's honour and integrity, then, no matter how discourteous, he is not out of order.

Mr. Cohen: Further to that point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker. I invite the Minister to name the specific hon. Members involved or to withdraw his remarks.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I rather hope that we can get away from this matter, which is leading us in the direction of disorder. The hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) seems intent on going down a different road. I would not advise him or the House to go in that direction. I hope that we can now get on.

Mr. Hogg: I must tell the House that I find the approach of the Labour party on the question of accountability profoundly unattractive. First, we must look at what is in place. The commissioner is accountable to my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary, who is the police authority. My right hon. Friend is accountable to Parliament. The commissioner submits his statutory statement to the Home Secretary for approval. The annual report containing a full statement of the year's activities is also submitted to the Home Secretary, who presents it to Parliament. We have the annual parliamentary debate, now taking place. Citizens living in the Metropolitan police districts can question Ministers in Parliament or through correspondence. The Metropolitan police fund, annual accounts and estimates are presented to Parliament as a White Paper. Metropolitan police expenditure is scrutinised by the Public Accounts Committee and their affairs may be scrutinised by the Home Affairs Select Committee.

What I have described represents a high measure of specific control. The question is whether one should go further than that. A number of hon. Members have suggested that there should be a police authority separate from that which we have been discussing. I do not commend that course of action to the House. The question that must be asked is what responsibility the Labour party is seeking to give that police authority, but we have heard a variety of explanations.

We are told that that police authority would set the order of priority. I am not sure what that means, but, so far as I understand it to mean anything, it means telling police officers what to do. I am pleased to see that the hon. Member for Newham, North-West is back in the Chamber as he was good enough to make his views wholly plain. When talking about the relationship between the police and the police authority what he had in mind, he said:

"These are things that you must do."

It is plain that the Labour party wishes to give a police authority the power not merely to determine the police's order of priorities but to instruct them on their operational duties, or at least come close to doing so. I do not commend that course of action to the House.

Mr. Simon Hughes: I shall not defend the Labour party, but given that all police forces in England fall under the authority of the Home Secretary, why, uniquely, do elected local representatives in London have no say in how their police forces are run? Why are London citizens uniquely disadvantaged?

Mr. Hogg: I do not wish to do the hon. Gentleman an injustice, but I do not think that he was present when I went through the special methods of accountability. If he was, I apologise. The procedures that I outlined provide a different but higher degree of control than that available to most police authorities. There are consultative groups throughout the Metropolitan police district. Regrettably, a number of Labour councils—Lambeth, Ealing, Brent, Hackney and Haringey—refuse to be involved in those consultative groups. It is unattractive for people to say that they are deprived of direct input into the way in which the police conduct their affairs, yet to refrain from participating in consultative groups, who work only to their advantage. I therefore find their approach profoundly unattractive.

The points made by my hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Mr. Wheeler) were of singular importance. The Select Committee on Home Affairs visited the United States. Indeed, it followed the paths that I had trodden three or four weeks previously. I entirely agree that demand reduction is the chief priority, and we are taking a variety of measures to achieve that. First, we are trying to improve the quality of demand-reduction messages in the education system. Secondly, and different but no less important, we are trying to determine an effective method of delivering demand-reduction messages in local communities. My hon. Friend believes, as I do, that demand reduction lies at the core of our policy.

Although demand reduction lies at the core of our policy, it is not our only policy; enforcement is equally important. My hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North will be aware of the fact—I am sure that he will welcome it—that the central drugs squad has been given an additional 22 officers. He will know that the Metropolitan police have set up a team with the task of identifying and seizing the profits of drug trafficking.

The important issue of firearms was rightly raised by my hon. Friend the Member for Beckenham (Sir P. Goodhart). The figures are quite encouraging. In an intervention, I said that firearms had been discharged only twice in 1988. We are experiencing a diminution in the number of firearms-trained officers—officers are therefore more specialised—together with a reduction in the number of times that firearms are issued. In 1988, firearms were issued to Metropolitan police officers for 1,320 operations. In 1983—I use that as an idle figure for reference—firearms were issued for 2,230 operations. The number of times that firearms were issued for operational duties has been reduced substantially. There has been a substantial reduction in the numbers of authorised firearms officers. In 1988, there were 2,568—in 1983, there were 4,786. We are getting a smaller cadre of more highly trained officers who are more experienced in the use of firearms. That provides for greater public safety and more effective policing.

The hon. Member for Leyton referred to police cells. This has been a considerable worry to us all. We have introduced——

It being half-past Two o'clock, the motion for the Adjournment of the House lapsed, without Question put.

Mr. Simon Hughes (Southwark and Bermondsey): On a point of order, Mr. Deputy Speaker. My point relates to the debate for five hours—a perfectly normal debate—on policing in London. The Minister did not have an opportunity to finish what he needed to say to reply to the debate. That enhances the argument that the accountability of the police force——

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. This does not sound like a point of order for me.

Mr. Hughes: If I may continue, Sir.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. The hon. Member must address himself to a point of order for the Chair.

Mr. Hughes: The point of order for the Chair is that the issue, the policing of London, cannot be dealt with adequately in a debate of this length. I ask you to deliberate with the other authorities so that in future we may have——

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. The Chair has no responsibility for such matters.

PARKING BILL [Money]

Queen's Recommendation having been signified—

Resolved,

That, for the purposes of any Act resulting from the Parking Bill, it is expedient to authorise the payment out of money provided by Parliament of any increase attributable to that Act in the sums payable out of such money under any other Act.—[Mr. Portillo.]

TELEVISING OF PROCEEDINGS OF THE HOUSE

Ordered,

That—

(i) the Select Committee on Televising of Proceedings of the House have power to give directions and perform other duties in accordance with the provisions of the Resolution of the House of 12th June; and

(ii) this Order, the temporary Standing Order made on 29th March 1988 and the Order made on 26th May relating to the Select Committee on Televising of Proceedings of the House be Standing Orders of the House until the end of the next Session of Parliament.—[Mr. Garel-Jones.]

Ophthalmic Services (Maidstone)

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Mr. Garel-Jones.]

2.31 pm

Miss Ann Widdecombe (Maidstone): I am grateful for the opportunity to raise this issue, which is of growing importance to my constituents. I am grateful to my hon. Friend the Minister for being present to answer the debate. This is not the first of my Adjournment debates to which he has had to respond recently. I know that he was in his constituency this morning and has had to return to answer my debate.

In criticising the ophthalmic provision available to my constituents, I am not suggesting that there is not tangible evidence in my constituency of the Government's commitment to the National Health Service. In many ways, the medical and surgical provision within the Maidstone district health authority is exemplary and reassuring to those who need it.

Following recommendations for decades, a brand new hospital was built by the Government. It will soon be expanded to include a new mass radiography unit. We have received extra money under the waiting list initiative to help in orthopaedics. In 1987, under what I still claim was plain regional mismanagement, the South-East Thames regional health authority managed to move itself, having for several years spent £600,000 on rents and rates for an empty headquarters while at the same time closing wards in Maidstone because it claimed that it did not have enough funding. At that time, the then Minister—my right hon. Friend the Member for Braintree (Mr. Newton)—was helpful in getting us the money necessary to reopen the wards. He showed extreme courtesy in meeting the delegations of our nurses and others. We have been given a fair amount of attention. Nevertheless, there is a major blot on health service provision in Maidstone and in the South-East Thames regional health authority as a whole. That blot is the inadequate ophthalmic service, especially in terms of surgery and out-patient appointments.

By contrast with the district general hospital, which is large, new and well-equipped, the ophthalmic and aural hospital is extremely old and cramped and rather dilapidated. When I visited it in a routine fashion on Christmas day last year, I was horrified to find that the traditional turkey would not have been provided if the staff had not held a collection. That was because the health authority said that there was not enough money available. If we cannot produce a turkey for the handful of patients in the hospital on Christmas day, that shows that the hospital is being severely neglected.

The real problem relates to the waiting lists for ophthalmic services prevalent in the Maidstone district health authority. For many different reasons it is not easy to travel to hospitals outside the district, let alone outside the region, if one has eye problems. Largely that is because such problems afflict the elderly disproportionately and it can be extremely difficult for an elderly person with cataracts in both eyes and no transport to make a complicated journey.

Although I have always made a point since I was elected of getting patients complaining of long waits seen outside the area, it is extremely difficult to do that for ophthalmic patients and one consultant resists making referrals outside the area because he believes that adequate provision should be made for patients in the district itself. Even if I am successful in getting patients referred outside the area, there are long waiting lists for ophthalmic treatment throughout south-east Kent and throughout the country generally.

Cataract patients in my constituency must now wait 19 months for an operation. An elderly patient with a blocked punctum was offered an appointment one year hence. Her husband wrote on the card which announced the appointment that the NHS must be in "a hell of a state." He then sent the card back to the surgeon. I do not agree with that sentiment. I believe that by and large the NHS is extremely healthy, but it has its black spots and the ophthalmic service is one.

Second cataracts are on a reserve list. Out-patients must wait a year for an appointment and then wait another year for surgery. That has had such an effect that in some cases treatment is given where the diagnosis is not confirmed. I received a letter late last year from a surgeon who is trying to cope with this situation: He wrote:

"Returning to outpatients and the waiting times for an appointment, we are in a situation where frequently patients are referred to us suspected of having glaucoma as diagnosed by the optician. Glaucoma is an irreversibly blinding eye condition. If I was thought to have glaucoma, I would not wait more than a few weeks. We cannot accommodate these patients in that time and they are therefore supplied with treatment on the assumption that they do have glaucoma although a definitive diagnosis has not been made. This is a practice which most doctors would say is unacceptable and morally wrong, namely that a patient is being treated for a condition that he may not have purely because he has not yet been seen by a doctor."

It is all very well for opticians in the area to ensure that they have adequate eye-testing facilities and for people like me to demand in the House that there should be health warnings where unprescribed spectacles are sold. Similarly, it is all very well to encourage the population to adopt preventive eye medicine and to have eye tests. However, if they have the tests and are found to have something as serious as glaucoma, they still cannot receive immediate appointments and must be treated on the assumption that they have that illness. It is hard to think of any other area in the NHS in which patients are treated merely on the assumption that they have a certain illness.

Efforts have been made to rectify the situation. In January 1988 a fifth consultant was appointed with a view to reducing the waiting lists. Furthermore, additional money has been made available. Once again I will try the Minister's patience by quoting a letter from Sir Peter Baldwin, the chairman of South-East Thames regional health authority. He wrote:

"We expect that an increasing elderly population will place further demands on our ophthalmology services. The attached table shows that in the main the position regarding ophthalmology across the region is far from satisfactory. We have tried to remedy this through our location of the Secretary of State's waiting list fund. In 1987-1988 a total of five districts"— that is, within the region——

"received additional funds for their ophthalmology services, two of those schemes being specifically for cataracts, and in 1988-89 seven districts received additional money for schemes either wholly or partly connected with ophthalmology, and of those three were for cataracts."

Despite all that effort, there is still a 19-month wait for cataract operations, a year's wait for out-patient appointments and another year's wait for surgery. Elderly patients, who do not have many years in which to enjoy the fullness of their faculties and of good health, are having to go on a reserve list for a second cataract operation. They must put up with routine conditions such as blocked punctums, which although not life threatening or sight threatening, are irritating and impair the quality of life. They are expected to put up with that for a year.

Within the South-East Thames area, only Camberwell has reasonably short waiting lists. I do not know why that should be. Apart from that, there is no district health authority with a reasonable waiting list.

Despite the efforts that have obviously been made to improve matters—I am grateful for the efforts that have been made and I do not want to comment in any destructive way—ophthalmology is principally required by the elderly. The number of elderly people is increasing, and it is likely to increase as a proportion of the population for some time to come. We should look at the density of allocation of ophthalmologists throughout the NHS. In Belgium, for example, patients can be seen within five days at least to get a diagnosis, and surgery—even routine surgery such as cataract surgery—follows within six months. When we look at recruiting, and the emphasis in medical schools as people go on to train and specialise, we must question whether we have the right emphasis on a particular branch of medicine that is needed by the elderly. For years we have heard about the need to increase our orthopaedic provision, because the elderly are particularly susceptible and need hip replacements and so on, and we are doing that successfully. However, is it not time to have a similar increase in ophthalmology provision? Is there anywhere else in the country to which I could refer the fittest of our cataract patients where there are shorter waiting lists? If not, what is to be done and on what time scale?

2.42 pm

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Mr. Roger Freeman): I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Maidstone (Miss Widdecombe) on securing this Adjournment debate. The frequency with which I have found myself at the Dispatch Box answering Adjournment debates in this calendar year is almost matched by the frequency with which my hon. Friend asks questions and raises important matters for her constituency and for the nation. I am well aware of her interest in and concern for the health care of her constituents. The zeal with which she looks after her constituents is an example to all hon. Members. I am sure that the constituents of Maidstone, whatever party they follow, are grateful to her as their excellent representative. My hon. Friend is also an active member of the Select Committee on Social Services, and her views are constructive and respected.

The debate is about the Kent county ophthalmic and aural hospital. I should not like this opportunity to go by without congratulating the National Health Service staff at the Maidstone health authority. The new district general hospital is a fine example of new construction in the Health Service and it is often visited by distinguished visitors to this country. It is a fine new building and the staff have a high morale. Ministers in the Department of Health and all Ministers in the Government congratulate the National Health Service staff on their thoroughly workmanlike and professional job.

Before responding to the detailed points about eye services provided by Maidstone health authority, I should say that it is the Government's policy to delegate as much responsibility as possible for the local provision of services to local management. The Government can provide resources to regional health authorities, and set priorities and guidance. It is then up to the regions to allocate the resources to the districts, and up to the districts, such as Maidstone health authority, to settle the allocation of funds and other resources to different medical specialities, for example, the provision of the hospital eye service in the authority. The Government believe strongly in the delegation of that responsibility and the White Paper "Working for Patients" carries that philosophy further by delegating tasks and making authorities more streamlined and businesslike.

At the outset of the debate my hon. Friend the Member for Maidstone talked about the move of the South-East Thames regional health authority from Croydon to Bexhill. I well understand her concern about the fact that the office premises which it left in Croydon have remained empty. However, the move has saved money because I am advised that if the authority had stayed in Croydon the rent would have risen to about £1 million per annum, which is considerably in excess of the current occupancy costs in Bexhill. Therefore, there is a saving, albeit one which hinges crucially on the assumption about the rent that would have been paid. The saving has been ploughed back into patient services.

Miss Widdecombe: A saving may have been made on the rent payable on the misnamed Thrift house, but is it a saving on the rent payable on Thrift house, plus the rent and rates still shelled out on the empty Croydon premises that were not disposed of? By locating itself in the wilds of Bexhill-on-Sea, the authority has created travelling inconveniences and costs for its staff that have resulted in a considerable amount of adverse comment from the district health authorities. The public and the DHAs are not convinced that the region made a cost-effective decision.

Mr. Freeman: I should be delighted to write to my hon. Friend and set out the precise calculations. She is perfectly right to draw this matter to the attention of the House. I have considered the matter carefully and I am convinced that a sensible decision was made. The question of where an authority locates its headquarters is a matter for the region, but I noted what my hon. Friend said. I do not find it too inconvenient to travel to Bexhill and I look forward to my next visit to the regional health authority, partly because I can follow up the outcome of this debate.

I listened very carefully to what my hon. Friend said about eye services provided at the Kent county ophthalmic and aural hospital, especially about waiting lists and waiting times. I accept that these figures are not satisfactory and the Government recognise that, despite increased activity and reduced waiting lists across the country since 1979, some patients in some areas still have to wait too long for treatment. That is why the Government set up a special waiting list initiative which over the last three years has made £86 million available to tackle the worst waiting problems. This year, Maidstone will receive almost £200,000 from this fund, of which £50,000 will enable an additional 160 ophthalmic operations to take place at Maidstone. This represents almost 20 per cent. of the waiting list at the end of March. It will be done by appointing a locum consultant to cover the annual leave of the five existing consultant surgeons, thus preventing theatre time being lost.

I am aware that perhaps the main problem is the waiting times for a first out-patient appointment. After a significant rise since June 1987, these have improved in the last few months—the minimum wait is now 24 weeks and the maximum 52 weeks, compared with 29 and 61 weeks just three months ago. However, I entirely agree that these figures are still too high. I understand that there is a relatively high number of non-attenders at clinics—that is, people who fail to attend for their appointment—and a high ratio of repeat attenders to new attenders. Both these factors tend to lengthen waiting times for new appointments and I understand that they are being investigated. I know that health authorities are worried about the problem and the district general manager has sent me a report which includes action that is taking place to improve it.

It might help if I briefly outlined the five main sorts of action. First, a clinical assistant is being employed for six sessions a week to provide additional medical help. Secondly, a number of consultants are now referring non-Maidstone residents to out-patient clinics which they hold in Gravesend and Medway, in order to spread the load. Thirdly, there is a wide variation in referral rates to the five consultant ophthalmic surgeons, so patients and GPs are increasingly being offered the opportunity of an earlier appointment with one of the consultants whose waiting time is shorter.

I was in Sunderland on Wednesday visiting an excellent new out-patient facility for ophthalmic in-patients and out-patients. During my visit I had cause to speak to officials of the Northern regional health authority, who drew my attention to the fact that the number of patients waiting for the various consultants might not be the same. Some GPs tend to refer most of their patients to a named consultant, and junior or new consultants may have relatively small waiting lists because they are unknown. As a result, their popularity is not as great as that of other consultants. It is clearly in the interests of patients that referrals be spread more evenly between hospital consultants—that is the third step that the health authority is taking, for which I commend it.

Fourthly, revised arrangements, including more screening of patients for treatment by nurses, should be introduced to the hospital's accident unit in September to reduce the effect of that unit's work on medical time.

Fifthly, the hospital and local family practitioner committee are discussing how to ensure that, when appropriate, patients go first to their GPs rather than directly to the hospital accident unit.

Turning to waiting lists and times for in-patient admission, the district tells me that at the end of March 1989 there were 865 people on its list, the lowest number since September 1987, and that the number has gradually been falling. That is better news, and the additional patients to be treated this year from the Government's waiting list fund should significantly reduce the number. That is the fund which I said was going in part to help employ a locum consultant, to ensure that when one of the five consultants is on holiday, operations are not delayed.

I am concerned because my Department's figures show that the number of people waiting for longer than a year rose between the end of 1987 and September 1988 from 11 per cent. of the total to 22 per cent. of the total—my hon. Friend referred to that. I should like that figure reduced. I hope that the attempt to equalise the waiting lists between the five consultants may go some way towards that.

I must stress that the waiting list during the past year has not resulted from any decrease in the number of patients being treated at the Kent county ophthalmic and aural hospital. Rather, it is a result of increasing demand for this specialty. A total of 21,094 out-patients were treated in 1988-89—that is, in the year ending 31 March 1989—compared with 19,500 in the previous year, an increase of 8 per cent. The figures for in-patient admissions, including day cases, was that 1,884 patients were treated, compared with 1,709 the previous year—an increase of 10 per cent.

My hon. Friend was right to say that as the population lives longer, so the need for eye surgery and treatment in hospital increases, because it is the very elderly who need corneal replacement.

An increase in resources, particularly for ophthalmic services in Maidstone, could enable more patients to be treated and reduce waiting lists. In the first instance, it must be for the health authority to decide how it will allocate resources between the competing demands. Health authorities also need to look thoroughly at how improvements can be made in the way that the existing level of resources is used in individual specialties. I know that this has been happening in Maidstone in eye surgery services. I have noted the statement by the chairman of the health authority, in a letter in January to my right hon. Friend the Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir J. Stanley), that until Maidstone has exhaustively looked at how the resources for eye services are used, she is not confident that it could sustain a case for extra resources that would win any arguments beyond the district. I agree with the chairman that that must be the way to proceed. I have already mentioned some of the action being taken on out-patients. On in-patients, with the help of the clinicians concerned, the authority is actively looking into the procedure for reviewing waiting lists and the most effective use of operating theatre time. The district general manager has identified limitation of theatre capacity as a major restraint to increasing patient throughput. That shows where resources might be applied once other avenues have been explored, so as to reduce waiting lists and increase patient services even more.

The Government's proposals on contract funding aim to resolve this sort of situation. In future, money will follow the patient, so there will be a financial incentive for a hospital to become increasingly efficient and obtain the contracts to treat more patients. I hope that my hon. Friend agrees that Maidstone health authority is concerned about the situation and that it is taking various actions to improve it. I shall be writing to the health authority chairman asking her to ensure that the use of resources for the provision of hospital eye services has been thoroughly investigated and to let me know, in six months, what effect these measures have had on waiting lists and waiting times.

I plan to visit Maidstone early next year, when I hope to see how the authority has coped with its problems. I hope that my hon. Friend and I can arrange a mutually convenient date so that we can make the visit on the same day not only to see the progress that I hope will have been made in eye services but to see and hear about the excellent services available at the Maidstone district general hospital.

PRIME MINISTER

Test Ban Treaty

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions took place at the recent North Atlantic Treaty Organisation summit in Brussels regarding a comprehensive test ban treaty; what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards negotiations with the Soviet Union on this subject; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No discussions about a comprehensive test ban treaty took place at the recent NATO summit.

We welcome the bilateral negotiations between the United States and Soviet Union in Geneva aimed at the ratification of the peaceful nuclear explosions treaty and threshold test ban treaty, and hope that these two treaties will be ratified soon. Further steps to limit tests will then have to be considered. For the foreseeable future the United Kingdom's security will depend on deterrence based, in part, on the possession of nuclear weapons. That will mean a continuing requirement to conduct underground nuclear tests to ensure that our nuclear weapons remain effective and up to date.

Sea Birds

Dr. Godman: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow on 16 May, Official Report, column 119, if she will outline the research being undertaken by the Nature Conservancy Council into the identification of the most important sea bird feeding and gathering grounds in the United Kingdom; when Her Majesty's Government expect to receive the findings of this research; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: In 1979, the Nature Conservancy Council commenced the sea birds at sea project, a research programme to study the distribution of sea bird populations most at risk from pollution, particularly oil-spill, in the North sea. The work was jointly funded by the oil and gas industry, NCC and Government Departments. A report of the studies was published in 1987.

A further phase of the project is now in progress, extending the survey to waters north and west of Scotland. The Department of the Environment expects to receive a preliminary report on the most important areas for sea birds later this year.

A final phase, due to start in 1990, will complete the geographic coverage by surveying the English channel and south-west approaches.

European Commission

Mr. Porter: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the attendance of individual commissioners at meetings of backbench Members of the national Parliaments.

The Prime Minister: No. Any such contacts would be a matter for Commissioners and national Parliaments.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Prime Minister what is her policy for negotiating proposals by the European Community Commission as between (a) the Commission in general and (b) with individual commissioners; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Proposals are put forward by the Commission as a whole. Generally, they are discussed in the Council with those commissioners responsible for individual measures, rather than with the whole Commission. The same goes for bilateral contacts.

Quasi-judicial Appointments

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what restrictions are placed on the appointment of civil servants, past or present, to quasi-judicial jobs such as regulators where those civil servants may be privy to preferential information on the nature of the job;

(2) what restrictions are placed on the appointment of civil servants, temporary or permanent, to quasi-judicial jobs such as regulators;

(3) what guidelines are issued to departments for the appointment of regulators and other governmental quasi-judicial appointments.

The Prime Minister: In general, Ministers are free to decide who should be appointed and the manner and methods of identifying suitable candidates, subject to any statutory or constitutional requirements affecting the individual case. Full information about the job is made available as a matter of course to all those being considered for appointments.

EC Regulations

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply of 13 June to the hon. Member for Southend, East, what information she has received concerning the proposed EC regulation on the control of concentrations and, in particular, to articles 12(1)(b), 12(1)(c) and article 13 thereof; and whether she will take steps to improve the arrangements by which she is informed of legislative proposals being submitted by the Commission.

The Prime Minister: I am grateful to my hon. Friend for clarifying his earlier question of 13 June. I am of course aware of the proposed regulation on the control of concentrations between undertakings which was the subject of a Commons debate on 17 May at columns 427-28 and is expected to be considered at next month's meeting of the Internal Market Council.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if, during the visit of General Jaruzelski of Poland, on 10-11 June, the issue of the fourth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, to be held in 1990, was discussed.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Flynn: To ask The Prime Minister if, during the visit of the Prime Minister of Jamaica on 14 June she discussed (a) initiatives to be taken to increase the number of non-aligned states which are signatory to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty in the period leading to the fourth non-proliferation treaty review conference in 1990 and (b) the Jamaican Government's view of the present utility of article IV of the non-proliferation treaty in regard to nuclear exports.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if, pursuant to her reply on representations recently received on nuclear weapons, on 26 May, Official Report, column 759, she will list the organisations and individuals from whom representations were received for and against nuclear weapons; and why the information sought can be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 26 May at column 759.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions took place during the visit of President Bush to the United Kingdom on 31 May to 2 June on the 1990 fourth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

The Prime Minister: The 1990 non-proliferation treaty review conference was not discussed during President Bush's visit. However, preparations for the review conference are frequently discussed with the Americans at an official level.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's understanding of what percentage is represented by the word "partial" used in the communiqué issued by the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Ministers in regard to the future revocation of land-based short range nuclear weapons in Western Europe.

The Prime Minister: The word "partial" was chosen deliberately to make clear that there was no question of the complete elimination of those systems.

Power Stations (Visits)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister when she last visited (a) a nuclear power station (b) a fossil-fuelled power station and (c) a renewable energy project; what was the occasion of her visit; and what it cost.

The Prime Minister: Within the United Kingdom, the most recent visit to a nuclear power station was on Saturday 13 May 1989, when I undertook the official opening of the Torness nuclear power station in East Lothian. I have not yet visited a fossil-fuelled power station as Prime Minister. In September 1986, I visited the energy world exhibition in Milton Keynes, which contained projects involving renewable energy. Information on the precise cost of these visits is not available, since each was combined with other engagements.

European Court

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list those occasions in each of the last three years when the United Kingdom has been taken before the European Court, listing in each case the nature of the breach leading to action by the Commission and the court decision.

The Prime Minister: Proceedings commenced against the United Kingdom under article 169 of the treaty of Rome in the last three years are as follows:

| Year | Case No. | Nature of breach | Decision of courts |
|---|---|---|---|

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average margin between the price at which firearms with a recognised value in excess of £150 have been bought in in consequence of their prohibition under the Firearms (Amendment) Act, and the price at which they have been disposed of;

(2) what is the average price at which firearms bought in at a price of £150 in consequence of their prohibition under the Firearms (Amendment) Act have been disposed of.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None of the weapons surrendered under the buy-in scheme is to be disposed of by way of sale. Save for a small number of weapons of historical significance worthy of preservation for the national heritage, which will be offered to the National Museums Consortium, arrangements have been made for all weapons surrendered under the scheme to be destroyed.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of firearms which became prohibited weapons under the Firearms (Amendment) Act which have been bought in at (a) a cost of £150 and (b) a sum in excess of £150.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A substantial number of claims made under the Government buy-in scheme for weapons newly prohibited by the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988 were submitted on or shortly before the scheme finished on 30 April. Statistics on the operation of the scheme are not yet available, but we propose to publish them as soon as they are collated.

Refugees and Soldiers

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what up-to-date information he has about (a) the numbers and proportion of refugees from Nazi and other anti-semitic persecution in Europe, and of soldiers from Central Europe, who settled in the United Kingdom between 1930 and 1945, who subsequently became naturalised British subjects with a permanent right of abode in the United Kingdom and (b) what proportion are still resident in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Renton: The information is not available.

Gartree Prison

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to arrange for access to Her Majesty's prison Gartree by the media and local telvision following its regrading from category A to B.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Her Majesty's prison Gartree is to change from a dispersal prison to a category B training prison in 1992. The prison service has a good record of allowing access to its establishments by the media and all such requests are carefully considered.

Correspondence

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State will be in a position to give a substantive reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East about Michael Patrick Brown, HMP, C58729; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have replied to the hon. Member's letter today.

Television Programmes

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his response to the hon. Member for Clydebank and Milngavie (Mr. Worthington) of 19 May, Official Report, column 602, what assessment he has undertaken of the suitability for export of television programmes produced within Scotland; and what steps he is undertaking to encourage independent Scottish television producers to export material.

Mr. Renton: In the exchanges to which the right hon. Member refers, I was offering a possible explanation for the point raised by the hon. Member for Clydebank and Milngavie about the relatively low proportion of programming produced by Scottish independent producers which was networked in other parts of the United Kingdom. My argument was simply that, in the end, successful programme producers will be those who respond to the demands of those who commission programmes and, ultimately, those who view them.

As to the steps being taken to encourage Scottish independent producers, the broadcasting White Paper sets out the Government's intention to require that a minimum of 25 per cent. of programmes produced for Channels 3, 4 and 5 and DBS must come from independent producers, and it will be open to Scottish producers to compete for these new opportunities that will be made available. I have also welcomed the suggestion of the chairman of the IBA that Channel 5 should be based in a production centre north of Birmingham, since the new channel can be expected to encourage and foster a new local industry in independent production.

Mr. Roc Sandford

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he knows the current whereabouts of the wooden pipe and 1·54g of cannabis used in evidence in the prosecution of Mr. Roc Sandford at Knightsbridge Crown court in October 1985.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Metropolitan police that the pipe and cannabis used in evidence in the prosecution of Mr. Sandford were destroyed in January this year.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will specify the dates the various interested bodies decided to take no disciplinary action and to prefer no charges against the officers involved in the prosecution of Mr. Roc Sandford for possession of drugs at Knightsbridge Crown court in October 1985.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand that the Crown prosecution service decided on 5 December 1986 that there was no evidence to justify criminal proceedings against the officers concerned; and that the Police Complaints Authority agreed on 30 April 1987 that no disciplinary action should be taken.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what involvement his Department had in the decision not to prosecute or discipline the officers involved on the prosecution of Mr. Roc Sandford for possession of drugs at Kinghtsbridge Crown court in October 1985.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. The decisions are the responsibility of the Crown prosecution service in respect of criminal proceedings and the Commissioner and the Police Complaints Authority in respect of disciplinary proceedings.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he is now in a position to release the names of the arresting officers and prosecution witnesses in the cases listed in the question of the hon. Member for Birkenhead on 6 July 1988, Official Report, column 596-97.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Where inquiries into allegations of impropriety on the part of the police have been investigated without evidence being forthcoming to support either criminal or disciplinary proceedings, it is not the practice for the officers or other persons involved in the cases to be identified.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who is still considering the inquiry into the circumstance under which charges were brought and proceedings conducted against Mr. Roc Sandford; and what conclusions have yet been drawn.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am informed by the Metropolitan police that, following the conclusion of the civil action taken by Mr. Sandford, additional inquiries were made and a report was submitted to the Police Complaints Authority, which indicated on 1 June 1988 that the matter should be taken no further. These further inquiries required no additional consideration by the Crown prosecution service. The inquiries are therefore considered to be complete.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the Metropolitan police solicitor failed to give discovery of the appropriate documents during its defence against Mr. Roc Sandford's civil action for wrongful arrest, false imprisonment and malicious prosecution during the time period required by the court.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the Metropolitan police solicitor that the court ordered both parties to exchange lists of documents within 28 days. As the question of the contents of the Metropolitan police's list was referred to counsel for advice, an extension was requested and was granted by Mr. Sandford's solicitors. Shortly afterwards, negotiations commenced, which eventually led to an out-of-court settlement. Because of these negotiations Mr. Sandford's solicitors did not press for the list, although it would have been open to them to do so.

CIVIL SERVICE

Civil Service College (Principal)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will make a statement on the appointment of the principal of the Civil Service college.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 16 June 1989]: The Civil Service college was launched as an executive agency on 6 June 1989. The current principal of the college, Mr. Roger Jackling, was appointed as its first chief executive.

Mr. Jackling, a career civil servant, has been principal for two and half years. He has maintained and improved the high teaching standards of the college and evolved the management systems which have resulted in a smooth transition to agency status. He will return to his parent department in the autumn and his successor will be recruited through an open competition run by the Civil Service Commission.

TRANSPORT

Excise Duty Evasion

Mr. Warren: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the results of the campaign during May by the police in Surrey and Sussex with the assistance of his Department against excise duty evasion by motor vehicle owners.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Nearly 2,000 motorists were reported for not having a current road fund licence on display. These cases are being investigated; where it is clear that vehicle excise duty has been evaded, those responsible will be prosecuted.

Special VED enforcement campaigns run jointly by Department of Transport and police forces form an important addition to the day-to-day VED enforcement activities. They have proved very effective in encouraging people to relicense their vehicles voluntarily as well as in catching the more determined evaders. A period of two weeks of extensive local publicity is followed by a further two weeks in which the police concentrate on identifying and reporting those who have ignored the warnings. Evaders caught during campaigns are not given the opportunity to settle out of court.

The policy find that campaigns help them to detect many other offences including lack of insurance and MOT certificates, disqualifications, unroadworthy vehicles and occasionally more serious crimes.

London Underground

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has any plans to reconsider extending the Northern Line tube to Camberwell and beyond following the omission of this option from the central London rail study.

Mr. Portillo: The central London rail study concluded that extending the Northern line to Camberwell could not be justified in terms of meeting that study's objectives, in particular to seek relief to central London congestion. That being so, it is for the Underground to consider whether such a link is worth while both in its own right and in relation to other priorities for improvements to the network.

Air Traffic Control

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to privatise the training of air traffic controllers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This is a matter for the Civil Aviation Authority and the National Air Traffic Services. I understand that training procedures are being reviewed.

Manchester Airport (Fire)

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will list the action taken by the Civil Aviation Authority in implementing the recommendations in the report by the Accidents Investigation Board into the fire involving a British Airways 737 at Manchester airport in 1985.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: These Civil aviation safety regulation issues are wholly the responsibility of the Civil Aviation Authority. The authority's current position on them is set out in its follow-up-action on accident reports (FACTAR) issued on 13 March 1989 in response to the AAIB Report on the B737 accident at Manchester, 22 August 1985. I have arranged for a copy of the FACTAR to be sent to the hon. Member. I understand that the Authority will publish shortly the initial report on the research it has undertaken into evacutation requirements.

Water Pollution

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many drums or other containers containing chemicals have sunk in waters within 100 miles of the British coast in the last 30 years; how many have been recovered; how many are known to have leaked; and if he will specify the nature of the chemicals (a) known to have leaked, and (b) known to be under water and assumed not to have leaked.

Mr. Portillo: The information is not available.

South Yorkshire Supertram

Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to meet representatives of the South Yorkshire passenger transport authority and executive, Sheffield city council, the development corporation and the chamber of commerce, to discuss the PTE's application for grant for the South Yorkshire Supertram project.

Mr. Portillo: I met this morning with representatives of the South Yorkshire passenger transport authority and executive, Sheffield city council, the development corporation and the chamber of commerce. I discussed with them the application made by the PTE for grant, under section 56 of the Transport Act 1968, towards the cost of Line 1 of the proposed South Yorkshire Supertram system.

Further information and analysis will be needed on a number of important issues before it will be possible to reach a decision on grant. For example, the evaluation will have to include confirmation of the estimates of capital costs, a review of carrying capacity, and full allowance for the effects on other road users once the detailed highways arrangements have been designed. I will also expect the PTE to develop sound proposals for project management and financing, and to secure contributions from the private sector—particularly the interests along the route which will benefit from the project.

If the evaluation can be confirmed and the financing and other issues can be satisfactorily resolved, I would hope to approve a capital allocation and section 56 grant towards the capitalised cost of the expected financial deficit on Line 1. The time at which resources and grant might be made available would be determined in the light of analysis. In the meantime, I have decided to make capital allocation and 50 per cent. grant available in respect of eligible costs to be incurred in carrying out the further analysis required.

Customs and Immigration Facilities

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the provision of on-train Customs and immigration facilities between countries within the European Community and between Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic; whether there are to be frontier controls at Waterloo for passengers terminating in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I understand that on-train controls are carried out between a number of Community member states, but not everywhere. Travellers between the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland are not subject to immigration controls, but are subject to customs checks; passengers on express trains which travel non-stop to Belfast are cleared on disembarkation through the normal red/green customs channels, while customs clearance of stopping trains is carried out on the train while it is stationary at a point near the border. The present intention is to carry out customs checks at Waterloo for Channel tunnel rail passengers arriving in London. Immigration arrangements are under review. British Rail's choice of terminal was not dictated by frontier control considerations.

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received regarding the provision of Customs and immigration facilities for the Channel tunnel rail link and those passengers disembarking in London.

Mr. Portillo: We receive representations from time to time about the frontier control arrangements for Channel tunnel passenger trains.

London Regional Transport (Government Subsidy)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the amount of Government subsidies given to London Regional Transport in each of the last three years.

Mr. Portillo: The grant paid to London Regional Transport in each of the last three years was as follows:

| Year | Amount |
|---|---|
| 1986-87 | 295 |
| 1987-88 | 239 |
| 1988-89 | 190 |

EMPLOYMENT

Factory Inspectors

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many factory inspectors were employed by the health and safety inspectorate in 1979; and what is the current figure.

Mr. Nicholls: On 1 April 1979, 742 factory inspectors were in post in the Health and Safety Executive. On 1 June 1989, the total was 621·5.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which major Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries had the largest rise in the number of people in employment during the last year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The table shows, for the United Kingdom and the major OECD countries, the increase in civilian employment in the year to the fourth quarter of 1988. The United Kingdom had the largest percentage rise.

Increases in Civilian Employment United Kingdom and Major OECD Countries

| | Thousands | Percentage |

Youth Opportunities Programme

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will estimate the value, in 1989, of the April 1978 youth opportunities programme weekly allowance for trainees if increased each year by (a) at a rate equal to the annual rate of price inflation and (b) at a rate equal to the annual average increase in wages; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: An allowance of £19·50 per week was paid to trainees on the youth opportunities programme in April 1978. If this allowance had been increased in line with changes in the retail price index, its value in May 1989 (based on the latest available figures) would have been £45·45. If the allowance had been updated to take account of increases in average earnings, its value in April 1989 (based on the latest available figures) would have been £58·13.

The youth opportunities programme was replaced in 1983 by YTS, which provides substantially higher quality training than YOP and incorporates structured off-the-job training. It is therefore misleading to compare the values of the YOP and YTS allowances, the the YTS allowance reflects the fact that trainees are still learning. Employers are free to supplement the minimum trainee allowance, and many do.

ENERGY

British Coal Corporation

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the financial outlook for the British Coal Corporation for 1989-90.

Mr. Parkinson: As I announced on 6 February at column 479-480 the corporation is expected to make a further substantial loss in 1989-90.

The balance sheet at March 1990 will also be affected by the need to bring the corporation's accounting treatment for its concessionary coal liabilities into line with statement of standard accounting practice 24. This change will not affect the future stream of concessionary coal liabilities as already anticipated by the corporation, but will affect the way in which these liabilities are accounted for. Creating a provision in the corporation's balance sheet in respect of these liabilities will involve a prior year adjustment. This will substantially increase the accumulated deficit shown in the corporation's accounts at 31 March 1990.

The Government have given an assurance each year since 1982-83 that, subject to Parliament approving any necessary provisions, adequate funds will continue to be made available to enable the Corporation to meet its financial obligations as they fall due. A minute was laid before the House on 8 June setting out the Government's intention to extend this commitment to include the corporation's financial year ending 31 March 1990.

Nuclear Fuel (Reprocessing)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if the current British Nuclear Fuels plc offer to reprocess West German spent nuclear fuel includes any undertaking on British Nuclear Fuels plc part to retain in the United Kingdom any part of that spent fuel as remanufactured nuclear fuel.

Mr. Michael Spicer: BNFL's offer to reprocess West German spent nuclear fuel includes no such undertaking.

Dounreay Reactor

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the latest position in relation to the fast reactor site at Dounreay.

Mr. Michael Spicer: As my right hon. Friend said in a statement to the House on 21 July last year, the Government will continue to fund the prototype fast reactor at Dounreay until March 1994 and the associated reprocessing plant until March 1997. The importance of Dounreay to the Caithness economy was a major factor behind the Government's decision, which gives the area the chance to develop alternative sources of employment and growth.

As far as Dounreay itself is concerned, there are a number of initiatives being taken by the Dounreay management and workforce to find additional work for the site.

Dounreay has been identified as a site where further investigations should take place to determine its potential as the site for the United Kingdom's radioactive waste repository. A decision on this, however, is still some way in the future.

Electricity Meters

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will introduce legislation to ensure that domestic electricity consumers are not billed for electricity consumption who have been undercharged through the meter being faulty, where the meter has not been examined within the preceding 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Under the Electricity Bill a public electricity supplier will be entitled to recover from a consumer any charges which are due to him and may disconnect the supply according to the procedure set out in the Bill if payment is not made, unless there is a genuine dispute over the amount. In recognition that some consumers do run into difficulty with their payments, the industry currently operates a code of practice on the payment of bills which offers a number of protections against disconnection. Under that code consumers will not be disconnected if they enter and keep to an arrangement to pay off the debt by instalments over a reasonable period. The draft public electricity supply licence requires the licensee to produce a similar code to ensure that this approach continues after privatisation.

Euratom Safeguards Inspectors

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many United Kingdom citizens are presently Euratom safeguards inspectors; on what grade they are; for how long each appointment has been made; and what steps he is taking to increase the number of United Kingdom safeguards experts at Euratom.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We have been informed by the Commission services that Euratom safeguards inspectors are recruited following standard recruitment procedures pursuant to the staff regulation of the EC. Presently there are 16 permanent EC civil servants of United Kingdom nationality in the grades A3 to B5 deployed as Euratom safeguards inspectors. It is for the Commission to initiate proposals for any staff increases.

IAEA Safeguards Inspectors

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many United Kingdom citizens are presently on the staff of the International Atomic Energy Agency working as safeguards inspectors; on what grade they are; for how long each appointment has been made; and what steps he is taking to increase the number of United Kingdom safeguards experts at the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The United Kingdom currently has five officers in the P3 and P5 grades working in the operations divisions of the International Atomic Energy Agency's safeguards department. Contracts are variously for three or five years. United Kingdom citizens also occupy a number of other professional posts in the support divisions of the safeguards department. Vacancy notices are circulated to appropriate organisations in the industry.

Nuclear Safeguards

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has received a report on developments discussed at the 11th biannual symposium of the European Nuclear Safeguards Research and Development Association, held in Luxembourg on 30 May to 1 June, in so far as the issues relate to safeguards matters for which he has responsibility.

Mr. Michael Spicer: An official from my Department was present at the symposium.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if the United Kingdom ambassador on the council of the International Atomic Energy Agency has received the 1988-89 safeguards implementation report from the agency.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The United Kingdom representative on the International Atomic Energy Agency board of governors has received the safeguards implementation report for 1988.

Reactor Fuels Storage

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will seek an urgent meeting with Lord Marshall, the chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board, concerning the problems identified by Lord Marshall in the adequacy of the wet storage facilities at British Nuclear Fuels plc., Sellafield for Magnox and advanced gas-cooled reactor fuel.

Mr. Michael Spicer: There are ample storage facilities at Sellafield to handle spent Magnox and advanced gas cooled reactor fuel.

Libya (Technology Transfer)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if there are any restrictions on United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority technology in the area of technology transfer and assistance to Libya.

Mr. Michael Spicer: All exports of nuclear materials, equipment and technology are made within the guidelines set out in the statement by the then Foreign Secretary, the right hon. James Callaghan, on 31 March 1976 at columns 514-16.

Atomic Energy Authority Technology

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what departmental representation was present at the launch of Atomic Energy Authority Technology on 16 May; and if he will make a statement on the prospects for Atomic Energy Authority Technology.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State attended the launch, as did a number of officials. I welcome the authority's initiative in marketing its R and D skills and expertise under the banner of Atomic Energy Authority Technology.

Opencast Mining

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement about the future of opencast mining; and what consideration is given to environmental impact assessment.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Opencast coal is an important national resource. Proposals for opencast operations need to be considered with full regard to their potential environmental effects and the scope for mitigating those effects. It is in the national interest to maximise production where that can be done in an environmentally acceptable way. To help mineral planning authorities in England and Wales strike the correct balance, the Government last year issued new, fuller guidance on the considerations to be taken into account.

Operators are expected to seek the mineral planning authorities views at an early stage on the preparation of environmental assessments appropriate to the scale of the development and the sensitivity of its location. Environmental assessments are normally required in the case of opencast mine sites of 50 hectares and above, or where they affect particularly sensitive areas. Similar requirements apply in Scotland.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Billing Computer Systems

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether the Government will introduce legislation to ensure that the police, inland revenue, Customs and Excise, and security services can obtain information that relates to telephone subscribers from the itemised billing computer systems of BT and Mercury only when they have a warrant from a court; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I have been asked to reply.

We have no plans to amend the arrangements in the Interception of Communications Act 1985.

Unsolicited Telephone Calls and Faxes

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether the Government will introduce legislation to control unsolicited telephone calls and unsolicited faxes by restricting the sale of telephone numbers of subscribers; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: As announced separately, my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has accepted the advice of the Director General of Telecommunications that the new branch systems general licence should contain a condition aimed at alleviating the nuisance to the users of telephone, fax, or other telecommunications systems, caused by persistent but unsolicited attempts to sell products and services.

Interest Rates

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his latest estimate of the cumulative cost to industry of recent rises in interest rates.

Mr. Atkins: In 1989 so far, there has been a single one percentage point increase in bank base rates. The estimated cost to industrial and commercial companies of a one percentage point increase in bank base rates is about £0·4 billion in a full year.

Information Technology Research

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what he is doing to encourage collaboration between universities and industry in the field of information technology research.

Mr. Forth: Chapter 6 of the Department's White Paper on information technology (Cm. 646), published in March 1989, described the DTI's policy and programmes in support of IT collaborative research between universities and industry. Since then, the DTI and the Science and Engineering Research Council have announced support (£15 million) for a new LINK programme of collaborative research in opto-electronic systems, and increased funding (£7 million) for the information engineering advanced technology programme.

National Engineering Laboratory

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received on his recent announcement on the future of the national engineering laboratory.

Mr. Newton: To date I have not received any representations on the proposals for the laboratory, which I announced on 17 May. However, the Department of Trade and Industry Council of Civil Service Unions has requested a meeting with the permanent secretary.

Overseas Companies

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many overseas companies have set up operations in Britain; and what is his estimate of how many jobs such overseas investment has created and is sustaining.

Mr. Atkins: Since my Department's Invest in Britain Bureau started formally recording individual investments in 1979, there have been 2,647 inward investment projects, creating over 212,000 new jobs and, since 1983, are known to have safeguarded some 107,000 others. These figures are based upon information provided to the Department at the time the investment decisions were made and take no account of subsequent developments. They include the establishment of new businesses, the expansion or acquisition of existing businesses, and involvement in joint ventures.

Small Businesses

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what further steps he intends taking to reduce the burden of statistical form filling in small businesses.

Mr. Maude: I announced the publication of a scrutiny of the collection of Department of Trade and Industry statistics in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Pembroke (Mr. Bennett) on 10 May at column 435. The recommendations of the scrutiny will be implemented over the next three years and will reduce the costs to businesses of these inquiries by about a quarter. Many of the recommendations will further help to ease the burden on the minority of small firms who are currently approached in the inquiries.

DTI Ministers will continue to press to minimise the burden of inquiries on all firms so far as it can be done without reducing the quality of statistics needed by Government. In particular, objectives to this end will be agreed with the enlarged Central Statistical Office, which will assume responsibility on 31 July for running the inquiries now conducted by DTI.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proportion of manufacturing employment is in businesses of approximately less than 200 employees in the current year and each of the last 10 years; and if he will also give comparative figures, where the data is available, for other European Community countries.

Mr. Maude: The available United Kingdom information is as follows:

Percentage of United Kingdom manufacturing employment within local sites (factories etc.) with less than 200 employees

|---|---|
| 1989 | 48 |
| 1988 | 47 |
| 1987 | 46 |

Mail Carriers

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will reduce the minimum £1 charge which private carriers of mail have to charge.

Mr. Forth: We keep the options under review, but we have no present plans to end the monopoly. We have, however, made it clear that the Post Office's letter monopoly is a privilege, not a right, and that in the event of a cessation or serious disruption of the letter service, we would consider suspending it.

Cars

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, how many cars were (a) imported, (b) exported, (c) home produced and (d) sold in he United Kingdom in the past year, 10, 15 and 20 years ago; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: I shall arrange for the figures to be included in the Official Report. While these show the decline the industry has suffered since the late 1960s, recent trends show an encouraging and sustained upsurge in United Kingdom production and exports.

The information is as follows:

Thousands

| | 1968 | 1973 | 1978 | 1988 |
|---|---|---|---|---|

Garden Products

Mr. Alton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if his Department has any plans to stipulate that a sell-by date be displayed on garden products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: No.

Ferguson Shipbuilders Limited

Dr. Godman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether any progress has been made on the disposal of Ferguson Shipbuilders Limited, Port Glasgow.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to the reply, 26 May, column 777]: I understand that, although there has been a much less positive response than the HLD Group had hoped to its consultation with the work force of Ferguson Shipbuilders Limited on terms of future employment, the group regards it as just sufficient for it to be willing to enter into detailed negotiations with British Shipbuilders for the purchase of the yard.

Ivory

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if France sought the approval of the EEC Commission on its decision to ban ivory imports on 5 June; and if he will make a statement on the rights of EEC member states to impose such unilateral trade curbs.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have been asked to reply.

Under article 15 of the EC regulations implementing CITES in the Community, member states may take stricter measures on CITES species in certain circumstances. We had no formal notification that France intended to introduce a ban on the import of ivory before the Council of Environment Ministers on 8 and 9 June where member states were invited to do so.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Black South Africans (Scholarships)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many scholarships have been given to black South Africans for each of the last five years by (a) Her Majesty's Government and (b) the British Council.

Mr. Chris Patten: Following is the information. All awards listed are administered by the British Council.

| | Awards funded by Her Majesty's Government | Awards funded by British Council |
|---|---|---|
| 1985-86 | 115 | 12 |
| 1986-87 | 235 | 14 |
| 1987-88 | 390 | 10 |
| 1988-89 | 434 | 10 |

Malaysia

Miss. Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if he will list for the last five years gross bilateral aid given to Malaysia.

Mr. Chris Patten: The figures are:

| | £ million |
|---|---|
| 1984 | 4·992 |
| 1985 | 7·454 |
| 1986 | 55·494 |
| 1987 | 9·402 |
| 1988 | 10·057 |

Atlantic College

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government have any plans to sponsor students from Soweto to attend Atlantic college.

Mr. Chris Patten: We are in close touch with Atlantic college about the possibility of sponsoring a limited number of students from South Africa.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Loans

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what conclusion he has reached in his discussions with the banks and financial sector on his student loans proposals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made earlier today.

Crookham Court School

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether a notice of complaint was served on the proprietor of Crookham Court school following Her Majesty's inspector's report of 1981 and of 1988 relating (a) to the inspection, (b) to the fire precautions or (c) to any member of the staff.

Mr. Butcher: Her Majesty's inspectors carried out two full inspections of Crookham Court school, in November 1981 and in November 1987. On both occasions, a number of deficiencies were identified in the report. These deficiencies and recommendations for improvement were brought to the attention of the school in strongly worded official letters which accompanied the reports rather than through a formal notice of complaint. Recently many parents have chosen to remove their children from the school.

Teachers (Pay)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to respond to the letter from the six teaching unions, dated 6 June, about the restoration of collective bargaining for teachers' pay and conditions; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend to my right hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) on Tuesday 6 June at column 14.

Anderson-Fabry's Disease

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research is conducted into Anderson-Fabry's disease; and what funds are provided by his Department for research into this illness.

Mr. Jackson: The Medical Research Council, which receives a grant in aid from this Department, is the main agency through which the Government supports medical research. The council itself determines the allocation of the funds at its disposal. In 1987-88, the last financial year for which figures are available, the council spent £37,000 on research specifically into Anderson-Fabry's disease. More generally, the council is funding a considerable amount of research on the X chromosome, some of which could contribute to an understanding of the disease. The council is always willing to consider soundly-based proposals for new research programmes, in competition with other proposals.

Additionally, university departments and medical schools support a range of research from block grants from the Universities Funding Council, some of which may be relevant to an understanding of this disease.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Short Bros

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Strangford of 13 June, what were his reasons for not including the oral question about Short Bros plc from the right hon. Member for Strangford on 9 March, Official Report, column 1018; and whether he took account of that question in his response to the hon. Member for Strangford on 7 June, Official Report, column 234.

Mr. Viggers: In both responses referred to, no account was taken of the right hon. Gentleman's intervention which was a supplementary question rather than an oral question.

De Lorean Motor Cars Ltd.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress he is making in recovering public funds from Mr. De Lorean.

Mr. Viggers: The joint receivers of the former De Lorean Motor Cars Ltd., appointed by the Government, have secured a judgment in the London High Court against Mr. John De Lorean for £30 million plus interest. Action is currently under way in the United States to enforce that judgment. In addition, the trustee of De Lorean Motor Co. in the United States bankruptcy proceedings, has recovered $9·36 million under a settlement agreement with Mr. De Lorean. The Government have a significant interest in any distributions the trustee may make.

The Government also have direct and indirect interests in the outcome of legal actions against a number of other persons in relation to the De Lorean case.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Credit (Publicity Campaign)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many awards of family credit have been made to first-time claimants in the Doncaster and Mexborough areas of the county of South Yorkshire during his Department's eight-week advertising campaign; how many awards were made in the eight weeks previous to the campaign; and what percentage change of take-up by new claimants this represents since the family credit scheme began.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not available on a local basis. However, we do know that at the beginning of April 1989 the number of families receiving family credit who, at the time their awards were made, were living in the areas covered by the relevant local social security offices was as follows:

|---|---|
| Doncaster (East) | 838 |
| Doncaster (West) | 504 |
| Wath-on-Dearne | 211 |

This information will be updated from time to time.

Correspondence

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) when the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow can expect an answer to his letter of 17 April concerning Mr. D. MacKinnon of Greenock;

(2) when he hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow can expect an answer to his letter of 27 April concerning Mr. A. R. Young of Port Glasgow;

(3) when the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow can expect an answer to his letter of 27 April concerning Mr. J. O. O'Connor.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Replies were sent on 22 May to the hon. Member's letter of 27 April concerning Mr. J. O'Connor, and on 14 June to the hon. Member's letters of 17 April concerning Mr. D. MacKinnon and of 27 April concerning Mr. A. Young.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the progress so far of the work of the independent living fund.

Mr. Scott: The independent living fund is widely regarded as a success. By 30 April the fund had received 6,124 applications. Decisions had been made on 5,642 cases, of which 2,254 had been successful. The total benefit paid amounted to nearly £1·2 million.

Grants and Loans

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much Manchester offices of his Department have underspent their social fund allocations for (a) grant and (b) loans since April 1988; and what proportion of their budget for each purpose such underspending represents.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Such information is available from the details held in the Library.

Disability

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations the Minister for the Disabled has had from the British Council of Organisations of Disabled People; what reply he has sent or will be sending; if there is any action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I recently received a letter from Mr. Richard Wood, chairman of the British Council of Organisations of Disabled People, seeking a substantial increase in the Department of Health's grant to the council. Officials have since met Mr. Wood to discuss his request. I hope to reply to his letter in the near future.

Family Credit

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many children he estimates would benefit if all those families eligible for family credit claimed it;

(2) what is his latest estimate of the number of families entitled to receive family credit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The latest information about the number of families eligible for family credit relates to 1988 and is contained in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham) on 17 March at columns 391-92. On that basis there would have been about 1·1 million children in such families, but this does not include families not already receiving family credit where someone is self-employed.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children covered by payments of family credit are receiving sums in lieu of free school meals; and what is the average sum in lieu that each received after allowing for consequent reductions in other benefits.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Each of the children's rates in family credit incorporates cash provision in place of free school meals or free welfare milk as appropriate. In March 1989 there were 392,000 children aged five or over in family credit families and for whom the cash provision might therefore be expected to be used in place of free school meals, but otherwise the information requested is not available.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Government Bonds

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he intends to continue his policy of the early repurchasing of Government bonds.

Mr. Lilley: The Government will continue to operate according to the full fund rule set out in paragraph 2.23 of the 1989-90 "Financial Statement and Budget Report". The Government intend to return to a balanced budget as the norm in due course.

Domestic Credit Control

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list European Community directives which would limit the freedom of member states to institute domestic credit control, including a deposit on the purchase of goods or a shortening of mortgage repayment schedules.

Mr. Lilley: No such directive has been adopted.

PAYE

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress made on the computerisation of PAYE; and when he expects it to be in full operation.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The computerisation of the PAYE system was successfully completed in October 1988 when the last tax office, centre 1 in Scotland, was converted to the new system.

Shares (Statistics)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of shares are owned by (a) the personal sector, (b) financial companies and institutions and (c) others.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Following is the information on the proportions of holdings of United Kingdom ordinary and preference shares at end 1987:

| | Percentage |
|---|---|
| (a) Personal Sector | 29 |
| (b) Monetary Sector and Other Financial Institutions | 57 |
| (c) Industrial and Commercial Companies, Public Corporations, Central Government | 14 |

Income Tax

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the costs of collecting income tax in each of the previous five years; and if he will express each figure as a percentage of total income tax receipts and give comparative percentages where the data are available for other European Community countries and for Sweden and the United States of America.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The costs of collecting income tax in the United Kingdom, and costs as a percentage of total income tax receipts were as follows:

Cost as percentage of total income tax receipts

| | Cost (£ million) | Percentage |
|---|---|---|
| 1983 | 676·3 | 2·17 |
| 1984 | 730·3 | 2·25 |
| 1985 | 803·9 | 2·27 |
| 1986 | 882·9 | 2·29 |
| 1987 | 931·5 | 2·25 |

Comparable data for other countries are not available because of the differences in the tax system and the arrangements for administration and collection.

Finance Bill (Clause 167)

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list in relation to clause 167 of the Finance Bill on instruments of variation those professional bodies or firms which have made representations (a) opposed to and (b) in favour of the principle or the detail of the clause.

Mr. Norman Lamont: We have received around 130 written representations, all of which were opposed to the principle or the detail of the clause.

EC Money (Definition)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement explaining the character and definition of Community money as referred to in paragraph 12(b) of the explanatory memorandum issued by the Paymaster General on 21 February 1989, (10449/88).

Mr. Brooke: The term "Community money" was used in the explanatory memorandum to refer to sums made available to the Community by member states.

EC Finance Ministers (S'Agaro Meeting)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any conclusions were reached at the informal meeting of European Community Finance Ministers at S'Agaro on 19 to 21 May.

Mr. Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to him on 12 June at column 272.

Small Businesses

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the Treasury definition of a small business is for tax purposes.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 15 June 1989]: There is no specific definition. Targeting of tax reliefs for small businesses is achieved by defining the relevant qualifying conditions, taking account of the particular objective. For example, to benefit from the small companies' rate of corporation tax, a company must have profits below £100,000 or, for the purposes of the marginal relief, below £500,000. The Finance Bill contains provisions to increase these limits to £150,000 and £750,000 respectively.

Building Society Shares

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost to the Exchequer of the inclusion announced on 8 June of newly floated building society shares within personal equity plan portfolios; and what he expects the level of take-up to be.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 12 June 1989]: The cost to the Exchequer is expected to be negligible. The level of take-up will depend on the number of building societies converting to plc status and the extent to which personal equity plan managers offer the new facility.

EEC Funding

Mr. Michael Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to estimate the level of EEC funding from social and regional grants that has been lost in each of the last five years as a result of the accumulative effect each year of the reductions in the officially declared level of United Kingdom unemployment following changes in the calculation of the unemployment figures.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 12 June 1989]: I have been asked to reply.

The question is based on a false hypothesis. Payments from the European social and regional development funds are not directly determined by unemployment levels. In so far as, following the recent reform of the funds, eligibility for grant partly depends on rates of unemployment, the relevant rates are European Commission estimates prepared on a standardised basis to eliminate any effects of differences of statistical method between Member States or at different periods.

WALES

In-patient Waiting Lists

17. Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the latest figure he has for in-patient waiting lists for urgent and non-urgent cases.

Mr. Grist: The latest figures, published on 17 May, are contained in "Welsh Hospital Waiting List Bulletin" 1989: No. 1. They show that 2,887 urgent cases and 38,362 non-urgent cases were waiting for in-patient treatment on 30 September 1988. I am pleased to note the 20 per cent. reduction in patients waiting for urgent treatment, compared to 1987, but disappointed at the 5 per cent. increase in non-urgent cases.

Training and Enterprise Councils

18. Mr. Ieuan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress being made in establishing training and enterprise councils in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: Good progress is being made. Employers throughout Wales are responding positively to the invitation to formulate proposals for training and enterprise councils and I expect two councils to be operational early next year with a full network across Wales during 1990.

NHS

19. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish detailed consultative documents setting out his proposals for implementation of changes in the Health Service in Wales which take account of special factors affecting the regions of Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my earlier reply to the hon. Member for Brecon and Radnor (Mr. Livsey).

Cardigan Bay

20. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has consulted local authorities around Cardigan bay about turning the bay into a marine nature conservation area.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No. It is for the Nature Conservancy Council to apply to my right hon. Friend for the designation of a marine nature reserve after consulting relevant interested parties. However, I understand that at present it has no plans to make an application in respect of the Cardigan bay area.

Tourism (Grants)

21. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about the provision of grants for tourist projects under section 4 of the Tourism Act 1969; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend and I have received representations from a number of interested organisations and individuals.

Welsh Water Authority

23. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State when he last met the chairman of the Welsh water authority; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend last met the chairman on 22 May 1989. A wide range of issues were discussed.

Welsh Arts Council

24. Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next expects to meet the chairman of the Welsh Arts Council; and what matters he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to meet the chairman of the Welsh Arts Council.

Cardiff Bay Development Corporation

25. Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress of the Cardiff Bay development corporation.

Mr. Peter Walker: The development corporation is making excellent progress. Some 300 acres of land has been acquired; site investigations for major land reclamation schemes are near completion; the local community has directly benefited by more than £3·5 million spent on various improvement projects. The barrage Bill can be expected to come before this House shortly, having recently been considered by a Committee in another place and approved there with one minor amendment.

The recent agreement with Associated British Ports for the development of large areas of land in the ownership of ABP will allow quicker progress to be made with the development of this important area of the bay.

I recently announced that, subject to parliamentary approval on the supplementary Estimate, I am providing a further £7 million this year to permit the corporation to acquire more land for development purposes.

Water Pollution

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will seek powers to require Welsh Water to seek planning permission for raw sewage outlets into the Bristol channel; and if he will make a statement on the different sources of pollution which enter this marine cul de sac.

Mr. Grist: No. Under part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974, water authorities are required to obtain consents before making a discharge into the sea or water courses. Where schemes require planning permission, this is a matter for the local planning authority to determine under the Town and Country Planning Acts. With regard to sources of pollution in the Bristol channel, information on consented discharges is available on public registers held by the water authorities.

Health Service

Mr. Coleman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of patients awaiting surgical operations in each of the Welsh district health authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Waiting list information is collected centrally on the basis of the number of people waiting for admission to hospital in a particular specialty and it is not known, therefore, how many are waiting for surgical operations. Information on waiting lists is published in "Welsh Hospital Waiting List Bulletin" copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average number of patients for each county in Wales per (a) doctor and (b) general practitioner practice.

Mr. Grist: The requested information (as at 1 October 1987) is given in the table:

| Family Practitioner Committee | Average number of patients per doctor[1] | Average number of patients per partnership[2] |
|---|---|---|
| Clwyd | 1,914 | 6,113 |
| Dyfed | 1,700 | 4,774 |
| Gwent | 1,890 | 4,930 |
| Gwynedd | 1,675 | 4,605 |
| Mid Glamorgan | 1,919 | 5,475 |
| Powys | 1,628 | 6,784 |
| South Glamorgan | 1,887 | 5,661 |
| West Glamorgan | 1,952 | 6,108 |

Roads

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are his current proposals for the improvement of the Shrewsbury-Aberystwyth trunk road from the Shropshire/Powys border; if any studies have been carried out to estimate increases in traffic load on the road between its present time and the year 2000; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Selective improvements of the A458/A483/A489/A470/A44 route are planned, and shown in "Roads in Wales 1989". The "National Traffic Forecasts (Great Britain) 1989" published on 18 May covers this route; a major traffic survey has recently been carried out by the Department on the A483 north of Newtown.

Language Teaching

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the level of provision for the learning of French, German, Spanish and Italian in secondary schools in Wales; and if he will make a further statement concerning his policy for the teaching of European Community languages in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The secondary school staffing survey conducted this year will provide information on the numbers of teachers qualified to teach these languages. The national curriculum will require all pupils aged 11 to 16 to be taught a modern foreign language, and they must all be offered the opportunity to study a European Community language. I have no plans to promote the teaching of foreign languages in primary schools.

Village Schools

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the quality of teaching and standard of educational attainment in village primary schools in Powys; and if he will make a statement concerning his policy towards village schools.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Her Majesty's inspectors of schools in Wales have published a number of reports on small schools in Powys which include comments on quality of teaching and standard of educational attainment. Schools subject of reports published over the past year are:

Penrhos County Primary School, Ystradgynlais
Ysgol Penmant, Pen-y-Bont Fawr
Buttington/Trewern County Primary School
Ffynnon Gynydd Church in Wales Primary School, Glasbury
Ysgol Trefeglwys, Llanidloes
Crossgates County Primary School

In addition surveys have been carried out into various aspects of provision in Powys

Guidance on schools in rural areas is given in Welsh Office circular 20/88, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Farming

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average (a) size in hectares (b) average farm income (c) the number of farms (d) the average number of ewes and (e) the number of beef cows for upland beef and sheep farms in marginal land areas within the less-favoured areas.

Mr. Peter Walker: There are estimated to be 9,163 cattle and sheep farms in the less-favoured areas of Wales. Average figures for upland beef and sheep farms are not available separately for marginal land area. Figures for all hill and upland livestock farms can be found at table 3.14 of the 1989 edition of "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average (a) size in hectares (b) number of dairy cows kept and (c) farm income for the latest period for which he has figures for an average dairy farm in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information requested can be found at table 3.9 of the 1989 edition of "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has granted permission to Amersham International to use the Ferry road tip in the Grangetown district of Cardiff for the disposal of low-level radioactive waste.

Mr. Grist: An authorisation has been issued to the company to dispose of very low level solid radioactive waste at Cardiff city council's waste disposal sites at Ferry road and Lamby way.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those sites within Wales that have been approved for the dumping of low level radioactive waste and state in respect of each site when approval for such use was initially granted and by which licensing authority.

Mr. Grist: Any waste disposal site licensed by a waste disposal authority under the Control of Pollution Act 1974 may receive a very low level radioactive waste where such a disposal method is permitted by the necessary authorisation issued by the Secretary of State under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960.

The organisations and premises specified in authorisations covering Wales are shown in the Department of the Environment/Welsh Office/Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution publication "List of Premises in England and Wales currently authorised under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 to dispose of Radioactive Waste" a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Gwynedd Health Authority

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many members there are of the Gwynedd health authority; how many are appointed by him; and of those so appointed, how many have their home residence in the Arfon borough area.

Mr. Grist: There are 17 members of Gwynedd health authority, including the chairman. The Secretary of State is responsible for appointing the chairman and 10 members, one of whom has a home residence in the Arfon borough area.

Milk Quota

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the milk quota allocated to Upper Wallis farm, Ambleston, Haverfordwest, Pembrokeshire will be transferred to Mr. B. Bevan, who is due to re-occupy the farm on 30 June.

Mr. Peter Walker [holding answer 16 June 1989]: Transfers of milk quota are a matter for the parties concerned. Mr. Bevan will be able to take steps to transfer the relevant quota when he resumes occupation of Upper Wallis farm. The appropriate form is available from the milk marketing board.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Namibian Refugees

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many Namibian refugees are presently located in camps in Angola and Zambia;

(2) how many Namibian refugees were in Angola and Zambia in 1985, 1986 and 1987; and what organisations were responsible for monitoring and administering these refugees during these years;

(3) if he has made any representations concerning the discrepancy in figures published over the last three years by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees concerning the total number of Namibian refugees in Angola and Zambia and the most recent estimates of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees;

(4) when Namibian refugees, currently based in Angola and Zambia, will be returned to Namibia under the United Nations' Namibian independence plan;

(5) which non-governmental organisations are responsible under the United Nations plan for the processing and safe return of Namibian refugees from camps in Angola and Zambia to Namibia.

Mrs. Chalker: The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees has responsibility for organising the repatriation of Namibian refugees. We fully support the UNHCR operation, and are in close touch with UNHCR officials.

No independent count of Namibian refugees in Angola and Zambia has been made. The UNHCR has operated its programme for Namibian refugees on the basis of estimates that there were 69,000 Namibian refugees in Angola and a further 7,000 in Zambia.

By 3 June, 41,000 returnees had registered with UNHCR for return to Namibia, though the registration process was still continuing. Not included in these figures are a large number of children who are expected to remain outside Namibia to complete their schooling and armed SWAPO units who will remain in United Nations-monitored positions north of the 16th parallel in Angola.

The repatriation operation began on 12 June and is expected to last six weeks.

South West Africa People's Organisation

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether Her Majesty's Government have made representations to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees concerning Namibians detained by the South West Africa People's Organisation; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether Her Majesty's Government possess a list of Namibians detained by South West Africa People's Organisation; and if he will make a statement concerning the fate of Namibian refugees in Angola and Zambia;

(3) whether Her Majesty's Government will take all possible steps to ensure that all those Namibians presently detained by the South West Africa People's Organisation and accused of being South African spies are released and repatriated to Namibia at the earliest opportunity.

(4) whether he has received any representations concerning the names of those Namibians detained by the South West Africa People's Organisation accused of being South African spies; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We are extremely concerned about the welfare of SWAPO-held detainees. Several lists of such detainees have been drawn to our attention, including one compiled by Amnesty International. We have raised the matter in our contacts with SWAPO. We have also drawn the matter to the attention of the UNHCR. The United Nations special representative for Namibia, supported by officials from the UNHCR and the International Committee of the Red Cross, has been pressing for the release of SWAPO's prisoners. Some were released last month in Angola. United Nations and ICRC staff are in contact with SWAPO to ensure that all detainees are released in accordance with the United Nations plan. We are in close touch with these organisations, and shall continue to support their efforts.

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions over the last two years he or Ministers from his Department have met with senior representatives from the South West Africa People's Organisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We have regular official and, as appropriate, ministerial contact with representatives of SWAPO. Ministers have met senior representatives of SWAPO on three occasions in the last two years.

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government have taken to ensure that the Commonwealth fellowship and training programme for Namibians will not be restricted to members of the South West Africa People's Organisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We are concerned that all multilateral programmes for Namibia to which we contribute should be impartially administered and distributed. The Commonwealth programme to which my hon. Friend refers is not restricted to members of SWAPO.

Cambodia

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has concerning the action, or intention, of any Government to provide lethal aid to any group within the resistance coalition of Cambodia, within or on the borders of that country; and what reactions or representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government to any such policy.

Mr. Eggar: I am aware of reports that certain governments have provided, or intend to provide, lethal aid to groups resisting Vietnam's illegal occupation of Cambodia. We do not plan to make representations as long as that occupation continues.

Malta

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the agreements signed with the Government of Malta since that country's last elections.

Mrs. Chalker: Since the May 1987 General Elections in Malta, we have signed the following agreement with the Government of Malta: "Agreement on the development of friendly relations and co-operation". The agreement was signed in Valletta on 15 March 1989.

Jabu Ndlovu

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make diplomatic representations to the South African Government concerning the case of Jabu Ndlovu, whose home was attacked by Inkatha.

Mrs. Chalker: Jabu Ndlovu and her family were most regrettably among the latest victims of the long-running intra-communal conflict in Natal. We have made clear our hope that action will be taken to end the violence. We hope that recent contacts between the parties directly involved will lead to a lasting settlement.

China

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any arms or military equipment used by the Chinese People's Liberation Army in Tiananmen Square or other parts of Beijing to kill students and protestors in June were made in the United Kingdom and officially exported to the People's Republic of China.

Mr. Eggar: We are not aware of any British equipment having been used to kill protestors in Peking during the recent disturbances. In my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State's statement to the House of 6 June, we announced a ban on arms sales to China.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has ascertained from the Government of the People's Republic of China the terms on which they would be prepared to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: Although we have regularly pressed the Government of the People's Republic of China to accede to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, they have not given us any indication of the terms on which they would be prepared to do so.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he is aware of the conditions set by Argentina before that state will sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: To the best of our knowledge the Government of Argentina has not specified conditions under which Argentina would accede to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the last eight countries to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty giving the date of signature in each case.

Mr. Waldegrave: The last eight countries to accede to the non-proliferation treaty were Kiribati (succeeded on 18 April 1985), Malawi (acceded on 18 February 1986), Colombia (ratified on 8 April 1986), Trinidad and Tobago (ratified on 30 October 1986), Spain (acceded on 5 November 1987), Saudi Arabia (acceded on 3 October 1988), Bahrain (acceded on 3 November 1988) and Qatar (acceded on 3 April 1989).

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if he will set out the respective dates on which (a) Libya, (b) Iraq, (c) Iran, (d) Syria and (e) Egypt signed the 1968 nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: Libya ratified the nuclear non-proliferation treaty on 26 May 1975, Iraq ratified the treaty on 29 October 1969, Iran ratified on 2 February 1970, Syria on 24 September 1969 and Egypt on 26 February 1981.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the terms of signature communicated to Her Majesty's Government, or to the other depository states for the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, by the Republic of South Africa, before South Africa will sign the non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: The South African Government have not set out terms to us, or, so far as we are aware, to either of the other depository Governments. On 16 August 1988, after consultations between the depository powers and South Africa had been held in Vienna, the South African Foreign Ministry stated publicly that it would sign the NPT if assured of full participation in the treaty.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government of India have indicated to the United Kingdom, or to the other two depository states for the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, the terms on which India would sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty; and what attempts have been made by Her Majesty's Government to persuade India to sign the treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: To the best of our knowledge the Government of India have not indicated terms on which India would accede to the non-proliferation treaty (NPT). However, our views on the value of the NPT are well known to the Indian Government, and we make our position clear to them whenever suitable opportunities arise.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during the meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Ministers in Brussels on 29 and 30 May, and the visit of the United State Administration executive officers to the United Kingdom on 31 May to 2 June, he raised with the United States Secretaries of Defence or State the fourth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty to be held in the summer of 1990.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. However, issues related to the 1990 non-proliferation treaty review conference are frequently discussed at official level.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during the visit of General

Jaruzelski of Poland on 10 and 11 June, he discussed the forthcoming nuclear non-proliferation treaty fourth review conference, to be held in 1990, with members of the Polish governmental delegation.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the depository states for the 1968 nuclear non-proliferation treaty last held trilateral discussions on progress of the treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: The non-proliferation treaty depository powers—USA, USSR, United Kingdom—last discussed the non-proliferation treaty at the first preparatory committee, held in New York from 1 to 5 May.

Poland

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during the visit of General Jaruzelski and other Polish Government officials on 10 and 11 June, he discussed (a) the prospects of nuclear reactor and nuclear fuel cycle service sales to Poland, (b) the possibility of the sale of industrial air pollution control technology and fuel gas desulpherisation technology to Poland and (c) the possibility of the sale of combined cycle coal-gas pebble bed power plant technology to Poland.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State discussed none of these subjects.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the possession of nuclear weapons by the Soviet Union, the People's Republic of China, France and the United States of America.

Mr. Waldegrave: All four countries are recognised nuclear weapons states as defined by the non-proliferation treaty. We, therefore, recognise their right to possess nuclear weapons.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new policy initiatives were put forward by the United Kingdom ambassador to the chemical weapons disarmament negotiations when they resumed on 13 June in Geneva.

Mr. Waldegrave: I visited the conference on disarmament in Geneva on 15 June. As well as delivering a speech giving an overview of British policy, I tabled a paper on the United Kingdom's innovative work on "challenge inspections", a crucial part of the verification regime for a chemical weapons convention. This work involves a comprehensive programme of trial inspections at military facilities and is designed to test the concept of challenge inspection in practice to enable effective provisions to be elaborated. As far as we are aware, the United Kingdom is the first country to carry out such work which reflects the Government's practical, problem-solving approach to the achievement of a comprehensive and effectively verifiable, global ban on chemical weapons.

Partial Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the United Kingdom, United States and Soviet Union, as the depository states for the 1963 partial nuclear test ban treaty, last held trilateral discussions on progress of the treaty; and if he will make a statement on the future of the treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: Several bilateral discussions between the depository Governments have taken place recently; we expect that they will meet trilaterally later this month, probably in Geneva.

Kurdish People

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government have made representations to the Iraqi embassy on the subject of the deportation of Kurds within Iraq.

Mr. Waldegrave: I discussed the issue most recently with the Iraqi ambassador on Wednesday 14 June. I told the ambassador that we viewed with concern the latest allegations about a policy of mass resettlement of Kurds, and pressed him to allow diplomats and journalists to visit the area in question to see for themselves what the truth is.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has discussed with his partners in the European Community the question of deportations of Kurds within Iraq; and what action the European Community intends to take.

Mr. Waldegrave: The United Kingdom regularly discusses such issues within the Twelve. EC Representatives in Baghdad have prepared a report on the human rights situation in Iraq.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received a report compiled by the 12 European Community ambassadors in Baghdad on the subject of the deportation of Kurds within Iraq; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The EC ambassadors in Baghdad have produced a report on human rights in Iraq. We and our partners in the Twelve are studying it urgently.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Early-day Motions

Mr. Patrick McLoughlin: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the number of early-day motions tabled in each year since 1970.

Mr. Wakeham: The information requested is as follows:

| Session | Number of EDMs. |
|---|---|
| 1970-71 | 717 |
| 1971-72 | 474 |
| 1972-73 | 432 |
| 1973-74 | 174 |
| 1974 | 245 |
| 1974-75 | 759 |
| 1975-76 | 701 |
| 1976-77 | 473 |

| Session | Number of EDMs. |
|---|---|
| 1977-78 | 607 |
| 1978-79 | 354 |
| 1979-80 | 907 |
| 1980-81 | 631 |
| 1981-82 | 716 |
| 1982-83 | 502 |
| 1983-84 | 1,060 |
| 1984-85 | 979 |
| 1985-86 | 1,262 |

HEALTH

Community Health Councils

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to withdraw the guidance given to regional health authorities in circular HC(81)15 to refuse appointment to community health councils of people over 70 years of age.

Mr. Mellor: Members of community health councils are appointed mostly by local authorities and voluntary organisations. Only one sixth are appointed by regional health authorities. Guidance in circular HC(81)15 is that appointing bodies should not appoint people over the age of 70 unless there is a special reason—such as where the appointing organisation is concerned mainly with elderly people. We have no plans to change that guidance.

Health Care Screening

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are his Department's current priorities for screening in health care; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Priorities for screening depend upon the risk for given disorders of identifiable groups in the population.

We have established two programmes to screen women regularly for breast and cervical cancers. Women aged between 20 and 64 will be invited for a cervical smear test at least every five years and women 50 and 64 years for breast X-ray (mammogram) every three years; breast screening will also be available to women aged 65 and over on request.

Besides routine antenatal care, screening may be offered, for example, to pregnant women for foetal neural tube defects and chromosomal abnormalities (in older mothers) and, for women from certain ethnic groups, the haemoglobinopathies. There are continuing programmes for systematic screening of infants and children for sensory, physical and mental impairments. In addition, screening for single gene disorders may be appropriate for certain families.

New opportunities for worthwhile screening will undoubtedly arise as a result of the development of new technologies in for example genetics and ultra sound. We also support the cancer screening evaluation unit which provides advice on existing and possible future schemes of screening for cancer.

Screening, of course, is not the only method by which ill health can be prevented.

Midwives

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the amount of financial help given by his Department towards the cost of the salary regrading of midwives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: A total of £731 million was made available by the Government to meet the cost of the nurses, midwives and health visitors regrading exercise in 1988-89 in England. Including the extra £98 million announced on 21 October, this met the extra cost in full. Health authorities' own estimates provided the basis of the costing, but these were not required to be broken down between nurses, midwives and health visitors on a national basis. We do not therefore hold this information centrally.

Remand System

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to fund secure accommodation for remanded juveniles from Doncaster and neighbouring areas awaiting their court appearance who because of their behaviour are unsuitable for living in normal open local authority children's homes.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Doncaster, North (Mr. Welsh) on 16 May 1989, at column 151.

NHS Reform

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a further statement on the procedures before any hospital opts out of the existing National Health Service management structure.

Mr. Mellor: Self-governing trusts will not opt out but will remain fully within the NHS. Subject to the passing of the necessary legislation, decisions on applications will rest with the Secretary of State. The application process will follow the outline in the White Paper "Working for Patients". We are issuing information about the process in connection with a national conference on self-governing hospitals on 20 June.

NML Presentations Ltd.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what involvement NML Presentations Ltd. had in identifying doctors who favoured the proposals in the Government's National Health Service review and putting the news media in contact with them at the time of the original launch.

Mr. Mellor: None.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he assessed the success of the contributions made by NML Presentations Ltd. to the original launch of the National Health Service review before awarding them the contract for the current stage of the programme.

Mr. Mellor: Yes.

Benzodiazepines

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were assisted by his Department to withdraw from benzodiazepines in drug and alcohol treatment centres in the last year for which figures are available; and what was the cost of this.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make an estimate of the cost to the United Kingdom economy, in terms of lost production and sick pay, through people addicted to benzodiazepines.

Mr. Mellor: We do not have the information to enable us to make such an estimate.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department has carried out studies into the number of people who become epileptic after withdrawing from benzodiazepines.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on attempts made by the pharmaceutical industry to assist people addicted to benzodiazepines to withdraw from the drug and as to whether any compensation scheme is being considered by the industry.

Mr. Mellor: We have no information on attempts made by the pharmaceutical industry to assist people addicted to benzodiazepines to withdraw from the drugs.

It must be for the pharmaceutical industry to decide whether it wishes to set up its own no-fault compensation scheme.

Social Work Staff

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to overcome the national shortage of qualified social workers highlighted in the social services employment survey 1988 published by the Association of Directors of Social Services and the Local Authority Conditions of Service Advisory Board.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) today.

The report of the national work force survey conducted by the Local Authority Conditions of Service Advisory Board and ADSS will be given full consideration when received. The response by local authorities to our two training support programmes targeted at staff working with elderly people and those working in the field of child care, indicates that many social service departments will be enabled to increase significantly the number of their staff seconded to social work qualifying courses.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will bring forward proposals to give financial assistance to local authorities in London to enable them to recruit social work staff;

(2) what action he is taking to deal with the nationwide shortage of 2,200 social workers identified in the recent Association of Directors of Social Services national work force survey, a copy of which he has been sent;

(3) what action he is taking to encourage people re-entering the work force to undertake professional social work training;

(4) what action he is taking to respond to the need for an additional 800 per annum social work training places identified by the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work in its 1987-88 annual report, a copy of which has been sent to him;

(5) what initiatives he is taking to deal with the particular problems arising in the London area as a result of the inability to recruit basic grade social workers.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) today.

The Government and the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work are taking a number of initiatives to improve the present system of social work qualifying training which will help to ensure that social work continues to attract suitable people of different ages and domestic circumstances and from a variety of social backgrounds.

The availability of places on social work courses is a matter which is currently being examined by the Department in connection with the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work.

Our two training support programmes targeted at staff working with elderly people and those working in the field of child care have enabled many social services departments to increase significantly the number of their staff seconded to social work qualifying courses.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the age structure of those employed by local authorities as basic grade social workers.

Mr. Mellor: We understand that information is contained in the report of the national work force survey conducted by the Local Authority Conditions of Service Advisory Board and the Association of Directors of Social Services. We have not yet had an opportunity to study a copy of the full report.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he has any plans to deal with the shortage of basic social work staff in London;

(2) if he has any plans to increase finance for encouraging the recruitment of social services staff in London local authorities;

(3) what information he has about the shortage of mainstream social services professionals in London local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 16 June 1989]: A survey of the London social services work force was carried out by the London branch of the Association of Directors of Social Services (ADSS) with the assistance of the social services inspectorate. The results were published in April 1988. A new national work force survey, conducted by the Local Authority Conditions of Service Advisory Board and ADSS was published on 12 June 1989. Officials of the Department of Health have not had the opportunity to study the full copy of the report.

We are aware of the problems faced by some local authorities in London in attracting and retaining suitably qualified staff and of the steps they, as employers, are taking to improve the position. It is of course for individual authorities to decide how much to spend on social services from within total resources available.

Financial pressures on local authority social services, such as the need to encourage recruitment of social services staff, are taken into account in setting the overall level of central Government support to local authorities. The Government are currently considering the local authority associations' report on additional financial needs for social services departments in 1990-91 in which this issue is identified. This report, along with similar reports for other local authority services, is being discussed through the normal consultation channels under the Consultative Council on Local Government Finance.

Occupational Therapists

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he is taking to deal with the nationwide shortage of 250 occupational therapists identified in the recent Association of Directors of Social Services national work force survey, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Mellor: We have taken a number of measures to overcome the shortage of occupational therapists which affects local authorities and the NHS. We are on course to increase the annual intake of occupational therapy students for three-year diploma courses by at least 100 by 1990-91. The Department is also assisting in funding shortened two-year courses for graduates in related disciplines to qualify as occupational therapists. We have also commissioned a review of the manpower, skill mix and structures within local authority and NHS occupational therapy departments, and a report is expected in August.

We are in communication with local authority representatives to encourage local authorities to make a greater contribution to the cost of training occupational therapists. We are also aware that a number of local authorities are pursuing their own local strategies to overcome staff shortages.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state the number of occupational therapists employed by London local authorities in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 16 June 1989]: The numbers of qualified occupational therapists employed by local authorities in London for 1985-87 (the last three years for which information is available) expressed as whole-time equivalents is given in the table. These figures reflect an increase of 24 per cent. in whole-time equivalent staff employed.

Qualified occupational therapists employed by local authority social services departments in London, 1985-87

| As at 30 September | Whole-time equivalents |
|---|---|
| 1985 | 256·5 |
| 1986 | 272·1 |
| 1987 | 317·6 |

Note: Figures for 1986 and 1987 are provisional and subject to revision.

Botulism

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when each of the eight additional dairies referred to by him in Official Report, column 703, 13 June, were first informed that their products were part of the investigations by his Department into the botulism outbreak;

(2) how many environmental health officers are employed by each of the public health authorities for the areas where the additional dairies mentioned in Official Report, column 703, 13 June, are located; and whether each number represents the full complement;

(3) if he will state the date, time and how the public health authorities for the areas where the additional dairies he referred to in Official Report, column 703, 13 June, are located, were first contacted about the botulism outbreak and informed about the connection with Young Fruits Ltd. and the dairy in their area;

(4) if he will state the day and date that environmental officers visited each of the eight dairies mentioned in Official Report, column 703, 13 June, to arrange for the imediate withdrawal of hazelnut yoghurt manufactured by them;

(5) what his Department's procedures are for keeping the proprietor of Young Fruits Ltd., the 10 dairies concerned and the public informed about each stage of the investigation into suspected botulism; and if all relevant persons are immediately and fully informed of any findings.

Mr. Mellor: The Department keeps the public informed by means of press statements. Contact with food processing firms and dairies will normally be through environmental health departments. Other information requested is set out in the table.

| Dairy | Environmental Health Department | First DH contact with Environmental Health Department | First visit to dairy (with details of prior contact where appropriate) | Number of EHOs in post | EHO establishment |

[1] A further visit was made 14 June, 9 am, following the Department's telephone call.

NHS Staff (Upgrading)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the practice of his Department on whether upgrading of National Health Service staff approved by the Whitley Council joint secretaries is backdated to the date of application; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 16 June 1989]: Cases which are, under Whitley council agreements appropriate for decision by the joint secretaries are considered on their merits.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Extensification

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will announce his proposals for the implementation of the Community extensification scheme.

Mr. MacGregor: My right hon. Friends and I are today issuing to interested organisations for comment a document containing ideas for pilot extensification schemes for beef, which we are obliged to introduce this year under the terms of Community legislation and also for sheep. The concept of extensification, essentially securing lower output from the same land area, has some attractions in principle but it is extremely difficult to apply in a manner which ensures effective control and value for money for the taxpayer, particularly in the livestock sector to which, under the Community legislation, we are required to accord priority. The Government therefore consider it essential to try out extensification initially on a limited pilot basis in order to determine how, and indeed whether, extensification can best be introduced without undue cost and complexity of administration and monitoring.

I am placing copies of the consultation document in the Library. Before reaching final decisions on the nature of the pilot schemes, the Government will take account of comments, which should reach Agricultural departments by 25 August.

Set-aside

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of land currently in set-aside is tenanted.

Mr. Ryder: Twenty-three per cent. of existing scheme participants have holdings which are wholly tenanted and a further 12 per cent. have some tenanted land. Information on the area of land concerned is not available.

Farm Woodland Scheme

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state the distribution by county in England and Wales and by region in Scotland of land approved for inclusion in the farm woodland scheme and the amount of such land on which forestry operations have commenced.

Mr. Ryder: As at 16 June 1989, our computer record shows the information for England as follows:

| County | Hectares |

No details of the area planted are yet available. The situations in Wales and Scotland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and Scotland.

Set-aside

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much land currently in set-aside has been the subject of applications for planting grant from the Forestry Commission; how much has been approved for planting; and in respect of how much land grant has been paid.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Up to 31 March 1989, the Forestry Commission had received applications under the woodland grant scheme for the planting of 70 hectares of land under set-aside in Enland. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland gave the information called for in the other parts of this question in his reply to the hon. Member on 15 June 1989 at column 20.

Pesticides

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his Department has any information on the levels in fish and eels in inland waters of dieldrin and aldrin; what are the levels of these which are safe; and if he will prohibit the use of these chemicals forthwith.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my Department's press notices of 20 October 1988 (No 400/88) and 18 May 1989 (204/89).

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to continue to prevent the use of dieldrin or aldrin in the production of daffodils.

Mr. Ryder: I have no plans to propose that the recent ban on the use of aldrin should be reconsidered, and I have taken steps to ensure safe disposal of unused stocks. The ban will be strictly enforced by Her Majesty's agricultural inspectorate, which reports to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

Fruit Growers

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has received the results of the poll of growers conducted as part of the quinquennial review of the Apple and Pear Development Council.

Mr. Donald Thompson [pursuant to his reply of 8 March]: A poll held in February as part of the statutory review showed that a clear majority of apple and pear growers were opposed to the continuance of the APDC. At the request of growers' organisations, a second poll was held by them in May. It did not form part of the statutory review but was conducted in the same way and among the same growers. The poll showed that, whilst the majority of growers believed that the commercial functions of the APDC should in future be handled by the industry itself, they would support a new statutory council exercising a more limited range of functions, in particular those connected with R and D.

My noble Friend has therefore decided that the APDC should be wound up. At the same time, my noble Friend has decided a new statutory council should be set up principally to promote and finance R and D in apple and pear growing and to represent the views of growers on matters of importance to them. She will be holding further discussions with growers' representatives on the more detailed provisions and arrangements relating to this new Council. She intends that it should run for three years, after which it will be subject to statutory review. The approval of Parliament is required for these measures and a statutory instrument will be laid before both Houses once discussions with growers' representatives have been completed.

My noble Friend would like to express the Government's appreciation, which I am sure is shared by fruit growers themselves, to the chairman, Mr. Jasper Grinling, and his colleagues on the council for the unstinted services they have given to the industry.

Wholesale Fruit and Vegetable Markets

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if it is intended to privatise any of the wholesale fruit and vegetable markets in Great Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: I announced in February that, in considering the options available on the future of Covent Garden market, I was commissioning an independent commercial feasibility study into the possibilities of privatisation. Work on this will commence this month.

I have also received a joint discussion paper from the National Farmers' Union and the National Federation of Fruit and Potato Trades about the privatisation of local authority wholesale fruit and vegetable markets. The issues raised are extremely complex and need careful consideration. I cannot at present give any indication of the likely response.

Salmonella

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, pursuant to his reply of 17 May, Official Report, column 212-23, he is able to state whether those provisions awaiting implementation on that date have now been implemented.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Details of progress on the measure awaiting implementations at 17 May are as follows:

(7) Still to be implemented.
(10, 11) Implemented. The Poultry Flocks (Collection and Handling of Eggs and Control of Vermin) Order 1989 came into force on 26 May.
(17) To be introduced shortly.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to increase compensation levels for birds slaughtered due to the drop in demands for eggs after the salmonella scare.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Assistance for the culling of hens to reduce the size of the laying flock is no longer available. The closing date for applications under the slaughter of hens scheme was 5 January 1989. This was an exceptional short-term measure to assist the industry when the egg market suffered severe disruption at the end of last year. The market has now stabilised, and the Government have no plans for further aid.

Irradiated Food

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to place a contract with an advertising agency to explain the implications to the public of food irradiation; and what information he has on present public attitudes towards irradiation treated foodstuffs.

Mr. Ryder: I have no such plans. I naturally ensure that I am well informed on public attitudes to all matters for which I am responsible.

Forestry

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how he intends to allocate the £6 million available to Britain from the new European forestry proposals adopted at the May Council of Ministers meeting;

(2) what savings will accrue to his Department by the adoption by the Council of Ministers of farm forestry proposals to make available European financed premia for the growing of trees on farmland.

Mr. MacGregor [holding reply 16 June 1989]: The amount of afforestation that takes place on agricultural land—under Forestry Commission grant schemes, their Northern Ireland equivalent and the farm woodland scheme—will determine the scale of reimbursements that the United Kingdom will be able to claim each year from the European Community.

Parliamentary approval will be sought to appropriate the receipts in aid of the votes from which the planting grants and annual payments are funded. The receipts should therefore contribute towards the overall costs of support for forestry and agriculture.

New Forest (Hunting Days)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action the Forestry Commission is proposing to take in respect of the recommendations of the New Forest Review Group that there be a reduction in the number of hunting days in the New Forest.

Mr. Ryder: [holding reply 16 June 1989]: The report of the New Forest review group is still being considered. It would therefore be premature to speculate on what action the Forestry Commission might decide to take on the recommendation concerning the number of hunting days.

Hydatid Disease

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many known cases of hydatidosis in humans there were in each of the years from 1979 to 1988; and if he will make a statement concerning his policy for the eradication of hydatid disease;

(2) if he will make it his policy to introduce a system of free supply of medication for the eradication from dogs of hydatid disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The communicable disease surveillance centre at Colindale has received reports of the following numbers of cases of hydatid disease in humans.

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 1979 | 5 |
| 1980 | 6 |
| 1981 | 8 |
| 1982 | 6 |
| 1983 | 22 |
| 1984 | 10 |
| 1985 | 12 |
| 1986 | 26 |
| 1987 | 20 |
| 1988 | not yet available |

My Department will co-operate with relevant health authorities to deal with hydatid disease in areas where this poses a risk to human health. I have no plans to introduce an eradication policy for this disease but would refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 6 June, column 12-13.

Dairy Farming

Mr. Richard Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average (a) rise in hectares, (b) number of dairy cows kept and (c) farm income for the latest period for which he has figures for an average dairy farm in England.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information requested can be found in table 3.9 of the 1989 edition of "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Caerphilly on 12 June, Official Report, column 298, whether the suspected cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy at markets were all identified by veterinary inspection; and how many of the cases identified at slaughterhouses were located at (a) European Economic Community-approved and (b) non-European Economic Community-approved slaughterhouses.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The 18 suspected cases of BSE identified at markets were inspected by Ministry veterinary staff, having been reported to the Ministry by various individuals at the markets. The information requested about the status of the slaughterhouses is not available for the period in question. Arrangements have been made to record this information in future.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report, a table showing the number of confirmed cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy for each county in England and Wales for the four-week period ended 16 June.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information is given in the table:

| County | Confirmed cases |
|---|---|
| Avon | 7 |
| Bedfordshire | 1 |
| Berkshire | 4 |
| Buckinghamshire | 1 |
| Cheshire | 13 |

Fishing Industry

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he will be proposing in connection with the United Kingdom fishing industry at the Council of Ministers meeting during the current month.

Mr. Donald Thompson: There are a number of issues of concern to the industry which I expect to be discussed by the Council, including the state of stocks, Channel cod and other precautionary TACs, quota hopping and beam trawling within 12 miles.

SCOTLAND

Homelessness

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many households were accepted as homeless by the City of Glasgow, Midlothian and Inverclyde for each quarter of 1988.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: On the basis of information thus far returned by authorities, applicant households assessed as homeless by the authorities concerned are shown in the following table.

Applicant households assessed by local authorities as homeless: 1988

| | Quarter 1 | Quarter 2 | Quarter 3 | Quarter 4 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| City of Glasgow | 335 | 271 | 313 | 184 |
| Midlothian | 30 | 31 | 18 | 26 |
| Inverclyde | 40 | 26 | 33 | 15 |

Because of different definitions and a different basis of compilation this information is not comparable with statistics of households accepted as homeless in England.

Empty Housing

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of local authority accommodation is empty in the City of Glasgow, Midlothian and Inverclyde.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The following table shows the percentage of local authority dwelling stock which was vacant at 31 March 1989:

| | Percentage |
|---|---|
| City of Glasgow | 4·1 |
| Inverclyde | 3·0 |

These percentages include dwellings which are unavailable for letting because they are awaiting or undergoing improvement, being held to accommodate households decanted during repair, or awaiting demolition.

RSSPCC

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the sums of money given to the Royal Scottish Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in each of the past 10 years; for what purposes these sums were provided; what percentage of the RSSPCC's annual general income they represented; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Since 1979 we have provided grants to the society under the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 and the National Health (Scotland) Act 1968 and the National Health (Scotland) Act 1978 in support of its headquarters and regional activities, personal training and special projects such as the child sexual abuse project at Overnewton. The amounts and the percentage these represent of the Society's income are as follows:

|---|---|---|
| 1979-80 | 80 | 15·8 |
| 1980-81 | 93 | 14·8 |
| 1981-82 | 100 | 18·0 |
| 1982-83 | 126 | 21·6 |
| 1983-84 | 133 | 22·0 |
| 1984-85 | 106 | 10·5 |
| 1985-86 | 111 | 11·0 |
| 1986-87 | 107 | 11·3 |
| 1987-88 | 108 | 10·3 |
| 1988-89 | 137 | 7·9 |

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what sums of money have been given to the Royal Scottish Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children for the purposes of training RSSPCC personnel in each of the past 10 years; how much money is to be provided in each of the next three years for this purpose; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The table lists payments made to the RSSPCC for training purposes between the years 1982-83 and 1987-88. Between 1979-80 and 1981-82 no specific training grant was awarded. From 1985-86 payments were made on a reducing scale in keeping with the pump priming purpose of the grant. No training grant has been given since 1987-88 and no new applications have been received.

Training grant to RSSPCC (£)

Correspondence

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow can expect an answer to his letter of 29 March to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for health concerning Scottish hospices.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I will write to the hon. Member very shortly.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow can expect an answer to his letter of 17 April to the Minister of State regarding Mr. James Laing and the poll tax.

Mr. Lang: I have replied to the hon. Member.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow can expect an answer to his letter of 3 May to the Minister of State regarding Mrs. I. Todd of Greenock.

Mr. Lang: I have replied to the hon. Member.

British Nuclear Fuels

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if any Ministers or officials in his Department attended the 30th anniversary celebration, on 12 May, of British Nuclear Fuels Chapelcross plutonium and tritium production reactors in Annan.

Mr. Lang: One official, from the Industry Department for Scotland, was among the guests at the function held on 12 May to celebrate the 30th anniversary of Chapelcross power station.

Policewomen

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will obtain a copy of the research on policewomen in Scotland carried out by Professor Roy Wilkie of the university of Strathclyde centre for policy studies for his departmental library as soon as it becomes available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Yes.

Hospital Trusts

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the submissions of expressions of interest in self-governing status in the Health Service giving in each case the body or individual responsible for such expression of interest.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 12 June at column 343.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Authorities (Land Ownership)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many acres of land are in the ownership of (a) the Yorkshire water authority and (b) the Severn-Trent water authority; and, of these, how many have outline planning permission, and in respect of how many the authority is currently seeking such permission.

Mr. Howard: The Yorkshire water authority owns or has an interest in aproximately 70,000 acres of land. About 90 acres of this land has outline planning permission for development. Applications for outline planning permission for approximately 10 acres of land are currently outstanding. The Severn-Trent water authority owns or has an interest in approximately 44,000 acres of land. About 100 acres have outline planning permission for development. Outline planning permission is being sought for between 50 and 100 acres.

Water Rates

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, further to his answer of 19 April about average domestic water rate bills, Official Report, column 233, the relevant data for 1989-90 are now available.

Mr. Howard: The average domestic water rate bill in the Thames water authority area for 1989-90 is £100·80; The average bill for all water authorities is £119·00. That represents a real increase of 33·6 per cent. in the average bill in the Thames area, and 45·2 per cent. nationally, since 1979-80.

Sport and Leisure Facilities

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Don Valley of 2 March, Official Report, column 283, what have been the results of his deliberations in respect of changes to section 19 of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1976.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 12 June at column 316.

Non-ionising Radiation

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research has been done into the effects of non-ionising radiation.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Wide-ranging studies have been carried out over the last 20 years in many countries, including the United Kingdom, on the biological effects of non-ionising radiation. Currently the National Radiological Protection Board is undertaking a wide-ranging review of these studies. This review should be published before the end of the year.

Bristol Channel (Sewage Outlets)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek powers to require Wessex Water and South West Water to seek planning permission for raw sewage outlets into the Bristol channel; and if he will make a statement on the different sources of pollution which enter this marine cul de sac.

Mr. Howard: No. Under part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974, water authorities are required to obtain consent before making a discharge into the sea or water courses. Where schemes require planning permission, this is a matter for the local planning authority to determine under the Town and Country Planning Acts. With regard to sources of pollution in the Bristol channel, I refer my hon. Friend to my reply of 6 June at column 90.

Leaflets

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the leaflets issued in connection with the Water Bill and the community charge, together with the print runs and costs of production of each leaflet, their main avenues of distribution and their estimated costs of distribution.

Mr. Ridley: I am writing to the hon. Member with the detailed information he requests.

Sewage Works (Quality Controls)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the proposals he has received for the relaxation of quality controls for sewage works in Derbyshire.

Mr. Moynihan: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment gave on 11 May at column 520. Applications for these works are being advertised in local newspapers in the areas concerned.

Norfolk House, East Kilbride

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his plans for Norfolk house, East Kilbride.

Mr. Chope: Norfolk house is still on the market for disposal.

Green Belt (Derbyshire)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to release land from the green belt in north-east Derbyshire for opencast mining or other purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Government's policy on green belts is set out in the Department of the Environment's planning policy guidance note No. 2. Paragraph 15 of that guidance makes clear that minerals can be worked only where they are found. Their extraction need not be incompatible with green belt objectives, provided that high environmental standards are maintained and that the site is well restored, but each case must be considered on its merits.

Water Quality

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice his Department has given water authorities on estimating the costs of complying with the legal standards for pesticides and nitrates laid down in EC directive 80/778/EEC.

Mr. Howard: The Department is asking water authorities to estimate the cost of complying with the pesticides and nitrate standards in EC directive 80/778/EEC, in the context of setting initial K (the initial price-increase limit) and identifying further items of expenditure (cost pass-through). For nitrate all cost of achieving compliance will be in initial K, while for pesticides some will be in K and some in cost pass-through.

East Beach, Shoeburyness

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek to include east beach, Shoeburyness within the scope of the bathing water directive.

Mr. Howard: The range of facilities at the beach and the degree of use of the water at east beach, Shoeburyness bring this bathing water within the scope of the directive and I am pleased to announce that we have now identified it for the purposes of the directive.

Environmental Pollution

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is (a) his and (b) the EC's policy on involving non-EC European countries in the common measures to protect the environment against acid rain, water pollution, chlorofluorocarbons, and similar dangers; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is the policy of Her Majesty's Government and of the European Community that measures to protect the environment should be taken at the most appropriate level for the problem addressed, whether by individual member states, by the Community as a whole or in a wider context. The United Kingdom and EC play a leading role in developing a common approach with other European countries in such bodies as the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe and the United Nations environment programme.

Set-aside Land

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when details of the top-up payments for farmers who undertake to bring about environmental improvements on set-aside land will be announced.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Details of the Countryside Premium for set-aside land were announced today by the chairman of the Countryside Commission. The scheme will be run by the Countryside Commission, with the help of the Nature Conservancy Council and in close co-operation with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. We believe it will ensure that the set-aside scheme introduced last year by MAFF will produce positive benefits for the environment. We welcome the imaginative way this scheme has been developed.

Farmers will be invited to manage their set-aside land in ways that will benefit landscape and wildlife habitat, or provide increased recreational opportunities for the local community. Five options will be available to farmers, comprising the management of existing hedgerows or creation of new hedgerows and belts of broadleaved trees and shrubs; the creation of grassland area for the enjoyment of local people and the benefit of wildlife; the creation of habitat for suitable ground-nesting birds; the provision in selected areas of winter grazing for Brent geese; and the restoration of particularly valuable habitat in certain areas.

The scheme will be discretionary with applications assessed on their merits. Payments to farmers will range from £45 to £120 per hectare.

The scheme will initially be open to farmers in eastern England, in the counties of Bedfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Essex, Hertfordshire, Norfolk, Northamptonshire and Suffolk. This is an area in which there has been a relatively high rate of take-up for set aside, and the scope for environmental improvement under the countryside premium is that much greater.

Community Charge

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the number of English community charge leaflets delivered to occupants in houses in the county of Berwickshire in Scotland, on behalf of his Department.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 15 June 1989]: It is not possible to provide a precise estimate. On the best information available to me, however, up to 1,450 community charge leaflets may have been delivered to addresses in the former county of Berwickshire. This arose because a postal sector and certain postal addresses are common to both England and Scotland. The mailing house involved has apologised for the mistake. The Central Office of Information, which acted as our agents in this matter, is seeking an abatement of the cost. This is however likely to have been about £500. At the same time, approximately 21 million copies of the leaflets were being delivered throughout England.

Drug Registration Scheme

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received the Association of District Councils document and letter of 2 May regarding its proposed operation of a national dog registration scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 9 June 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for the Environment on 14 June at column 1076.

Rottweiler Dogs

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will ban the importation of Rottweilers.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 8 June 1989]: No. I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary on 14 June in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Plymouth, Drake (Dame J. Fookes) at column 465 on extended controls over dangerous dogs.

DEFENCE

Project Anchor

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about project Anchor.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am not familiar with any project of that name.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he now expects that agreement will be reached on a choice of radar and avionics systems for the European fighter aircraft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: As my hon. Friend knows, the choice of radar for EFA is under active consideration, and a decision will be made at the earliest opportunity. The selection of other elements of the avionics fit is being undertaken progressively.

Low Flying

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what agreement has been reached with his West German counterpart on further transfers of low-flying training by West German military aircraft to Britain.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what figure has been agreed with his West German counterpart for the maximum number of low-level training flights to be conducted by the Royal Air Force over West Germany in 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of low-flying training by Royal Air Force units based in Germany has been conducted in the United Kingdom in each year since 1980.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) on 10 May 1989 at column 475.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what agreement has been reached with the United States authorities on the transfer of United States Air Force low-flying training from West Germany to Britain.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Military Aircraft (Jettisoning)

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the legislative provisions and flying regulations governing the jettisoning of (a) live weapons, (b) inert weapons, (c) fuel tanks and (d) other equipment from military aircraft in flight.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Military aircraft activity over the United Kingdom and surrounding waters is carried out in accordance with comprehensive joint service regulations. These prohibit the dropping of articles over land or sea except when authorised for training or operational purposes or at the discretion of the pilot when the safety of the aircraft may be seriously endangered by not doing so.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all incidents since 1979 in which weapons, fuel tanks or other equipment have been inadvertently dropped, or deliberately jettisoned for safety reasons, from military aircraft over the United Kingdom, stating the date, location, type of aircraft and nature of the equipment dropped in each case.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Such detailed information is not held centrally and could not be collated without disproportionate cost and effort.

Darren Francis

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he hopes to answer the letter dated 8 March from the hon. Member for South Hams about Darren Francis of 4 Victoria place, Brixham, Devon, and his discharge from the Army.

Mr. Neubert: As I explained in my letter of 4 April, the case is being investigated. I shall write shortly.

Submarines (Orkney and Shetland)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any British or allied submarines were in the area between Orkney and Shetland on 12 or 13 June; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No Royal Navy or NATO submarines were in this area at the time.

Services (Underwear)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many sets of underwear are issued per week to armed services personnel.

Mr. Neubert: Underwear is not issued to armed services personnel for normal everyday wear. Certain items of underwear are issued to personnel engaged in some field training, operational or specialist tasks, but information on the number of issues is not readily available.

Loan Service Personnel

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each country to which United Kingdom armed forces are currently posted as loan service personnel; and the numbers involved for each country.

Mr. Neubert: As of 31 March 1989, the most recent date for which comprehensive data is readily available, there were United Kingdom loan service personnel in:

Australia
Bahrain
Bangladesh
Barbados
Belize
Bermuda
Botswana
Brunei
Dominica
Fiji
Gambia
Ghana
Hong Kong
Indonesia
Jordan
Kenya
Kuwait
Lesotho
Malaysia
Mauritius
New Zealand
Nigeria
Oman
Qatar
Saudi Arabia
Singapore
St. Lucia
St. Vincent
Sudan
Swaziland
Turks and Caicos Islands
United Arab Emirates
Zimbabwe

The number in each country is confidential between Her Majesty's Government and the Government concerned.

Saudi Arabia

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the purpose, and result of the recent visit to Saudi Arabia of Marshal of the Royal Air Force, Sir David Craig.

Mr. Sainsbury: Sir David Craig visited Saudi Arabia soon after his appointment as chief of defence staff in order to familiarise himself with the defence relations between the two countries. The result has been to establish warm, personal contact between himself and the most senior members of the Saudi Defence Ministry and armed forces.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when it is proposed that the first venture proposals are to be discussed with the Saudi Government offset committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The first two venture proposals developed under the Al Yamamah economic offset programme were put to the Saudi Government offset committee for its consideration in mid-May. As announced in a news release by my Department on 26 May, the first proposal is for the establishment of a missile engineering facility in the kingdom involving British Aerospace and Dowty Rotol. Secondly, British Aerospace has expressed positive interest in participation in an aluminium smelter which may be established in Saudi Arabia.

Command and Control System

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply, Official Report, 27 April, column 663, whether he will make a statement on the policy of allowing UKSL Ltd. to choose the programming languages for the IUKADGE command and control computer ICCS and this policy's relationship with the departmental policy of standardisation on the use of the programming language ADA as the means to ensure reliability and maintainability of software; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The IUKADGE ICCS is a largely NATO-funded project and therefore subject to NATO policy direction; the NATO financial authorities, in approving the NATO contribution to IUKADGE ICCS costs, directed that existing NATO air defence ground environment (NADGE) software was to be re-used to the greatest extent possible. Neither the MOD nor NATO formally adopted ADA as the single preferred language standard for real-time defence computer applications until more than three years after the award of the IUKADGE ICCS contract to UKSL.

NAAFI

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes tenders for the operation of civilian staff restaurants within his Department receive any subsidy from the Department beyond that available to all other tenderers and if that part of the Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes which submits tenders produces discreet accounts to demonstrate that its activities are not receiving subsidy from other Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes activities within his Department.

Mr. Neubert: No. The Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes (NAAFI) is treated no differently from other contractors invited to tender for the operation of civilian staff restaurants in MOD establishments, in that premises, equipment, power and utensils are all provided at public expense. All contractors are responsible for management, staff and labour costs, food supply, preparation and serving. Cleaning of premises is arranged under separate contracts. There is no requirement for the Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes to produce separate accounts of the operation of the civilian staff restaurants, which they have been contracted to operate.

Lightning Aircraft

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost of the service life extension programme for RAF Lightning aircraft; and how many aircraft were involved in this programme.

Mr. Sainsbury: The total cost of the life extension programme for RAF Lightning aircraft was in the order of £2 million and covered 35 aircraft.

Military Exercise (Stornoway Airport)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft from the fleet requirements and air direction unit will operate from Stornoway airport during the forthcoming military exercise.

Mr. Neubert: No aircraft of the fleet requirement and air direction unit are planned to operate from Stornoway airport during the forthcoming military exercise.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many military aircraft, other than Phantoms and Tornados, and from which units, will operate from Stornoway airport during the forthcoming military exercise;

(2) how many military personnel will be deployed to Stornoway airport during the forthcoming military exercise;

(3) how many Phantom aircraft, and from which units, will operate from Stornoway airport during the forthcoming military exercise;

(4) how many Tornado aircraft, and from which units, will operate from Stornoway airport during the forthcoming military exercise;

(5) what instructions are being issued to military pilots making use of Stornoway airport in the forthcoming military exercise concerning the carrying out of run and break manoeuvres prior to landing;

(6) what is the planned number of military jet sorties to be flown into and out of Stornoway airport during the forthcoming military exercise (a) per day and (b) in total; and how many of these are planned to take place between the hours of 5 pm and 7 am;

(7) what is the stipulated circuit height for military jet aircraft using Stornoway airport during periods of military control of the airfield.

Mr. Neubert: From 20 June to 3 July, six Tornados from No. 11 Squadron, RAF Leeming and one Sea King from No. 202 Squadron, RAF Manston, accompanied by 175 personnel, will deploy to RAF Stornoway. During 21 to 22 June and 30 June to 3 July, support will be provided by a small number of Hercules transport sorties. Between 22 to 29 June, it is planned that the Tornados will fly some 52 sorties, normally six to eight each day. An average of two sorties each day will be between 5 pm and 10.45 pm, but there will be no flying between 10.45 pm and 7 am, and no flying at all on Sunday 25 June. The Sea King helicopter will undertake a small number of sorties as required.

All flying will be conducted in accordance with normal RAF regulations. Aircrew will be briefed fully on local conditions. The stipulated circuit height for Tornados flying the Westerly circuit at Stornoway (largely over land) is 1,100 ft; for the Easterly circuit (largely over sea) it is 800 ft. With regard to run and break manoeuvres, I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 10 March, Official Report, column 675.

Service Publications Store (Woolwich Arsenal)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many publications are currently being handled by the service publications and forms store at Woolwich arsenal; how many documents are now being issued annually; and what were the comparable figures (a) five and (b) ten years earlier.

Mr. Neubert: The Royal Air Force and Royal Navy keep forms and publications in two separate stores at Woolwich arsenal. These, together with the Army stocks at Donnington, are to be relocated to Llangennech, Dyfed by 1991.

The Air Force currently holds about 2 million copies of publications and the Navy almost one million. Some 950,000 and 250,000 copies are issued annually from the respective stores.

Records of stock holdings and issues, five and 10 years ago, are not maintained and it would not be cost effective to research these details. Stocks of publications have, however, increased over the years and the collocation of the stores will present an opportunity to reduce stocks, rationalise systems and generally improve efficiency.

Army (Home Owners)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of serving members of the Regular Army are home owners.

Mr. Neubert: The current percentage of home ownership by serving members of the Regular Army is 26·3 per cent. This figure represents 71·4 per cent. of officers and 18·4 per cent. of other ranks.

Army (Ages)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of serving members of the Regular Army are over the age of 25 years; and what was the corresponding figure 20 years ago.

Mr. Neubert: Due to the availability of statistics, the latest figures we have are December 1988 to correspond with the figures of 20 years ago, December 1968. On this basis, the figures are as follows:

Regular Army over the age of 25

| December | Percentage |
|---|---|
| 1988 | 51 |
| 1968 | 48 |

Service Children (Schooling)

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many boys, the sons of service personnel, have attended Crookham Court school on Ministry of Defence grants since 1974.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence does not maintain past records of the numbers of children of service personnel who have attended particular boarding schools. However, at the start of the 1988-89 academic year there were 61 children of service personnel at Crookham Court school; this number has since fallen to 32.

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Service Children's Education Authority last visited Crookham Court school, Newbury, Berkshire.

Mr. Neubert: Crookham Court school was last visited on 8 February 1989.

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether in agreeing to pay boarding school allowance for the child of service parents, his Department considers (a) the standard of education on offer and (b) the academic success achieved by a school.

Mr. Neubert: The criteria for the admissibility of a school for service boarding school allowance purposes were given in written answer on 9 June, at column 257. These criteria do not take account of the academic success rate, since this is a matter for parents to consider in the light of their children's abilities. The standard of education must, however, be comparable to that available within the state system.

Malaysia (Arms Sales)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the value of arms sales by the United Kigdom to Malaysia for each of the last five years.

Mr. Sainsbury: The value of major arms sales by the United Kingdom to Malaysia for the last five years, as reported to the Ministry of Defence, is:

| Year | £ million |
| 1984 | 4·3 |
| 1985 | nil |
| 1986 | 3·3 |
| 1987 | 2·1 |
| 1988 | 16·0 |

AWRE (Safety)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out the environmental and safety improvements that have been instituted (a) at the atomic weapons research establishment at Aldermaston and (b) at other atomic weapons research establishment facilities since the Pochin report.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Pochin report related to radiological health and safety specifically at Aldermaston. Since the report, AWE has taken remedial action to deal with the deficiencies found, and has made changes including the training of staff; recruitment and deployment of specialist health and safety, engineering and support staff; continuing additions to the personnel radiation monitoring programmes as modern technology advances; and the addition of a substantial environmental monitoring programme around all AWE sites.

Anti-Nuclear Weapons Protest Groups

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, during the meeting of North Atlantic Treaty Organisation Defence Ministers in Brussels on 8-9 June, the views and role of anti-nuclear weapons protest groups was discussed.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what volumes of toxic wastes are present at the Ministry of Defence, atomic weapons establishment or Royal Ordnance factories at Aldermaston, Burghfield, Caerwent and HMS Vulcan; what storage and disposal facilities exist for these wastes; and what health and safety provisions cover the wastes.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is not the practice to give details of the quantities of radioactive and other toxic waste substances held at MOD premises. Any such wastes are held temporarily in appropriate containers and storage buildings until they can be disposed of safely in accordance with legislative commitments. While being stored, the wastes are subject to the provisions of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974. Disposal is subject to agreement with relevant environmental regulatory departments (Her Majesty's inspectors of pollution; the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food; and, where relevant, the Welsh Office and Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate in Scotland). Transport of wastes is subject to regulatory measures of the Health and Safety Executive and the Department of Transport.

Equestrian Activities

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those official equestrian activities which are supported by public funds.

Mr. Neubert: The following equestrian activities are supported from public funds:

Ceremonial and public duties
Equitation training
National and NATO service competitions.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Bail Hostels

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many bail hostels for women will be established in the next three years; and where they will be located.

Mr. John Patten: To date we have agreed proposals to provide a total of 32 additional places in approved hostels for women on bail by April 1990. These will be at hostels in Basildon, Birmingham, Brighton, Cardiff and inner London. Plans for the following two years have not yet been agreed.

Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates at present serving a life sentence in England and Wales are over the age of 60 years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: According to records held centrally on 31 May 1989, 81 males and three females aged over 60 years were serving life sentences in prison service establishments in England and Wales.

Deportation

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the number of people deported from the United Kingdom during each of the last five years.

Mr. Renton: Information on the number of persons removed from the United Kingdom under the deportation process in the years 1984 to 1988 is published in table 24 of "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 1987" (Cm. 415) and in table 14 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin Issue 10/89 "Control of Immigration: Statistics —Fourth Quarter and Year 1988", copies of both of which are in the Library.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of persons (a) detained by the Metropolitan police on suspicion of being an illegal entrant and (b) subsequently not charged for 1988 and in each month in 1989 to the nearest available date.

Mr. Renton: Information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the numbers of illegal entrants to the United Kingdom detected in each quarter in 1988 and in each month in 1989 to the nearest available date;

(2) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Central, of 6 June, Official Report, column 51, if he will list the total number of notices of intention to deport issued between 1986 and 1988 and in each month in 1989 to the nearest available date.

Mr. Renton: Information for 1986 to 1988 on the number of notices of intention to deport issued and the number of persons against whom action was commenced as illegal entrants are published in tables 13 and 14, respectively, of Home Office statistical bulletin issue 10/89 "Control of Immigration: Statistics—Fourth Quarter and Year 1988", a copy of which is in the Library. The next issue of the bulletin giving information for the first quarter of 1989 will be published around the end of the month.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are applied in determining whether a notice of intention to deport should be considered and signed by a member of the immigration and nationality department or by a member of the immigration service.

Mr. Renton: The issue of a notice of intention to deport may be authorised by designated members of the immigration service not below the rank of inspector in cases where an officer of the service, in the course of carrying out his duties, discovers a person who is liable to deportation under section 3(5)(a) of the Immigration Act 1971 as an overstayer or for working in breach of conditions. The issue of a notice in all other circumstances is authorised by members of the deportation section of the immigration and nationality department.

Prison Visitors

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to increase the allowance that can be paid to members of the prison board of visitors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Allowances for travelling expenses for board members were increased on 1 January 1989, and they will shortly be notified that allowances for loss of earnings have been increased with effect from 15 May 1989. These rates are tied to those paid to justices of the peace.

Members of boards of visitors who serve on local review committees receive travelling expenses in line with Civil Service mileage allowances, which were increased with effect from 1 July 1987.

Overseas Students

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received with regard to allowing female overseas students to be joined by their husbands for the duration of their studies in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Two representations have been received recently on this subject: replies have been sent to both.

Although the rules make no formal provision for husbands to accompany or join their wives who are studying in the United Kingdom, entry clearance may be granted for this purpose where there are compassionate circumstances. We have considered whether the rules ought to go further, but have concluded that they should not. One of the basic purposes of immigration control is to restrict the numbers coming to live or take employment in this country. Changing the rules so that they allowed female students to be accompanied by their husbands would represent a considerable relaxation in the control, which could result in substantial additional numbers coming to work in the United Kingdom.

Criminal Convictions

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of alleged miscarriage of criminal justice were considered by the C3 department of the Home Office for each year from 1980; how many of these were referred to the courts; how many of these were rejected; how many were dealt with in other ways; and how many convictions were quashed.

Mr. John Patten: Information in the form requested is available only from 1 October 1984, as follows:

Representations of wrongful conviction and consequent references to the Court of Appeal under section 17(1)(a) of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968

| Period | Number of representations considered | Number of cases referred to the Court of Appeal | Appeals allowed by the Court of Appeal | Appeals dismissed by the Court of Appeal |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 October 1984 to 30 September 1985 | 770 | 2 | 1 | 1 |
| 1 October 1985 to 30 September 1986 | 773 | 4 | 1 | 3 |
| 1 October 1986 to 30 September 1987 | 784 | 6 | 3 | 3 |
| 1 October 1987 to 31 March 1988 | 274 | [2]3 | — | 2 |
| 1 April 1988[1] to 31 March 1989 | 536 | [3]2 | 1 | — |

[1] The method of collecting statistics was revised in April 1988.
[2] One case awaiting determination at 31 March 1989.
[3] One case awaiting determination at 31 March 1989.

In other cases free pardons were granted and relevant figures are given in a reply today to another question from the hon. Member.

In the other cases considered it was decided that there were no grounds in the information available for intervention in the conviction.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal convictions, disregarding motoring offences, were quashed by him without reference to the Court of Appeal for each year since 1980.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend has no power to quash a conviction. In addition to his powers under section 17 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 to refer a case to the Court of Appeal, he may, in exceptional circumstances, recommend to Her Majesty the Queen that a free pardon should be granted. This course is normally followed in respect of summary convictions where there is no power to refer the case back to the courts for their consideration.

The following free pardons have been granted in the years 1980-88 (excluding motoring offences):

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 1980 | 15 |
| 1981 | 14 |
| 1982 | 10 |
| 1983 | 11 |
| 1984 | 16 |
| 1985 | 6 |
| 1986 | 7 |
| 1987 | 13 |

Mr. Wai Man Chung

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why 19 days after notifying the constituent of the right hon. Member for Swansea, West, Mr. Wai Man Chung, that entry clearance to United Kingdom from China had been granted to his wife, Mrs. Shi Jian Chung, his Department had not notified the visa section at the Foreign Office of its decision, so that it could notify the embassy in Peking.

Mr. Renton: A letter authorising the issue of a visa to Mrs. Chung was sent to the migration and visa department of the Foreign Office on 26 May—the same day that Mr. Chung was notified of the decision. The migration and visa department has confirmed that instructions to issue Mrs. Chung with a visa were sent to Peking on 16 June.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Authority Contracts (Tenders)

111. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that private sector companies tendering for local authority contracts maintain the existing employment conditions of local authority employees.

Mr. Gummer: None. Companies which are successful in winning local authority contracts under the compulsory competition regime will no doubt consider whether it is advantageous to employ all or some of the authority's relevant work force, but they are under no obligation to do so.

New Towns (Developments)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will ensure that a copy of the section 7(1) submission submitted to him concerning possible housing development at High Warren, Appleton is made available to the Member for Warrington, South.

Mr. Trippier: I have not received a submission under section 7(1) of the New Towns Act 1981 for housing development at High Warren, Appleton. I have however asked new town development corporations to ensure that they have satisfactory arrangements in place for informing hon. Members with a constituency interest of section 7(1) applications in which they have expressed an interest.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he intends to make to ensure that hon. Members whose constituencies were affected by new town section 7(1) submissions receive copies of such submissions as a matter of course from new town development corporations.

Mr. Trippier: I have asked new towns development corporations to ensure that they have satisfactory arrangements in place for informing hon. Members with a constituency interest of section 7(1) applications under the New Towns Act 1981 in which they have expressed an interest.

Illuminated Advertisements

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from environmental organisations about his proposed relaxation of controls over illuminated advertisements; and what has been his response.

Mr. Chope: Joint representations opposing the introduction of "deemed consent" provisions for illuminated advertisements were made on 29 March by the Association of Conservation Officers, on behalf of 11 local authority, professional and conservation organisations. The Georgian group subsequently supported these representations. I am sending the hon. Member a copy of my reply.

Council Housing (Tenant Initiatives)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements his Department has made to consult local authorities over grant funding of secondary housing co-operatives to promote tenant management co-operatives in council housing under section 16 of the Housing and Planning Act 1986; what consultation there has been over which organisations receive such funding and at what level and what steps his Department has taken to consult local authorities to co-ordinate funding on tenants' intiatives in council housing.

Mr. Trippier: There are no existing formal arrangements for consulting local authorities over section 16 grant funding of secondary agencies. Where necessary, the Department will discuss applications with the relevant authority.

Local authorities were invited to submit evidence on matters, including section 16, to the recent housing co-operatives review. The Government are now considering the review committee's report.

Disabled People (Housing)

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how much money the Housing Corporation allocated in 1989-90 for the construction of wheelchair housing (a) in total cash terms, and (b) as a percentage of the total budget each year for the last six years;

(2) how much money was allocated by the Housing Corporation, to housing associations to adapt properties occupied by disabled tenants for each of the last six financial years, and how many housing associations in each of those years received money for this purpose.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not held by the Department. The distribution of public funds to individual housing associatons and projects is largely a matter for the Housing Corporation to determine within the broad policy framework established annually in discussion with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. I have therefore asked the Housing Corporation to respond to my hon. Friend direct.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of local authority housing built in 1989-90 and in each of the last six previous financial years is wheelchair housing.

Mr. Trippier: New wheelchair dwellings completed by English local authorities as a percentage of their total new housebuilding completions are as follows:

| | Percentage |
|---|---|
| 1983-84 | 1·0 |
| 1984-85 | 1·4 |
| 1985-86 | 1·0 |
| 1986-87 | 1·3 |
| 1987-88 | 1·3 |
| 1988-89 | 1·5 |

Information for 1989-90 is not available.

Council House Sales

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he intends to introduce a scheme to convert council house rents into mortgages along the lines of that announced by the Scottish Office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: No. The Scottish scheme will entail voluntary sales to tenants of Scottish Homes. There is no organisation in England equivalent to Scottish Homes for these purposes.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning appeals were lodged with his Department in 1974, 1979, 1984 and the last full year for which figures are available; and, for each year, how many were allowed.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is as follows:

| Year | Appeals Received | Appeals Allowed |
|---|---|---|
| 1974 | 13,324 | 2,715 |
| 1979 | 12,990 | 2,602 |
| 1984 | 16,192 | 3,773 |
| 1988-89 | 28,659 | 7,734 |

Water Privatisation

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is in a position to give further details of the share offer arrangements for employees of the privatised water authorities.

Mr. Howard: The Government welcome the opportunity which privatisation of the water authorities provides for employees to become shareholders in the new plcs. I can now announce the following special arrangements for eligible employees of the new water plcs and their wholly owned subsidiaries:

(i) employees will be offered free shares worth around £70 at the offer price plus about £2 of shares for every year of continuous service with their new company and the predecessor water authority up to a date close to flotation. In addition, people who were employed by the predecessor water authority on 1 April 1974, when the authority took over from bodies previously responsible for water supply and sewerage services, will be treated as having an additional five years' entitlement;

(ii) employees will also be offered two free shares for each one bought at the full offer price on a matching basis up to a maximum of £400 worth of free shares; under this element of the package, if an employee bought shares worth £200 at the offer price he would receive shares worth in total £600;

(iii) employees will be able to buy up to a maximum of £2,350 worth of additional shares at a discount of 10 per cent. from the full offer price;

(iv) employees applying for shares will be treated on a priority basis over the general public, up to an individual limit of shares worth £12,000 at the offer price; this is in addition to the free, matching and discount shares.

The free and matching shares will be available to employees who satisfy certain minimum qualification periods on length of employment and hours worked per week. The discount and priority shares will be available to all employees at a date close to the flotation date.

We have also decided that pensioners of a new water plc, its wholly owned subsidiaries or its predecessor water authority should be able to apply on a priority basis, over the general public, for shares up to an individual limit of £12,000 at the offer price.

Property Services Agency (Vacant Buildings)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those buildings which are rented, leased or owned by the Property Services Agency which have lain vacant for more than the last 12 months.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 13 June 1989]: Yes. The list is as follows.

Schedule of buildings rented, leased or owned by the PSA which have been vacant for more than 12 months as at 9 June 1989

| Property | Local authority area |

These 44 buildings represent less than 1 per cent. of the total stock held by PSA. Thirty-four of the properties have been declared surplus and are in the process of disposal and the remainder are undergoing, or being considered, for refurbishment or redevelopment to allow reoccupation by a Government Department.

Community Charge

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many copies of his Department's leaflet "The Community Charge (The So-called 'Poll Tax'): How It Will Work For You" have been mailed to addresses in Scotland; what was the cost of distributing this material outside England; and if he will now write to those households in Scotland which received the leaflet to explain the error.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 19 June 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) yesterday. I naturally regret the fact that a comparatively few leaflets were wrongly delivered to Scottish households, but I do not think it necessary to write to each household concerned. The mailing house concerned has apologised for the mistake.

Set-aside Land

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many planning applications have been made to date in respect of land on which set-aside payments are being made by the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food; and, of these applications, how many have been successful.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 19 June 1989]: Only a small proportion of set-aside proposals will need planning permission. The Department does not collect information from local planning authorities in the form requested, and I understand it is not included in the records of applications for set-aside payments kept by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Water Quality

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the letter written by officials in his Department and sent to water authorities on 14 February giving advice on how to deal with the EC directive on water quality.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 19 June 1989]: No. The letter referred to was a working document on the assumptions to be made in compiling expenditure projections for the purpose of k setting (k is the initial limit on price increases to be contained in companies instruments of appointment under the Water Bill). The letter made it clear that these assumptions would be subject to review until the end of the k setting process. We will state the assumptions underlying ks once they are determined.

We have made it clear to water authorities and companies that expenditure arising from any obligations left out of initial k, for example because the costs are too uncertain for inclusion, and expenditure arising from new obligations imposed after ks are set, will be eligible for consideration in reviews of charges by the Director General of Water Services.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what his current estimate is for complying with EC directive 80/778/EEC in each of the water authority areas.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 19 June 1989]: The Government are fully committed to compliance with the EC drinking water directive as quickly as possible, taking account of practicalities. Water undertakers in England and Wales have drawn up improvement programmes for supplies which regularly or intermittently fail to comply with the directive in certain respects. Only when these programmes have been thoroughly assessed will it be possible to estimate the time scale for compliance with the directive.

Environmental Assessments

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, further to his replies of 4 May, Official Report, columns 247-50, with regard to environmental assessment, he will (a) list those matters taken into account when determining whether environmental assessment is required, (b) give details of the methodology used, (c) specify what criteria and thresholds are used, (d) indicate why some extensions of mineral workings required environmental assessments and others did not, (e) indicate why environment assessment was required in the case of one shopping complex and not in the case of other shopping complexes and retail parks, (f) give details of what information was given to the relevant local authorities following these directions and (g) indicate what information has been given to other local authorities subsequent to these directions in order to help them apply the Town and Country Planning (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988 consistently.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 19 June 1989]: In accordance with the Town and Country Planning (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988, environmental assessment is required of all projects of the types listed in schedule 1 to the regulations and of any project of a type listed in schedule 2 which is likely to have significant effects on the environment by virtue of factors such as its nature, size or location. Guidance on which projects are likely to have significant environmental effects so as to require environmental assessment is given in DoE circular 15/88, which also sets out indicative thresholds and criteria to which the Secretary of State has regard when considering whether to direct that assessment is required. Decisions on the need for environmental assessment turn on the facts of individual cases, and locational considerations may lead to different conclusions in respect of similar types of development. The regulations require the Secretary of State to give reasons when he directs that environmental assessment is required. Copies of decision letters are sent to the applicant and to the local planning authority, which is required to make a copy available for public inspection in the place where the planning register is kept. We are considering how best this information can be made more widely available to assist both developers and local planning authorities in the application of these regulations.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Enterprise

112. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Scottish Enterprise proposals.

Mr. Lang: We are currently reassessing the proposals in the Scottish Enterprise White Paper in the light of all the responses received and will announce our detailed decisions in due course.

Population Statistics

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his Department's estimates for the numbers of people aged 65 to 74 years, 75 to 79 years and over 80 years in the years 2000 and 2020 in Scotland; and what percentage increase this represents in each category over the actual figures for the last year in which they are available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is set out in the table.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| Age group | Projected population | Percentage change from 1988 mid-year estimate | Projected population | Percentage change from 1988 mid-year estimate |
| 65-74 | 427,703 | −1·6 | 500,785 | 15·2 |
| 75-79 | 160,311 | 1·4 | 161,124 | 1·9 |
| 80 and over | 188,592 | 16·4 | 213,814 | 32·0 |

Surgeries (Rural Areas)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional funds he is making available to health boards to enable practice surgeries in rural areas to meet the requirements of the new contract.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 16 June 1989]: Funding for general medical services following the introduction of the new contract for GPs will be determined in the course of the Government's public expenditure survey 1989. The funds will take full account of the new contract, including those aspects which relate to rural practices.

At present public expenditure on family practitioner services generally is planned to increase from £496 million in 1988-89 to £610 million in 1991-92, an increase of 23 per cent.

DEFENCE

Fylingdales (Equipment)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the primary purpose of the new radar equipment at Fylingdales.

Mr. Neubert: The modernised radar system at RAF Fylingdales will perform the same functions as the present system, which is to provide early warning of strategic ballistic missile attack.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the cost of installing the new early warning radar equipment at Fylingdales comes from United Kingdom sources.

Mr. Neubert: The modernised radar system itself will be constructed by an American company, at United States Government expense. British companies will carry out all the work to be undertaken in the United Kingdom on the infrastructure for the facility, at British Government expense. This infrastructure work, for which contracts are shortly to be awarded, will amount to some 27 per cent. of the total.

Military Communications

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what programmes are under way to develop protection for United Kingdom military communications satellites from anti-satellite systems.

Mr. Sainsbury: The potential threat to United Kingdom military communications satellites from such systems is kept under constant review.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what programmes are under way to develop the use of satellite-laser systems for communications with submarines (a) in co-operation with the United States of America and (b) by the United Kingdom alone.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is not our practice to comment on operational matters of this kind.

Anti-Satellite Weapons

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research is currently under way concerning the development of an anti-satellite weapon programme.

Mr. Sainsbury: No such research is carried out by the United Kingdom.

Low Flying

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints about low flying were received by his Department in 1988 from addresses in the Cunninghame, North constituency.

Mr. Neubert: In 1988 the Ministry of Defence received a total of four complaints or inquiries about military low flying from addresses in the Cunninghame, North constituency.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he has any information on military helicopters authorised to operate at low level in Scotland on 5 May 1988, additional to that given in his reply to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North on 27 May 1988, Official Report, column 391;

(2) pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North of 22 December 1988, Official Report, column 368, whether the times of movements given for Army Air Corps Gazelle helicopter serial number XZ328 near Dalmally and at HMS Gannet on 5 May 1988 were expressed in Greenwich mean time or British summer time;

(3) pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North of 22 December 1988, Official Report, column 368, what was the point of origin of the flight to HMS Gannet by Army Air Corps Gazelle helicopter, serial number XZ328, on 5 May 1988; what route was flown by this aircraft through Argyll; and what was the purpose of the flight.

Mr. Neubert: Timings given for the movements of the Army Air Corps helicopter were expressed in British summer time. This helicopter, which began its sortie from RAF Leuchars, was carrying out a navigation exercise. I have nothing further to add to my reply to the hon. Member on 22 December 1988, at column 368, or to my letter of 24 February 1989 to the hon. Member.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North of 22 December 1988, Official Report, column 368, if he will state the reasons for not listing medical establishments over which military low flying is prohibited.

Mr. Neubert: I have nothing further to add to my reply to the hon. Member on 22 December, at column 368.

ELF Transmitter

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the notice of proposed development relating to the proposed trial ELF transmitter at Glengarry forest to be submitted to the Highland regional council.

Mr. Neubert: Preparation of the notice of proposed development continues, but completion will take some time and it is not possible to say precisely when it will be submitted.

Commissions (Sale)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any proposals for reviving the sale of commissions as part of the Government's programme of privatisation.

Mr. Neubert: No.

Historic Aircraft Collection (RAF St. Athan)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates of movement and final destinations of any aircraft from the collection of historic aircraft at RAF St. Athan which have been (a) sold, (b) scrapped and (c) moved to other locations since 1987; and what were the reasons for any such moves.

Mr. Neubert: A review of the RAF's policy on historic and non-flying display aircraft resulted in a decision in early 1988 to disband the RAF St. Athan regional collection of historic aircraft. Transfers effected to date are as follows.

The remaining aircraft will be disposed of progressively over the next few months. It is not intended to scrap any, but those not required elsewhere within the service will be sold.

Disbandment of the RAF St. Athan regional collection of historic aircraft
Transfers effected up to 21 June 1989

| Year and aircraft | |
|---|---|
| 1988 | |
| Messerschmitt Me 163B | Gifted to the German Air Force |
| Auster T7 | Transferred to the regional collection at RAF Cosford, for display |
| 1989 | |
| Kawasaki | Transferred to the regional collection at RAF Cosford, for display |
| Messerschmitt Me 262A | Transferred to the regional collection at RAF Cosford, for display |
| Mitsubishi | Transferred to the regional collection at RAF Cosford, for display |
| Fiesler Storch | Transferred to the regional collection at RAF Cosford, for display |
| Percival Proctor | Transferred to the RAF museum at Hendon for display |
| Swift | Transferred to the RAF museum at Hendon for display |
| Meteor F8 | Transferred to RAF Finningley as a gate guardian |
| Spitfire Mk9E | Transferred to RAF Abingdon as a reserve for the battle of Britain memorial flight |

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is intended to maintain a collection of historic aircraft at RAF St. Athan.

Mr. Neubert: No.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessments were made of (a) current and (b) projected peacetime loss rates of the Tornado F2 and F3 in RAF service prior to the decision to order an additional attrition replacement batch in 1988.

Mr. Sainsbury: No Tornado F2s or F3s have been lost to date. The predicted peacetime attrition rate is classified.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration is being given to the placing of further attrition replacement orders for (a) air defence Tornados and (b) strike/attack/reconnaissance Tornados.

Mr. Sainsbury: The need for additional attrition aircraft is kept under review.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what projected peacetime attrition rate was assumed for the Tornado air defence variant in calculating the size of the original order for 165 aircraft for the Royal Air Force;

(2) what proportion of the original order of 165 Tornado air defence variants for the Royal Air Force was made up of attrition replacement aircraft.

Mr. Sainsbury: The information requested is classified.

Service Cars (Argyll)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the presence of (a) Army and (b) Royal Navy Ford Escort estate staff cars in Argyll on 5 May 1988.

Mr. Neubert: The information requested is not readily available and could not be provided without disproportionate effort and cost.

Aircraft Losses

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the total number of Buccaneer aircraft procured for the Royal Air Force have been lost in accidents so far.

Mr. Neubert: Of the total number of Buccaneer aircraft taken into RAF service, 19·17 per cent. have been lost in accidents.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the total number of Hunter aircraft procured for the Royal Air Force have been lost in accidents over the aircraft's service life so far.

Mr. Neubert: Of the total number of Hunter aircraft taken into RAF service, 32·36 per cent. have been lost in accidents.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the total number of Jaguar aircraft procured for the Royal Air Force have been lost in accidents so far.

Mr. Neubert: Of the total number of Jaguar aircraft taken into RAF service, 23·76 per cent. have been lost in accidents.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the total number of Lightning aircraft procured for the Royal Air Force were lost in accidents over the aircraft's service life.

Mr. Neubert: Of the total number of Lightning aircraft taken into RAF service, 45·58 per cent. have been lost in accidents.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the total number of Phantom aircraft procured for the Royal Air Force have been lost in accidents so far.

Mr. Neubert: Of the total number of Phantom aircraft taken into RAF service, 22·54 per cent. have been lost in accidents.

Community Charge

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the written guidance issued to armed service units in respect of poll tax payment.

Mr. Neubert: I have placed copies in the Library of the House.

Howitzers

Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is now able to make a statement on the procurement of 155 mm self-propelled howitzers for the Army.

Mr. Sainsbury: In my reply on 8 June 1988, at column 586, to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Berkshire, East (Mr. MacKay), I announced the award of a contract to Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Limited (VSEL), worth some £4 million, for further work on its AS90 self-propelled howitzer. This was to enable it to demonstrate more fully the performance of its design against the British Army's specification and to secure option prices for any subsequent production orders. In the interim period we have also closely followed the development in the United States of the M109 howitzer improvement programme.

Following a very careful and detailed evaluation of the two systems, and subject to the agreement of satisfactory terms, I have decided to place a contract with VSEL for the completion of development and a production order for 179 AS90 self-propelled howitzers. This contract, with initial spares and support, is worth some £300 million. I have also arranged an option for a further quantity of howitzers which may be exercised during the next two years.

The new weapon will replace our 105 mm Abbot guns and will significantly enhance artillery firepower. Its introduction will mark a further step in our planned programme to ensure that the armed services are equipped with up-to-date and highly capable equipment.

Rosyth Dockyard

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is in a position to use a golden share over any takeover of Rosyth dockyard and under what condition.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 12 June 1989]: No takeover of Rosyth dockyard is proposed. The special share held by Secretary of State is in the Rosyth Royal Dockyard plc and not the Dockyard Management Company, in which Thorn EMI currently holds a 35 per cent. shareholding. Any change in the share ownership of the management company must receive the prior written approval of the Secretary of State.

PRIME MINISTER

Tropical Rain Forests

105. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister what action she is taking to provide United Kingdom research into the alternatives to products of tropical rain forests.

The Prime Minister: The Forestry Commission has an active programme of research into the cultivation of native trees which are capable of producing wood that can be used in place of tropical timber.

World Environment

Q22. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the world environment.

The Prime Minister: I regularly receive representations about the many major environmental initiatives which this Government have taken at both the national and international level. Most recently, many nations have supported our call in the United Nations for an international framework convention on global climate change.

China

Q89. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding recent events in China.

Q101. Mr. Cash: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding recent events in China.

Q198. Mr. Page: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding recent events in China.

The Prime Minister: Yes, I have received many representations expressing shock and outrage at recent events in China. These are of course sentiments that I and the Government share.

EC (Voting Procedures)

Q113. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the issue of the procedures adopted in determining which directives are subject to majority vote or unanimity; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the replies to him of 6 and 15 June.

Developing Countries (Debt)

Q119. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's policy for solving the crisis of debt repayment for developing countries.

The Prime Minister: The Government support the internationally agreed strategy which was reaffirmed and extended at the spring meetings of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank on 3 and 4 April.

Bradford

Q169. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to pay an official visit to Bradford.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Shipyards (EC Funding)

Q216. Dr. Godman: To ask the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government have any proposals to seek a revision to the list of United Kingdom shipyards with access to the European Community shipbuilding intervention fund; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: As the hon. Member will be aware, the intervention fund is not an EC fund but a subsidy arrangement operated by Her Majesty's Government within the term of the EC sixth directive on aids to shipbuilding. We have no plans to revise current arrangements governing access to intervention fund by individual yards.

Electoral Registration Advertising

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East on 12 June, Official Report, column 265, if she will give the amounts spent on electoral registration advertising for each of the past seven years at current prices.

The Prime Minister: Expenditure on electoral registration advertising over the last seven years, revalued at 1989 prices, has been as follows:

|---|---|
| 1982-83 | 123,762 |
| 1983-84 | 153,631 |
| 1984-85 | 163,240 |
| 1985-86 | 184,243 |
| 1986-87 | 356,494 |
| 1987-88 | 294,190 |
| 1988-89 | 322,833 |

Engagements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 20 June.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 20 June.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 20 June.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 20 June.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 20 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Government Information Service

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what response her press secretary made to the Institute of Professional Civil Servants when it asked him to support a proposed code of ethics for the Government information service.

The Prime Minister: It is not my usual practice to publish exchanges of this kind.

Endangered Species

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list those gifts received in her official capacity over the last year while on foreign visits and during visits of foreign dignitaries to Britain which have required an import licence under the CITES.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 13 June 1989]: In the last year I have received three items of silver and ivory jewellery from my visit to Zimbabwe. These items have all been deposited with Her Majesty's Customs and Excise. In view of the ban on ivory imports announced by the Government on Friday 9 June, I have decided that these items should be retained by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise. Information on gifts given by foreign dignitaries during visits to Britain is a matter for them, but I am not aware of any such gifts which I have received in an official capacity which have required an import licence under the CITES.

Water Power Rights

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list in the Official Report those water power rights which have been acquired by the Government as a consequence of the activities of the drainage division of the Department of Agriculture, indicating how many have been wholly and how many partially acquired.

Mr. Viggers: In the course of drainage division activities the Government wholly acquired water rights on two occasions, once in the upper main drainage scheme and once in Broughshane flood protection scheme. In both cases the right was expunged by removal of a weir and infill of a millrace.

Turbines (Rivers)

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what requirement he has to determine the mean, low water and maximum flow of a river at the sites of water mills, and the capacity of any water turbine, pelton wheel, or waterwheel being installed.

Mr. Viggers: There is no statutory requirement to determine the mean, low water and maximum flow of any watercourse.

It may be necessary when consenting to a new installation to establish the capacity of any water turbine, pelton wheel or waterwheel being installed to ensure that it does not adversely affect the flow of water in a watercourse. It is usually the case that an existing weir or dam is used as a source of power, leaving the regime of the watercourse unchanged.

Employment

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps his Department is taking to increase employment opportunities in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Viggers: The Department of Economic Development, and its two industrial development agencies, the Industrial Development Board and Local Enterprise Development Unit undertake a wide range of programmes to assist the private sector to create new employment in Northern Ireland. In the year to 31 March 1989 the two agencies made financial offers to companies which could lead to the creation of 10,234 jobs. A wide range of advisory, training and other services is also available to assist firms to develop and to become more competitive. In addition it is planned to provide in the present financial year 12,400 work experience and training places to assist the long-term unemployed to re-enter the labour market and to provide 13,800 places for youth training.

Tourism

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the number of new jobs created in the tourist industry in Northern Ireland in the last five years.

Mr. Viggers: Information on tourism-related employment as a whole is estimated only at national level. The available information for regions relates specifically to employees in employment in the hotels and catering industry. Employment in this sector in Northern Ireland increased by 1,810 (or 12 per cent.) over the last five years, to March 1989.

Housing Executive

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing (a) how many void dwellings there are in the area covered by each district office of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive as at the latest available date, (b) how many dwellings in each such area have been void for more than three months and (c) the reasons for such voids or as much of such information as is available to him.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. I am advised by the chairman of the Housing Executive that at 1 May 1989 the number of void dwellings, that is dwellings on which the executive is not seeking to collect rent, in each district office and the number void for more than 13 weeks in each such area is as follows:

Of the total of 6,305 void properties (3·6 per cent. of total stock):

837 are temporarily vacant awaiting allocation or have no tenant available;
1,207 are bricked up due to/or to avoid vandalism;
452 are awaiting improvements which will be completed within 12 months;
520 are bricked up and are awaiting improvements which will not be carried out within 12 months;
487 are bricked up for sale/or homesteading;
1,776 are awaiting demolition in redevelopment areas; and
1,026 are void for a variety of reasons such as decanting or security reasons.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Namibia

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what recent representations he has received from the leader of the Kwanyamas tribe on behalf of eight other Namibian tribes about the role of the Namibian Council of Churches as the sole and authentic agent of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in the administration of the returning South West Africa People's Organisation refugees to Namibia; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what recent representations he has received from the leader of the Kwanyamas tribe on behalf of eight other Namibian tribes about the intimidatory actions of the NANSO student organisation; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what recent representations he has received from the leader of the Kwanyamas tribe on behalf of eight other Namibian tribes about the protection of citizens in the northern and eastern territories of Namibia from the People's Liberation Army of Namibia following the demobilisation of the South West Africa Territory Force; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Mr. Gabriel Kautuima, senior headman of the Kwanyama tribe, met an official of the FCO on 16 June and handed over a copy of a petition submitted to the United Nations special representative for Namibia and the Administrator General of Namibia on the matters referred to in my hon. Friend's questions. Mr. Kautuima was assured of our continued commitment to the United Nations plan for Namibian independence and our support for the efforts of the United Nations Secretary General and his staff to ensure that the best possible conditions prevail for the holding of free and fair elections in Namibia.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Russian Language

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals his Department has (a) to promote school exchanges with the Soviet Union and (b) to promote the learning of the Russian language in schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend visited the Soviet Union last October and concluded an agreement with the Soviet chairman of the State Committee for Public Education which envisaged a programme of up to 50 school exchanges on each side by the end of the 1991-92 academic year. In this, the first year of the programme, 10 school exchanges on each side have been arranged and are under way. In the next academic year, 1989-90, it is proposed that 20 school exchanges can be arranged, rising to 35 exchanges in academic year 1990-91 and 50 exchanges in academic year 1991-92. At that stage up to 2,000 pupils from each country will be involved.

The aim of the programme is to use the medium of school-to-school twinning to promote a greater degree of mutual understanding among young people of both countries through a wide programme of exchange of schoolchildren and teachers, letters, photographs, tapes and project work, for example in mathematics, science and computing. Language-based exchanges will be a significant component, but the intention is to include also the study of subjects in which the practical elements can be shared.

The national curriculum will include a modern foreign language as a foundation subject at secondary level to be studied by all pupils between the ages of 11 and 16. Russian is among those modern foreign languages specified in the Education (National Curriculum) (Modern Foreign Languages) Order 1989 as eligible to be taught as a national curriculum foundation subject. Within this framework, my right hon. Friend is encouraging schools to offer a greater diversity of languages, including Russian, and we are providing education support grants for pilot projects in some local education authorities in England to promote the preparation and implementation of plans for language diversification.

Teachers

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing teacher vacancies by region in January 1989, distinguishing between vacancies in (a) nursery and primary schools and (b) secondary schools.

Mr. Butcher: Full information on the number of teacher vacancies in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in England in January 1989 is not yet available. Figures for those regions where the data are complete are as follows:

| | Nursery and primary schools | Secondary schools |
|---|---|---|
| North | 92 | 62 |
| Yorkshire and Humberside | 200 | 155 |
| North West | 307 | 219 |
| East Midlands | 145 | 145 |
| West Midlands | 222 | 262 |
| East Anglia | 47 | 59 |
| Greater London | n/y/a | n/y/a |
| Other South East | 617 | 542 |
| South West | 181 | 161 |

n/y/a = Not yet available.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how many teachers have resigned during the academic year 1988-89;

(2) what steps he takes to monitor the number of resignations of teachers.

Mr. Butcher: Information on the number of teachers resigning during the academic year 1988-89 is not yet available.

Detailed annual returns of teachers in service are made by local education authorities at 31 March, together with information on those entering and leaving service during the previous year. The returns from some authorities are subject to considerable delay, and the most recent period for which complete data are available is the year ending March 1987. The number of teachers leaving full-time service in the maintained nursery, primary and secondary sector in England in that year was 28,960, of which 2,840 were aged 60 or over.

Following a recent report by the management consultants Logica, a number of proposals are being pursued to improve the flow of teacher information to the Department. These include measures to improve the timeliness of the annual returns and the completeness of termly appointment and withdrawal notifications.

Training Grants Scheme

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he intends to introduce legislation to amend the Education Acts to bring all unpaid workers in voluntary organisations within the scope of the training grants scheme.

Mrs. Rumbold: All aspects of the scheme are under regular review.

Design and Technology

Mr. Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects his proposals for attainment targets and programmes of study in design and technology 5 to 16 to be published for consultation.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have now formulated our proposals for attainment targets and programmes of study for design and technology for pupils aged five to 16 in the light of the report from the national curriculum design and technology working group. We are very grateful to the working group for its prompt and helpful report.

I have today referred our proposals to the National Curriculum Council to start the consultations in England required by the Education Reform Act. My right hon. Friend will be initiating consultations as required by the Act in Wales. I have asked the council to report to me on the outcome of the consultations, with advice and recommendations, by 3 November 1989. I have placed a copy of our proposals and of the working group's report, with my letter to the council, in the Library.

WALES

Planning Applications

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many planning appeals were lodged with his office in 1974, 1979, 1984 and the latest full year for which figures are available; and, for each year, how many were allowed.

Mr. Grist: The information is shown in the following table:

Section 36 planning appeals

| Year | Lodged | Allowed |
|---|---|---|
| 1974 | 676 | 127 |
| 1979 | 844 | 164 |
| 1984 | 806 | 229 |
| 1988 | 1,133 | 325 |

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions during the past five years he has called in planning decisions for a final decision.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend and his predecessor have, since June 1984, called in for their own determination 17 applications for planning permission.

Preventive Medicine

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he has taken to promote the cause of preventive medicine in Wales, in particular in relation to the high incidence of heart disease in the Principality.

Mr. Grist: The promotion of good health and the prevention of ill health has been one of the Government's major priorities for the health services in Wales for some years. Within the drive for better health we established the Welsh Health Promotion Authority in 1987 to have specific responsibility for the subject, including the operation of the Welsh heart programme—"Heartbeat Wales". This was to augment the work already being carried out by district health authorities and primary care services. Their priorities in relation to health promotion, which include action to combat heart disease, were set out in the corporate management programme for the Health Service in Wales, issued by the Department last year.

Compact Schemes

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the companies taking part in compact schemes with schools in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Many schools in Wales have links with business and industry, some of which may be along the lines of a compact, but information is not held centrally on which companies are involved.

Community Hospitals

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number and location of community hospitals which have been built or adapted in Clwyd and Gwynedd since 1974.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is as follows:

Clwyd
Chirk Community Hospital
Colwyn Bay Hospital
Denbigh Community Hospital
Mold Community Hospital
Prestatyn Community Hospital
Royal Alexandra Hospital, Rhyl
Ruthin Community Hospital

Gwynedd
Bryn beryl Hospital, Pwllheli
Dolgellau Hospital
Tywyn Hospital

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of those companies in Gwynedd which have been invited to participate in training and enterprise councils.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Copies of the TEC prospectus have been sent to all employers with a work force of 20 or more. I understand that a number of different interest groups have started discussions about TECs in Gwynedd but no bid has yet been received.

Public Bodies

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the names of people from Gwynedd whom he has appointed to public and statutory bodies since June 1987.

Mr. Peter Walker: We do not collect information on where public appointees come from, but as an example the hon. Gentleman may know that the current chairman of the Welsh Development Agency came from Gwynedd.

Population Statistics

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are his Department's estimates for the numbers of people aged 65 to 74 years, 75 to 79 years and over 80 years in the years 2000 and 2020 in Wales; and what percentage increase this represents in each category over the actual figures for the last year in which they are available.

Mr. Peter Walker: Current estimates and the most recent projected figures for the age groups requested are shown in the following table:

Elderly Population of Wales

Thousand

| Ages | 1988 mid-year estimate[1] | Projected Population[2] Year 2020 Number | Year 2020 Percentage change 1988-2000 | Year 2020 Number | Year 2020 Percentage change 1988-2020 |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 65-74 | 271·7 | 260 | −4·3 | 317 | +16·8 |
| 75-79 | 96·6 | 108 | +11·9 | 111 | +14·6 |
| 80 and over | 102·3 | 127 | +24·4 | 144 | +41·0 |

Supermarket, Holyhead

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to be able to publish the results of the application for assistance under the urban development programme in respect of a supermarket development at Holyhead.

Mr. Grist: Applications for urban investment grant are treated in confidence. An application for urban investment grant support towards development at Holyhead has not been made to the Department. Decisions on full appraisal of UIG grant applications are made within 10 weeks of all the appropriate information being received by the Welsh Office.

Fishing Industry

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now provide the information required by the European Commission for the multi-annual guidance programme, in order to unlock the grants approved for construction of new beam trawlers and other fishing vessels.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Commission will continue to suspend construction aid for United Kingdom fishing vessels until we can demonstrate sufficient progress towards meeting our programme targets. We are currently considering with the industry various options for reducing fleet capacity.

Food Irradiation

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what research has been undertaken into the effect of food irradiation on the nutritional content of food; and with what results.

Mr. Ryder: I refer my hon. Friend to the report on the safety and wholesomeness of irradiated foods by the Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office in 1986, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Chapter 7 and appendix E refer.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Book Publishing

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what estimates he has of the proportion of the United Kingdom-based book publishing industry which is American owned.

Mr. Atkins: There are a number of measures of publishers' output, none of which is readily available by the nationality of the publisher. The information necessary to make an estimate could be assembled only at disproportionate cost and would be subject to qualifications.

Merger Policy

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress has been made in the Council of Ministers in relation to the proposed directive on merger policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The proposed EC merger control regulation was most recently discussed in the Council of Ministers on 3 May and there was a brief follow-up discussion at the June Council. It was concluded that further consideration was needed, particularly of thresholds, criteria and the relationship of a regulation to articles 85 and 86 (EEC).

Frag-12

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether an application has been made for a manufacturing patent for a weapon described as Frag-12.

Mr. Forth: An application for a patent for Frag-12 has been made, but the application has not yet been published.

EC Technical Committees

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the technical committees of the European standardisation committee, indicating in each case the country of the European Economic Community that provides the secretariat, and also the number of technical committee secretariats held by each country of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Forth: The latest information available is as follows:

List of CEN technical committees as at 2 May 1989

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Total number of CEN technical committees (TCs) | 138 |
| Secretariats: | |

Cars (UK Content)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those makes of car which are 50 per cent. or more United Kingdom value.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 19 June 1989]: All cars manufactured in the United Kingdom by the volume producers have over 50 per cent. United Kingdom content by value. A list of specific models would serve little purpose, since in a number of cases the United Kingdom content of the same models sold here by the multinational producers (Ford, Vauxhall and Peugeot Talbot) will depend on whether they have been produced in this country or at the companies' plants elsewhere in Europe.

China

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will discuss with his consultative committee colleagues the immediate tightening of the rules that apply to China; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I have been asked to reply.

The United Kingdom will be discussing with its partners in the Co-ordinating Committee for Multilateral Export Control (COCOM) the implications of events in China for the present export control policy in COCOM towards China.

Amendments to the COCOM control lists, which can be agreed only by consensus, are made on strategic rather than political grounds, following an assessment of the strategic threat posed by a given country to Western security. Decisions in COCOM, including any relating to China, will be based on this criterion.

ENERGY

AGR Fuel Rods

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many spent AGR fuel rods have been reprocessed at Sellafield to date; and what is the expected capacity at Sellafield for reprocessing spent AGR fuel rods for each year from 1989 to 2000.

Mr. Michael Spicer: To date some 18 tonnes u of AGR fuel from the Windscale AGR has been reprocessed at Sellafield. This was carried out for the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority in the early 1970s in a facility that was shut down in 1973.

The thermal oxide reprocessing plant is scheduled to begin reprocessing operations in late 1992. In its first 10 years of operation, BNFL has contracted to reprocess 6,000 tonnes u of fuel, of which 1,850 tonnes u is AGR fuel (some 40,000 AGR fuel assemblies) from the home generating boards and some 30 tonnes u of fuel from Windscale for the authority. It is expected that an additional 1,000 tonnes of capacity will be available during the first 10 years of the plant, so that additional capacity could be allocated to AGR fuel.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the problem of conversion of spent AGR fuel rods in storage under water at Sellafield; what proportion are corroded; after how many years under water corrosion becomes a problem; what problems are encountered in reprocessing badly corroded AGR fuel; and how much more expensive it is to reprocess.

Mr. Michael Spicer: BNFL did experience problems with corrosion in one out of its three storage ponds some four years ago. The measures taken to deal with these were successful. The company estimated that only some 3·5 per cent. of the fuel pins housed there had suffered. Representative samples have been dismantled without any problems and reprocessing should proceed smoothly with no additional costs to be incurred by the generating boards.

British Nuclear Fuels plc has carried out extensive research into the storage of AGR fuel under water. I am advised that all available evidence suggests that, for fuel maintained in the correct water chemistry, no significant corrosion will occur for at least 10 years, and possibly longer.

Nuclear Materials (Safeguards)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy on how many occasions nuclear material has been withdrawn from safeguards under article 14 of the tripartite safeguards treaty between the United Kingdom, Euratom and the International Atomic Energy Agency; and if he will list those occasions by date, facility, amount of nuclear material involved and when the withdrawal constituted a temporary change of status for operational convenience rather than use of the material for national security reasons.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member on 15 June 1989, at column 486.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when it was agreed by (a) member states of the European Atomic Energy Community and (b) member states and the board of governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency, that the principle of fungibility should apply to consignments of civil nuclear materials in regard to application of safeguards.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I am advised that the existing practice regarding fungibility was formally recognised by member states of the European Atomic Energy Community by a statement of interpretation upon the adoption of Regulation 3227/76 of 19 October 1976.

Spent Fuel Rods

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many spent fuel rods from advanced gas-cooled reactors await reprocessing in Sellafield.

Mr. Michael Spicer: At 31 March 1989, some 895 tonnes u of spent AGR fuel (some 21,000 AGR fuel assemblies) and some 24 tonnes u of fuel (1,900 assemblies) from the Windscale AGR were held in storage ponds at Sellafield.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many spent Magnox fuel rods were reprocessed at Sellafield in each year from 1980.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Weights of individual magnox fuel rods vary considerably and it is the usual practice to give the quantities of magnox fuel reprocessed at Sellafield in tonnes u. On average there are 100 fuel rods per tonne. For the annual reprocessing tonnages from 1980, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Eddisbury (Mr. Goodlad) to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) on 11 December 1985 at columns 638-39, and my reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 1 February 1988 at columns 473-74. The figures for 1986-87 and 1987-88 were published by my Department as part of annual information on plutonium production placed in the Library of the House. The tonnage for 1988-89 was some 875 tonnes u.

West Burton B (Power Station)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has discussed the failure to commence construction of a coal-fired power station at West Burton B with the Area Electricity Board or the chair of the Central Electricity Generating Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Ashfield (Mr. Haynes) on 15 May 1989 at column 4.

Sizewell B PWR

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on the outturn cost of the Sizewell B pressurised water reactor power station and as to whether the construction is on schedule.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is an operational matter for the CEGB and I have asked the chairman to reply to the hon. Member.

Sellafield

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what were the total amounts of (a) alpha and (b) beta radiation discharges from Sellafield in 1978 and 1988.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Radioactivity in liquid discharges to the Irish sea from Sellafield in 1978 and 1987 (the latest year for which figures are available) were as follows:

| | Alpha (terabecquerels) | Beta (terabecquerels) |
|---|---|---|

Coal Industry Productivity

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy by what amount productivity in the coal industry has increased since 1974.

Mr. Michael Spicer: British Coal's productivity, measured in terms of tonnes per manshift, has risen by nearly 93 per cent. from 1973-74 to 1988-89. Between 1973-74 and 1978-79 productivity rose by just over 4 per cent. Between 1978-79 and 1988-89 it rose by some 85 per cent.

Radioactivity

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the total radioactivity in curies contained (a) within all nuclear reactors, (b) within all spent nuclear fuel cooling ponds at reactor sites and (c) low and intermediate level radioactive waste stored at each reactor site.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Details of radioactivity in reactors, spent fuel and wastes stored at reactor sites are management matter for the nuclear reactor operators.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what quantities of contained radioactive waste bearing plutonium traces are stored at (a) Sellafield, (b) Harwell and (c) Dounreay.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The quantities of plutonium-contaminated wastes stored at Sellafield, Harwell and Dounreay are management matters for British Nuclear Fuels plc and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority respectively.

Nuclear Installations

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the existing minimum emergency planning zones around nuclear installations; and if he has any plans to alter them.

Mr. Parkinson: The minimum emergency planning zones around nuclear installations within which detailed and pre-planned arrangements are required to ensure rapid evacuation vary from 1km and 2·4km depending on the type of installation. There are no plans to alter these minimum emergency planning zones. These arrangements also provide the basis for extending the response if required.

Nuclear Emergencies

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when the nuclear installations inspectorate and the Health and Safety Executive intend publishing their guidance on arrangements for responding to nuclear emergencies.

Mr. Parkinson: The Health and Safety Executive's (HSE) booklet "Emergency Plans for Civil Nuclear Installations" which was published in 1982 is being revised and updated to describe current arrangements. The HSE intends to publish the revised booklet later this year.

Offshore Safety

30. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he proposes to take to improve safety in the offshore oil and gas industry.

Mr. Parkinson [pursuant to his reply, 20 March 1989, c. 412]: I have today laid before each House the Offshore Installations (Emergency Pipe-line Valve) Regulations 1989.

Prior to the making of these regulations extensive consultations were carried out with organisations representing those persons within the offshore industry likely to be affected by them, including employers and the trade unions. They have been made on the advice of the Health and Safety Commission under the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971. The regulations require emergency shutdown valves to be fitted on pipe-line risers serving offshore installations together with the periodic inspection and testing of these valves and their control systems. In addition an Order in Council was made on 13 June which has the effect of including these valves in the certification process of the installation.

These regulations represent an important step forward in securing improvements in the safety of offshore pipeline systems. I shall in due course be laying further regulations to deal with subsea isolation systems.

NATIONAL FINANCE

NHS Reform

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the Central Office of Information has been asked to assess the effectiveness of the original launch of the National Health Service review.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 19 June 1989]: COI has not been involved in what is largely a staff communications exercise.

CIVIL SERVICE

Agencies

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will make a statement on whether there have been improvements in the delivery of service to the public and in labour relations in the civil service agencies established so far.

Mr. Luce: The main aim of the next steps initiative is to deliver Government services more efficiently and effectively, within available resources, for the benefit of taxpayers, customers and staff. Developments in service delivery and in industrial relations in individual agencies are matters for the Departments and agencies concerned, (in the light of responsibilities in each agency's framework document). Our overall policy is that each agency will account for its performance on an annual basis through a published report and accounts. We are also developing a policy evaluation framework for the initiative.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Vaccine Damage

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many vaccine damage payments were made in 1980, 1981, 1982 and 1983; and if he will categorise these according to the age of the child when the vaccination took place, the year of vaccination and the nature of the vaccination.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The number of payments awarded under the provisions of the Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979 in 1980, 1981, 1982 and 1983 were 255, 74, 43 and 42, respectively. I regret that the details requested are not available for any of those made in 1980 and only some of those made in 1981 and 1982. The details that are available are in the tables.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he can state the percentage of successful claimants at each of the following stages (a) the examining medical practitioner/adjudicating officer, (b) the medical board and (c) the medical appeal tribunal of (i) deaf-blind and (ii) mentally handicapped claimants of mobility allowance in the survey which is being carried out by his Department; and if he will clarify the methods being used to obtain these figures:

(2) what progress has been made by his Department on the analysis that they are carrying out on a sample of deaf-blind and mentally handicapped claimants of mobility allowance; and if he will make a statement;

(3) when he expects the results of his Department's analysis of a sample of deaf-blind and mentally handicapped claimants of mobility allowance to be published.

Mr. Scott: Random samples of claims made by either mentally or visually handicapped people were examined, after the decision had been given, for each of the three stages of the medical adjudication system. The size of the samples and the outcome of the claims is shown as follows:

| Adjudication stage for medical questions | Sample size | Percentage successful |
|---|---|---|
| Mentally handicapped | | |
| Adjudication Officer | 100 | 36 |
| Medical Board | 100 | 38 |
| Medical Appeal Tribunal | 100 | 46 |
| Visually handicapped | | |
| Adjudication Officer | 100 | 32 |
| Medical Board | 75 | 31 |
| Medical Appeal Tribunal | 25 | 36 |

The samples of cases have been analysed by the type of claim, the availability of additional evidence, and their outcome. Further analysis has been made of the nature of the findings on behavioural and balance problems, as appropriate. In practice it has proved difficult to isolate the effect of visual or mental handicap on the individual decisions about entitlement to mobility allowance, because of the frequent incidence of multiple handicap. The results must therefore be treated with caution. We do not therefore propose to publish detailed findings, but we shall use the information which has been collected when the guidance for examining doctors is being revised.

Pensions

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will amend paragraph 10 of schedule 2 to the Income Support (General) Regulations 1987 to extend entitlement to the higher pension premium to men aged 60 to 64 years who satisfy the condition of paragraph 12(1)(b) that they have provided evidence of incapacity for 28 weeks.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have no plans to do so.

HEALTH

Drugs

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the total cost of the drug bill for the family practitioners service for the years 1978 to 1988 and the amount deducted from chemists' remuneration in respect of discounts for the same period.

Mr. Mellor: The basic cost of prescriptions dispensed by pharmacies in England and Wales and the amounts deducted in respect of discounts for the years 1978 to 1988 were:

| Year | Basic cost £ million | Deduction for discounts £ million |

Trent Regional Health Authority

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital wards in the Trent regional health authority are not in use; and if he will list the reasons why in each case.

Mr. Freeman: I regret that the information requested is not held centrally. The hon. Member may care to write to the chairman of Trent regional health authority for the information he seeks.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details for the Trent regional health authority of each capital project costing more than £1 million (a) actually under construction and (b) at the proposal or planning stage; and if he will give the estimated date of completion for each project.

Mr. Freeman: The information held centrally is given in the table; estimated completion dates are not held for all the schemes at the planning stages.

Food Hygiene

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he now expects to lay before Parliament statutory instruments on standards of food hygiene.

Mr. Freeman: The Food Hygiene (General) Regulations 1970 already provide strict standards of food hygiene in food premises, and related regulations provide the same in respect of markets, stalls and delivery vehicles.

We are currently considering amending the regulations so as to extend temperature controls to food intended for retail sale. We anticipate that these amending regulations will be laid before Parliament in the autumn of this year.

Bio-Plan Ltd.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the extra facilities provided by Bio-Plan Ltd. to the National Health Service patients of Leighton hospital with the date of their inception and the number of patients in the National Health Service who have had access to them.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally. The hon. Member may care to contact the chairman of the Crewe health authority.

NHS Reform

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultations will be held with (a) the staff and (b) the local authority representing the catchment area of any general district hospitals that apply to opt-out.

Mr. Mellor: Self-governing trusts will not opt out but will remain fully within the NHS. When a unit decides to submit an application, the RHA will seek the views of those with an interest, particularly the health authority concerned, staff at the hospital, GPs, CHCs and the local community. The Secretary of State will consider any responses alongside the application.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has had from general practitioners and others on the effects of the proposals in "Working for Patients" on rural practices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 June 1989]: We have received a number of representations from doctors about the possible effects on rural practice of our proposal to increase to 60 per cent. the proportion of a GP's income represented by capitation payments.

A number of features of the new contract will be of benefit to GPs serving rural areas, including the new payments linked to the provision of specific services such as health promotion clinics, minor surgery and child health surveillance and the higher level of night visit fee. The new weighting of basic practice allowance will also benefit GPs with small lists including GPs in rural areas. In particular, the inclusion of home visits in the 26 hours a week availability, and the scope for GPs to fulfil this requirement over four rather than five days where the fifth day is spent on health-related activities in the public sector, will be welcomed by such GPs.

In recognition of the strength of feeling among rural GPs against our earlier proposal to introduce a new rural supplement, we agreed with the general medical services committee's negotiators on 4 May that the rural practice payments scheme will continue pending its revision by the central advisory committee on rural practice payments.

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what change in administrative arrangements he intends to introduce for those specialised regional units in teaching hospitals where a close working relationship between the basic scientific research and developing clinical practice is common practice.

Mr. Mellor: The Government are still developing the details necessary for the implementation of "Working for Patients", but they recognise the value of the links between basic scientific research and developing clinical practice, and are taking these into account as their plans develop.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will detail those points where a substantial number of general practitioners are understood to support the National Health Service White Paper; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: A substantial number of general practitioners support our proposals for:

retaining the principles on which the NHS was based;
better management in the NHS and the greater involvement of doctors in it;
clinically led medical audit;
extending resource management and better information systems so that the costs and results of decisions can be taken fully into account and so that the health service, for the first time, knows what it is doing, why, at what cost and to what standards;
the need for a comprehensive health service;
the vital role of a high standard of medical education and of an effective research programme;
the need to build on the excellent track record of the NHS to meet the changing demands of the coming decade; the principle of money following patients; and many general practitioners have expressed interest in practice budgets.

We are continuing discussions with representatives of the medical profession on the implementation of these and our other proposals.

General Practitioners

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the trend in the number of general practitioners since 1979.

Mr. Mellor: The table gives the number of general medical practitioners in England for each year between 1979 and 1988 (the latest year for which figures are available). The figures show that the number of general medical practitioners in England has risen steadily since 1979, with an overall increase of nearly 19 per cent. between 1979 and 1988.

NHS Scientists

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action he intends to improve the pay and morale of medical physicists in the National Health Service;

(2) what action he intends to take to improve the pay and working conditions of scientists in the National Health Service;

(3) what action he intends to take to reduce the loss of National Health Service scientists to the private sector.

Mr. Mellor: The pay of medical physicists, non-medical scientists and clinical psychologists is a matter for negotiation between the management side of the Scientific and Professional Staffs Council and the staff side representing scientists employed in the NHS. Negotiations are continuing on the staff side pay claim for 1989-90. The management side has set up a working party to investigate the recuitment and retention of scientists in the NHS and is currently considering its findings.

Toxoplasmosis

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to publish and distribute, through the Health Education Authority, any information and advice for pregnant women about toxoplasmosis.

Mr. Mellor: We are currently giving consideration to the most effective ways in which messages about toxoplasmosis can be transmitted to pregnant women.

Immunisation

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, if he will publish in the Official Report any preliminary figures for the uptake of measles, mumps and rubella immunisation in each health authority in England during the first three months of the measles, mumps and rubella vaccines being available.

Mr. Freeman: Uptake of the measles, mumps and rubella combined vaccine is being monitored monthly in selected district health authorities. Early reports suggest an increase in uptake of 10 per cent. compared to matching cohorts of children vaccinated with measles vaccine one year previously.

Population Statistics

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are his Department's estimates for the numbers of people aged 65 to 74 years, 75 to 79 years and over 80 years in the years 2000 and 2020 in England; and what percentage increase this represents in each category over the actual figures for the last year in which they are available.

Mr. Freeman: The data requested are in the table.

Population of England, thousands

BNFL, Sellafield

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence he has of health problems, in particular those related to tissue and blood cancers, among children living within 10 miles of the British Nuclear Fuels plc's Sellafield facility; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the report of the independent advisory group, chaired by Sir Douglas Black (1), and to the published results of the birth and school cohort studies, recommended by the group and funded by Government (2). The results of the associated case-control study are expected later this year. In addition, the report on cancer incidence and mortality in the vicinity of nuclear installations in England and Wales (3) is also relevant.

NSPCC

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list the sums of money given to the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in each of the past 10 years; for what purpose these sums were provided by Her Majesty's Government; what percentage of the NSPCC's annual general income these sums represented; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what sums of money have been given to the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children for the purposes of training NSPCC personnel in each of the past 10 years; how much money is to be provided to the society by Her Majesty's Government in each of the next three years for this purpose; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 June 1989]: Details are provided in the table.

Details of grants awarded to the NSPCC for each of the past 10 years

| Year | Section 64 grants towards headquarters administrative expenditure | Grants towards the cost of seconding NSPCC staff on to social work qualifying courses | Total of columns (b) and (c) | Totals in column (d) as percentage of NSPCC's total income |

[1]Details of total income are not yet available.

The NSPCC received from the Department of Health £5,300 in the year 1987-88 and £39,198 in 1988-89 for a project it is undertaking to develop child protection training materials for child abuse consultants in local health authorities.

In addition the Prime Minister has announced that the Department of Health will be making a grant of £800,000 over three years towards the cost of the NSPCC's new national training centre in Leicester.

Dangerous Food Products

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has notified the EC under the rapid notification scheme for dangerous food products about (a) salmonella in eggs, (b) bovine products and bovine spongiform encephalopathy, (c) listeria in cheese and (d) mineral hydrocarbons.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 19 June 1989]: Yes, where appropriate the Department has notified the EC. However, questions relating to bovine products and bovine spongiform encephalopathy and mineral hydrocarbons are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Tuberculosis Vaccine

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when Evans Medical, the British supplier of tuberculosis vaccine, moved the production of this vaccine to a new site; what effect this transfer has had on the production of tuberculosis vaccine; and when he expects health authorities to be able to resume their routine school immunisation programmes.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 19 June 1989]: Evans Medical began production of tuberculosis vaccine at its new site in November 1988 and technical difficulties emerged earlier this year. Health authorities will be advised as soon as possible when regular supplies for the routine immunisation of schoolchildren can be resumed.

EMPLOYMENT

Enterprise Allowance

15. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the most recent total number of filled enterprise training places in the Greater Manchester area, by scheme type.

Mr. Cope: At the beginning of June there were 578 filled enterprise training places in the Greater Manchester area. This figure comprises 413 places via enterprise training within the employment training scheme and 165 places on the business enterprise programme, outside ET.

Health and Safety Inspectors (Sunderland)

16. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the recent visit of health and safety inspectors to employers in Sunderland.

Mr. Nicholls: During the week commencing 5 June 1989 a team of inspectors from the Health and Safety Executive's north-east area office concentrated their efforts on a planned campaign of inspections to factories, construction sites and other workplaces in Sunderland. The aims were to raise employers' awareness of health and safety, to give advice to small firms, to publicise HSE's guidance and to identify firms with poor standards.

The campaign was a success. Inspectors carried out 358 inspections, giving advice on a wide range of health and safety matters. Where necessary they used their formal enforcement powers to deal with serious health and safety risks, issuing 58 enforcement notices.

Training and Enterprise Councils

17. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how he intends to monitor the efficiency of the training and enterprise councils.

Mr. Fowler: Each of the training and enterprise councils will operate under a contract with my Department which will set out the specific targets that they are to achieve. Their progress in meeting these targets will be monitored by the Training Agency.

110. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a further statement on the role of training and enterprise councils in the provision of employment training.

Mr. Cope: Training and enterprise councils will deliver and develop employment training, YTS and other Government programmes and tailor these programmes to meet local needs. They will also stimulate enterprise and economic growth in the locality and provide practical help to local employers wishing to improve their own training efforts.

99. Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the role of training and enterprise councils in the provision of small business counselling.

Mr. Cope: As TECs are established in England they will contract with the Training Agency to take responsibility for the counselling currently provided through the Training Agency's small firms service along with the appropriate share of the counselling budget. Each TEC will decide whether counselling will be provided through direct contracts with counsellors or through local enterprise agencies or other appropriate organisations. In Wales counselling for small firms will continue to be provided by the Welsh Development Agency.

95. Sir Marcus Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the role of training and enterprise councils in the provision of YTS.

Mr. Cope: Training and enterprise councils will have responsibility for the operation of YTS in their area, within the framework set out by the Secretary of State for Employment. The councils will deliver the Government's guarantee of a training place for all young people under the age of 18 who cannot find a job, and help to achieve the aim that every young person should have access to relevant education or training leading to higher levels of attainment, nationally recognised qualifications and to a job.

72. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training and enterprise councils have been established; and what progress has been made in attracting two thirds board membership from the private sector.

Mr. Cope: Twenty-two applications have been received by the national training task force which is reviewing these proposals and will forward its recommendations to me. I will announce which TECs have been awarded development funding shortly thereafter.

The response from private sector employers has been excellent.

36. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the handbook for the training and enterprise councils will be published; and whether there will be an opportunity for the public to suggest amendments.

Mr. Cope: A training and enterprise council (TEC) prospectus was published in early March and circulated widely. A draft TEC operating manual for England and Wales was published in mid-April, aimed specifically at people intending to run a TEC, with the intention that it would be expanded and updated as TECs evolve. A copy of the manual was placed in the Library and copies are available to other interested parties on request. The Training Agency will take into account any comments received.

26. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications he has received from parties interested in setting up training and enterprise councils; and if he will make a statement.

49. Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which areas have put forward proposals for establishing training and enterprise councils; and if he will make a statement.

94. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will report on progress in establishing the first training and enterprise councils; and if he will make a statement.

98. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the progress being made in establishing training and enterprise councils.

105. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many expressions of interest his Department has received from groups of employers wishing to form training and enterprise councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: Twenty-two applications have been received by the national training task force, which is reviewing these proposals and will forward its recommendations to me. This is an excellent response. The table lists the areas from which applications have been received.

Secondary Picketing

18. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received about secondary picketing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Government receive representations on many aspects of industrial relations. In the nine years since employers were given the freedom to restrain secondary picketing by the 1980 Employment Act representations on this subject have dwindled to nothing.

Labour Statistics

19. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the latest youth unemployment figures for the Holloway travel-to-work area.

Mr. Cope: In the London travel-to-work area, of which Islington, North parliamentary constituency and Holloway are a part, there were about 54,500 unemployed claimants aged under 25 years.

21. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the latest available unemployment figures for the United Kingdom and the comparable figures for 1979; and what they would have been without the changes in the method of counting unemployment.

Mr. Cope: In May 1989 the level of unemployment seasonally adjusted was 1,835,200, or 6·4 per cent. compared with 1,088,500 or 4·1 per cent in May 1979, on a consistent basis. It is not possible to estimate current unemployment on the basis prevailing in 1979.

106. Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the reduction in long-term unemployment over the last 12 months.

109. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by how much long-term unemployment has fallen over the past year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: In April 1989, the number of unemployed claimants in the United Kingdom who had been unemployed for 12 months or more was 744,120 compared with 1,029,206 in April 1988, a fall of 285,086 or 27·7 per cent.

102. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current number of persons unemployed in the Southend-on-Sea area; and what was the comparable total in 1979.

Mr. Nicholls: In May 1989 there were 3,602 unemployed claimants in Southend-on-Sea local authority area. Comparable figures are not available for 1979 on the same administrative basis and because of changes in the coverage of the count.

91. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the figure for unemployment in 1979; and what is the present figure.

Mr. Nicholls: In May 1989 the level of unemployment, seasonally adjusted, in the United Kingdom was 1,835,200 or 6·4 per cent. compared with 1,088,500 or 4·1 per cent. in May 1979, on a consistent basis.

92. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment in which standard planning regions in the United Kingdom there have been (a) increases and (b) reductions in employment since June 1979.

Mr. Nicholls: Between June 1979 and June 1988 the civilian work force in employment (a) increased in the south-east (including London), East Anglia, south-west, west midlands, and east midlands, and (b) decreased in Yorkshire and Humberside, the north-west, north, Wales, Scotland, and Northern Ireland.

89. Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the rate of fall of unemployment in the United Kingdom and in other comparable European countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The table shows the fall in the unemployment rates over the past two years for the countries of the European Community. Over the past two years the rate of unemployment has fallen faster in the United Kingdom than in any other EC country.

83. Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people aged between 18 and 24 years were unemployed in April 1988 and April 1989, respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: In April 1989, the number of unemployed claimants aged 18 to 24 years in the United Kingdom, was 530,376 compared with 697,718 in April 1988, a fall of 167,342 or 24 per cent.

78. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by how many the total of persons out of work for five years or more has fallen during the past year; and if he will make a statement.

84. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by how much the total out of work for five years or more has fallen since April last year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: In April 1989 the number of unemployed claimants in the United Kingdom who had been unemployed for five years or more was 216,607 compared with 271,242 in April 1988, a fall of 54,635 or 20·1 per cent.

69. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by how much the number of people in employment rose in 1988 in the United Kingdom and in other Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The table shows, for the United Kingdom and the major OECD countries, the increase in civilian employment in the year to the fourth quarter of 1988. The United Kingdom had the largest percentage rise.

68. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the fall in long-term unemployed in the three months to April.

Mr. Lee: In April 1989, the number of unemployed claimants in the United Kingdom, who had been unemployed for 12 months or more, was 744,120 compared with 821,419 in January 1989, a fall of 77,299 or 9·4 per cent.

57. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which major Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country has had the sharpest fall in the rate of unemployment over the past two years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Over the past two years the unemployment rate has fallen faster in the United Kingdom than in any other major OECD country. The unemployment rate in the United Kingdom is now lower than the European Community average.

58. Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the number of people employed in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholls: Between March 1983 and December 1988 the work force in employment in the United Kingdom increased by 2,948,000 to 26,510,000, the highest level on record. This rising trend has now continued for more than five years. The figures have been adjusted for the effects of seasonal variations. The work force in employment is the sum of employees in employment, the self-employed, Her Majesty's forces and participants in work-related Government training programmes.

52. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current level of unemployment in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholls: In May 1989 the level of unemployment, seasonally adjusted, in the United Kingdom was 1,835,200 or 6·4 per cent. the lowest for more than eight years, on a consistent basis.

54. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by how much long-term unemployment has fallen among the 18 to 24 age group in the past year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: In April 1989, the number of unemployed claimants aged 18 to 24 years in the United Kingdom, who had been unemployed for 12 months or more, was 119,160 compared with 179,938 in April 1988, a fall of 60,778 or 33·8 per cent.

47. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he expects unemployment in the west midlands to fall to the level it was in 1979.

Mr. Lee: The Department does not forecast future levels of unemployment.

48. Mr. Robert Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the increase in the number of self-employed people in the United Kingdom since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

53. Mr. Forman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the increase in the number of self-employed people in work since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: Between June 1979 and December 1988, the latest date for which estimates are available, there was an increase of 1,142,000, or 60 per cent., in the number of self-employed people in the United Kingdom. It is estimated that over 3 million people are now self-employed. Self-employed people now represent 11 per cent. of the work force in employment.

37. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of males and females are in employment in each major Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development country; and if he will make a statement.

103. Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which major Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries have the highest proportion of women in employment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The latest comparative information relates to 1986 (except for Germany) and is given in the table. It shows the United Kingdom's percentage in employment to be significantly higher than those of our major European competitors, though lower than those of Japan and the United States. This country's relative position may well have become still better since 1986 as employment has increased more rapidly here than elsewhere.

85. Mr. Tracey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are currently self-employed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: In December 1988, the latest date for which estimates are available, there were, 3,048,000 self-employed in the United Kingdom. The numbers of self-employed have increased by 60 per cent. since June 1979 and currently represent 11 per cent. of the work force in employment.

100. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of people self-employed in April 1989 and April 1983, respectively.

Mr. Nicholls: In December 1988, the latest date for which figures are available there were 3,048,000 self-employed people in the United Kingdom and in March 1983 there were 1,906,000.

Employment Training

20. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employment training managers there are (a) nationally and (b) by standard region; and how many have been accredited with providing training of high and sustainable quality.

Mr. Nicholls: Nationally there are 1,251 training managers within employment training. All of them are at present undergoing examination for approved status.

The regional breakdown by standard region is as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| Scotland | 233 |
| Northern | 148 |
| Yorkshire and Humberside | 131 |
| North-West | 157 |

76. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to enhance payments to employment training trainees (a) nationally and (b) regionally.

Mr. Nicholls: At present my right hon. Friend has no plans to enhance payments to employment training trainees. However, training allowances are linked to individual benefit entitlement and so are enhanced whenever benefits are uprated. For this reason, training allowances were increased in April 1989. In addition, the levels of other payments to trainees are kept under continuous review and travel payments to trainees have been increased very recently.

74. Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are on employment training in each Training Agency area; and what is the drop-out rate for each area.

Mr. Nicholls: Information on the number of people on employment training in each area office is given in the following table. Information on the number of leavers is not available at the area level.

62. Mr. Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are currently in employment training in South Yorkshire.

Mr. Nicholls: On 2 June 1989, the latest date for which information is available, there were 9,083 people on employment training in South Yorkshire.

40. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many extra staff have been employed by the Health and Safety Executive to monitor health and safety on employment training schemes.

Mr. Nicholls: None. By virtue of the Health and Safety (Training for Employment) Regulations 1988, participants on employment training and similar training schemes at employers' premises are covered by the full range of statutory health, safety and welfare provisions applying to employed persons. Accordingly HSE inspectors do not, when examining conditions at workplaces, differentiate between trainees and employees.

33. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many accidents have occurred on employment training schemes since their inception.

Mr. Nicholls: Since the inception of employment training on the 5 September 1988, 556 accidents to ET trainees have been reported to the Training Agency.

31. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what specific measures are taken to monitor health and safety on employment training schemes.

Mr. Nicholls: Health and safety arrangements for ET closely parallel those for YTS. Training managers have the prime responsibility for monitoring work placements, and they are obliged to ensure that premises are properly notified to the relevant enforcing authority, that proper insurance arrangements are available and that, in general, there is appropriate health and safety management and supervision. Training managers are also required to report and investigate accidents; to provide relevant literature, including the new booklet "Safety First in Employment Training", and to arrange for proper induction and training in health and safety matters.

The Training Agency's own staff conduct monitoring of all these requirements, by sample visits to training managers to check records and documents. They also visit work experience premises on a sample basis.

Benefit Fraud

22. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on investigations carried out by the west midlands employment fraud investigators at the Birmingham convention centre and on Operation Enterprise.

Mr. Nicholls: On 10 March 1989, investigators interviewed 450 building workers at the Birmingham convention site. As a result, 128 people withdrew their claims to benefit. The exercise yielded net benefit savings of approximately £98,000. Forty-four cases are being considered for prosecution.

Operation Enterprise investigated people registered with employment agencies. It commenced in July 1988 and finished in March 1989. Of the 2,350 investigations, 1,100 people withdrew their claims to benefit. The net benefit saving was approximately £800,000. A total of 147 cases are being considered for prosecution.

87. Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on Operation Rag Trade carried out by employment service fraud operators in the east end of London.

Mr. Nicholls: Operation Rag Trade, which was carried out between October and November 1988, investigated possible benefit fraud among people engaged in the clothing industry in the east end of London. Over 1,150 investigations were undertaken with 173 people withdrawing their claims to benefit. This resulted in net benefit savings of £275,000 and five potential prosecution cases.

38. Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will report progress on tackling fraud among benefit claimants; and if he will make a statement.

71. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will report on progress in tackling fraud among benefit claimants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: During the year April 1988 to March 1989, 435,969 investigations were carried out by investigators. This resulted in 86,895 claims to benefit being withdrawn with net benefit savings of £62·55 million. In addition, 4,045 people were prosecuted for social security offences.

Ports

23. Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he plans to meet the general secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union to discuss industrial relations in the ports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has no such plans.

Industrial relations in scheme, and non-scheme ports are a matter for employers and their employees. The Government's proposals for the abolition of the dock labour scheme provides an opportunity for ports which evolve new arrangements to secure better industrial relations and fewer strikes.

77. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many registered dockers under the dock labour scheme are currently on the temporary unattached register; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: According to National Dock Labour Board registers for 30 May 1989 there were 130 registered dock workers then on the temporarily unattached register.

The temporarily unattached register is a product of the dock labour scheme. It maintains registered dock workers on basic pay even though they are not working and is funded by a levy on employers in scheme ports. No other industry bears the cost of such a requirement. The Government are abolishing the scheme so that scheme ports can compete on equal terms.

73. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what volume of Britain's overseas trade is currently handled by dockers working in ports (a) covered by the dock labour scheme and (b) those outside the scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Department of Transport port statistics for 1987 show that 51 scheme ports handled 59·73 per cent. of the volume of overseas trade, while 35 non-scheme ports handled 40·26 per cent.

Ports which bear the costs of the dock labour scheme have lost a substantial share of trade to ports outside the scheme over the past 25 years. They have also lost jobs while jobs in non-scheme ports have grown. The Government are abolishing the scheme to allow all ports to compete on equal terms and win the business needed to sustain jobs.

66. Mr. John Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current industrial dispute in the ports covered by the dock labour scheme.

Mr. Nicholls: It is a matter for the port employers to decide how they wish to respond to unofficial strikes by a minority of registered dock workers. I hope that dock workers will look to their future, and respond to the port employers offer to negotiate locally about arrangements to be established after the dock labour scheme is abolished.

67. Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to reintroduce casual labour into dock labour scheme ports after abolition of the statutory scheme.

Mr. Nicholls: The Government believe that there is no evidence that there can be a return to widespread casual work. Modern ports have no need of it.

Without the scheme's restrictions, non-scheme ports employ few casual workers and employers of 93 per cent. of dock workers in scheme ports have given assurances not to return to a system of casual work. They have indicated a willingness to examine this and other issues on the same port-by-port basis as already applies to other workers in scheme ports and to the one in three dock workers in ports outside the scheme.

56. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications for redundancy have been received from dock workers working in ports covered by the dock labour scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has no means of knowing how many inquiries have been made to employers by registered dock workers about redundancy following the abolition of the dock labour scheme.

The Dock Work Bill which abolishes the scheme provides for the Government to contribute 50 per cent. of payments of up to £35,000 for any registered dock worker who is made redundant in the 18 months following the abolition of the scheme, and 50 per cent. of payments of up to £20,000 in the 18 months thereafter. This will provide redundancy compensation of many times normal statutory requirements and will be in addition to entitlements to early retirement pensions available under the registered dock workers occupational pension scheme from the age of 50 onwards.

41. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received about negotiations between dock workers and their employers in scheme ports; and if he will make a statement.

61. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received about port-by-port negotiations between dock workers and their employers; and if he will make a statement.

97. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received about the port-by-port negotiations between dock workers and the port employers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: On 4 May the deputy general secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union wrote to my right hon. Friend urging negotiations with the employers about a national agreement to replace the scheme.

It is for employers and employees to decide the form of negotiations which best meets their needs. The Government note that the Transport and General Workers Union negotiates locally about terms and conditions for all other workers in Britain's ports, in and outside the dock labour scheme, and that pay rates of registered dock workers in scheme ports are also determined locally. The union, therefore, recognises that local negotiations are an appropriate response to the widely differing requirements of our ports.

The Government therefore hope that the union will lift its veto on similar local negotiations on conditions of employment for the minority of port workers who are registered dock workers.

Mr. Couchman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to discuss dock labour schemes with the Employment Ministers of the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: I have no such plans.

It is for member states to decide their own framework for employment in ports in accordance with national needs and Community policies to minimise distortions to competition.

Foreign Firms

24. Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of foreign firms plan to increase their employment in Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: Although the information requested is not available, I have no doubt that a strong economy and a productive work force will prove as attractive to overseas investors in the future as they have done in recent years.

Small Businesses

25. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many new registrations for value added tax by small firms were made in 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: In 1987, the latest year for which figures have been published, the net increase in the number of VAT-registered businesses was 45,000, or nearly 900 a week on average. The indications are that the rate of increase during 1988 has been faster. The vast majority of VAT-registered businesses are small.

Single Market

27. Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to meet the training needs arising from the completion of the single European market.

Mr. Cope: The Government's plans for meeting future training needs, including those arising from the single European market, are set out in the White Paper "Employment for the 1990s" Cm 540.

Skills Training

28. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to improve skills training in the retail sector.

Mr. Cope: The Government hope that employers within the retail sector will work closely with training and enterprise councils as they are established, to examine the local labour market and assess key skill needs and the adequacy of existing training arrangements.

The Government are also seeking to establish national vocational qualifications based on competence. The retail sector recently launched its new retail certificate in England and Wales and the certificate in retail distribution in Scotland. These qualifications set standards for trainees in the retail sector. The introduction of YTS and employment training into retailing provides trainees with a properly structured training programme leading to these qualifications.

It was encouraging to see that the 1988 national training award winners included winners from the retail sector, for example B & Q and J. Sainsbury.

59. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what help the senior management buy-out team of the Skills Training Agency have received either (a) financially or (b) professionally from his Department.

Mr. Cope: As I told the House on 13 March (Official Report, 13 March column 25), we shall provide financial assistance to the management buy-out team towards the costs of obtaining external professional advice. No professional help has been offered from within my Department.

Tourism

29. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he intends to make an announcement on the future of section 4 tourism grant funding.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend is still considering the future of section 4 funding in the light of the recent tourism review. He will make an announcement in due course.

86. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what recent representations he has received (a) in favour and (b) against the continuation of section 4 grants under the Development of Tourism Act 1969.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has received representations expressing a variety of views about the section 4 scheme and will be making an announcement on the future of the scheme in due course.

75. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he is now in a position to make a further statement on the future of the section 4 scheme of financial assistance for tourism projects.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend is still considering the future of the section 4 scheme in the light of the recent tourism review. He will make an announcement in due course.

Business Growth Training Programme

32. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on his plans to train the self-employed on the business growth training programme.

Mr. Cope: On 24 January I announced that business growth training would provide training for owners and managers of very small businesses in better management and business skills in order to help them run and develop their business (Official Report 24 January column 550]. This applies equally to the self-employed. Further information is available in the Library.

Social Charter

35. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the proposals put forward by the European Commission for a social charter.

Mr. Cope: The Government firmly believe that there is a social dimension to the single European market; because it is directed at creating new jobs, reducing unemployment and improving real standards of living. The Government do not believe that a charter of the kind proposed can contribute to achieving those goals.

International Youth Skill Olympics

42. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what support industry and Government are giving to the international youth skill olympics to be held at the national exhibition centre in August; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The Government welcome the staging of the international youth skill olympics in Birmingham. It provides a good showcase for British industry to show the skills of its young people to the rest of the world. High standards of skill through quality training are essential if we are to have continued success in the market place in the next decade.

Financial support for the international youth skill olympics is being raised primarily from industry. Sponsorship, in the form of cash, loan of machinery and materials, is expected to raise in the region of £4,000,000.

The Government, through the Training Agency, provide financial support each year to the event organisers, Skill UK Ltd. During 1988-89 this amounted to £120,000 and £60,000 has been allocated for 1989-90. A contribution has also been made towards the cost of renting the national exhibition centre.

Disabled People

43. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many young disabled people have been accepted for a YTS place; what percentage of them were in severity categories 1 and 2; and what percentage were in severity category 5 and above.

Mr. Cope: The total number of young people with disabilities in training on YTS on 31 May 1989 was 12,001. There are no figures available on the percentage of young people with disabilities by severity category.

88. Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employers fulfil their quota of 3 per cent. disabled people on their staffs.

Mr. Nicholls: On 1 June 1988, the latest date for which information is available, 7,736 employers with 20 or more workers were employing their full quota of registered disabled people.

Training

44. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will commission further research into the support that industry is prepared to give to non-statutory training organisations.

Mr. Cope: A review of the progress of non-statutory training organisations on a sector-by-sector basis is due to be undertaken early next year. The review will include consideration of industry's support for these organisations.

60. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many places have been taken on Government training schemes in the Merseyside area.

Mr. Nicholls: On 31 May the number of people participating in Government training schemes in the Merseyside area was as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| YTS | 14,958 |
| Employment training | 8,701 |
| Business enterprise programme | [1]236 |
| Business growth training | [1]257 |

[1] Figures for those in training are not kept for these programmes. The figures given are for starts from 1 April to 31 May.

Strikes

45. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many working days were lost through strikes in the first five months of (a) 1989 and (b) 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The estimate for May 1989 of working days lost through stoppages of work due to industrial disputes is not yet available; but for the first four months of 1989 it is provisionally estimated that 256,000 working days were lost, compared with 7,591,000 working days lost for the corresponding period in 1979.

107. Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will introduce legislation to legalise sympathy strikes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: No. The Green Paper "Removing Barriers to Employment", published on 20 March, states that the Government propose to make it unlawful to induce industrial action by workers of an employer not party to a trade dispute except in the case of lawful picketing.

101. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the number of working days lost through strikes in 1988.

Mr. Nicholls: The number of working days lost through stoppages of work due to industrial disputes in 1988 is estimated at 3,702,000. This is about a third of the annual average over the previous 10-year period.

64. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he intends to publish his proposals to limit the incidence of unofficial trade union stoppages.

Mr. Nicholls: The Government are reviewing the law in relation to industrial action with a view to issuing a consultative document over the next couple of months and including proposals in legislation in the autumn.

Council for Social Aid (Manchester)

46. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement concerning the situation of the Council for Social Aid in Manchester.

Mr. Nicholls: The Council for Social Aid operated as an ET training manager through a company called Manchester Diocesan Church of England Council for Social Aid Ltd.

The directors of CSA Ltd. recently decided to put the company into voluntary liquidation when it became apparent that the company could not meet its financial obligations. The decision was a matter for the directors of the company and is not something in which I could intervene.

My right hon. Friend's major concern was to ensure that everything possible was done to minimise the disruption for trainees so that they could continue to develop their skills and improve their job prospects.

All the company's 1,011 trainees have been, or will shortly be, placed with alternative training managers.

Picketing

51. Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to change the law on picketing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Green Paper "Removing Barriers to Employment", published on 20 March, states that the Government propose no change to the law on picketing.

Job Share Programme

55. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many jobs are currently shared under the job share programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: In the year to 30 May 1989, 166 applications were accepted under the job share programme, as a result of which 220 people have gained employment. I believe that the programme can play a useful role in helping unemployed people and encouraging more flexible patterns of work, and my right hon. Friend is considering action to give it more publicity.

Closed Shop

70. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what estimate he has as to the number of employees working in pre-entry closed shops; and what proportion this constitutes of the total number of employees currently working in closed shops.

Mr. Nicholls: Our Green Paper "Removing Barriers to Employment", which was published on 20 March, estimates the total number of people covered by all types of pre-entry closed shop arrangements in Great Britain as being of the order of 1·3 million. This constitutes half the total of around 2·6 million people estimated to be covered by all forms of closed shop arrangements. These estimates are derived from a specially commissioned survey carried out between 22 February and 6 March 1989, a summary of which has been placed in the Library.

British Venture Capital

79. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to meet the chairman of British Venture Capital to discuss the expansion of small firms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Surbiton (Mr. Tracey) on 16 May, Official Report, column 175.

Health and Safety Inspectors

80. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current number of health and safety at work inspectors in post.

Mr. Nicholls: On 1 June 1989, 1,209·5 inspectors were in post in the Health and Safety Executive. The executive plans to increase the total number of inspectors employed to 1,277 by 1 April 1990.

Tyneside Training and Enterprise Council

81. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he now expects to make a decision on the Tyneside training and enterprise council submission.

Mr. Cope: I expect to make an announcement on the application for development funding from the Tyneside prospective training and enterprise council shortly.

National Training Task Force

82. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met the chairman of the national training task force; what matters were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I last met the chairman of the national training task force on 22 May 1989 and we discussed progress on establishing training and enterprise councils. We are very encouraged by the progress made and are confident that we will have a number of high-quality TECs operational next year.

Wages

90. Mr. Beaumont-Dark: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the Government's policy on minimum wages.

Mr. Nicholls: A national minimum wage would raise employers' costs and destroy jobs, including the jobs of those it was designed to help.

Co-operative Enterprises

93. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will make it his policy to provide adequate resources to enable the Co-operative Development Agency to consolidate and develop its work in promoting co-operative enterprises in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: The Co-operative Development Agency is at present largely supported by my Department under the terms of the 1984 Co-operative Development Agency and Industrial Development Act. Under this Act Government funding was increased up to an overall limit of £3 million. At current rates of spending this limit will be reached in the financial year 1990-91. In January this year my Department wrote to organisations representing the interests of the co-operative movement and consulting them on a proposal that the agency's life should not be extended. The views received are now being carefully considered and I hope to announce our conclusions and intentions in the near future.

Wages Councils

96. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the future of wages councils.

Mr. Nicholls: A final decision on the council's future will be made later this year.

Industrial Relations

104. Mr. Dicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on the proportion of foreign firms which believe that British industrial relations have improved significantly in recent years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Such information is not held by my Department. There is no doubt that the last 10 years have seen major improvements in industrial relations. This is illustrated by the decline in recorded stoppages which in 1988 were at the lowest level since 1935. New jobs and employment opportunities have followed this improvement.

Tourism and Catering

108. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to improve skills training in the tourism and catering industry.

Mr. Nicholls: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given on 16 May 1989 to my hon. Friend the Member for Fylde (Mr. Jack) at columns 149-50.

"Perspective on the Future for Resorts"

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he proposes to take following the publication and submission to him by the British Resorts Association of the booklet. "Perspective on the Future for Resorts."

Mr. Lee: I welcome this initiative from the British Resorts Association. I am giving careful consideration to the issues raised and will be responding to the association in due course.

Companies (Compact Schemes)

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the companies taking part in compact schemes with schools in England.

Mr. Cope: The number of companies taking part in compacts is growing rapidly. A list could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Handicapped Children

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will give details of the financial aid available to send handicapped children and their parents to the Peto Institute in Hungary.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Provision is included in the Self-Governing Schools Etc. (Scotland) Bill to enable education authorities in Scotland to pay all or part of the fees, travelling, maintenance and other expenses in respect of a child's attendance at an establishment which makes provision wholly or mainly for persons with pronounced, specific or complex special education needs. The Peto Institute in Hungary is such an establishment. The assistance can include, where appropriate, the expenses of parents or another accompanying person.

Blind People

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many registered blind persons there are in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The provisional figure for March 1988 is 13,760.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a report on environmentally sensitive areas in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend is pleased to announce that a first report on environmentally sensitive areas in Scotland was published today and a copy placed in the Library. The report sets out the background to the designation of ESAs in Scotland, the main characteristics and objectives of each of the Scottish ESAs and the arrangements for monitoring the scheme.

Forestry Commission (Wildlife)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the last advice he received from the Nature Conservancy Council concerning the practice of blocking of badger setts and digging of fox earths by fox hunters on Forestry Commission land.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has received no advice from the Nature Conservancy Council on this subject, although it is possible that council staff have given informal advice to the Forestry Commission on a local basis. I understand, however, that the Nature Conservancy Council is preparing a report which will include discussion of the issue.

DEFENCE

HMS Cambridge

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to give instructions to the Property Services Agency with regard to the erection of a proposed fence around HMS Cambridge at Wembury, Plymouth.

Mr. Neubert: The Property Services Agency, acting on behalf of the Ministry of Defence, submitted a notification under the provisions of circular 18/84 to the South Hams district council of a proposal for the erection of new boundary fencing around the gunnery school at HMS Cambridge. The district council has objected to this proposal. No instructions will be given to the Property Services Agency for the erection of the proposed fence until the matter has been determined in accordance with normal planning procedures.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Immigration

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General what is the average time from an appeal being notified to his Department from (a) Bombay high commission, (b) other Foreign Office outposts, (c) the Foreign Office itself, (d) the Home Office to (i) the date of the appeal being set and (ii) the hearing taking place.

The Attorney-General: This information is not recorded in the form requested. Currently, however, it is estimated that the time taken from receipt of the notice of appeal by the immigration appellate authorities in London to the despatch of the appeal papers to both parties' representative in the United Kingdom is four to eight weeks. Appeals cannot thereafter be listed for hearing until both parties' representatives indicate that they are ready to proceed: this is in the hands of the parties, and times vary from a few weeks to several months. If no response is received within nine months the appeal is automatically listed for hearing.

When both parties have indicated their readiness to proceed, the IAA are generally able to list the case for hearing within the following eight weeks, although where a party requests an expedited hearing such requests can usually be met. However, where a party seeks an adjournment, the hearing may take place more than eight weeks after the parties have indicated their readiness to proceed.

THE ARTS

Exhibitions (Private Funding)

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Minister for the Arts what contribution private funding has made to new exhibitions at national museums and galleries in the last 12 months, in addition to public funding.

Mr. Luce: Full details of private funding of new exhibitions are not held centrally but notable examples of such funding over the last 12 months are The British museum's "Treasures for the Nation" exhibition attracting £150,000 from British Gas. The Tate gallery successfully raised £423,000 in sponsorship for exhibitions, and the Science museum's new "Food for Thought" gallery has attracted over £950,000 in commercial sponsorship. Such initiatives are to be encouraged.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Mechanically Recovered Meat

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce regulations to control the use of mechanically recovered meat in food products; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: Mechanically recovered meat is used in a number of meat products. The Food Labelling Regulations 1984 already require that a treatment given to a food, or food ingredient, should be shown in the appropriate place on the label if the omission of such an indication would mislead the purchaser.

Food and Wine Exports

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total amount spent by the European Economic Community and by member states in subsidising the exports of food and wine in the most recent annual period for which figures are available; and if he will include in the total the moneys spent on exporting food and wine from intervention stores.

Mr. Ryder: Expenditure on export refunds for food and wine in 1988 was £6,638 million (provisional), of which £165 million was for food aid.

This includes refunds on exports of commodities from the free market and from intervention stocks. The breakdown between member states is shown below.

| | mecu | £ million |
|---|---|---|
| Belgium | 297 | 201 |
| Denmark | 689 | 467 |
| Germany | 1,543 | 1,047 |
| Greece | 76 | 52 |
| Spain | 395 | 268 |
| France | 2,577 | 1,748 |
| Ireland | 317 | 215 |
| Italy | 557 | 378 |
| Luxembourg | 0 | 0 |
| Netherlands | 2,698 | 1,830 |
| Portugal | 2 | 1 |
| United Kingdom | 636 | 431 |
| TOTAL EC | 9,787 | 6,638 |

Less-favoured Areas

Mr. Marland: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the progress on the case for extending the United Kingdom's less-favoured areas.

Mr. Ryder: Yesterday, my right hon. Friend, the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, handed over to Mr. Raymond MacSharry the EC Commissioner for Agriculture a case to the EC Commission for an extension of the United Kingdom's less-favoured areas by 95,000 hectares of land in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland. This extension will require the agreement of the Commission before payment of any benefit can be considered. At this stage, I cannot say how long it will take to secure that agreement. The form of the submission follows from the initial discussions we have held with the EC Commission, which has made it clear that it will be examining our submission rigorously against the criteria on economic and demographic performance laid down in directive 75/268.

I am arranging for copies of the results of our application of these criteria, together with an illustrative map of the areas submitted to the Commission, to be placed in the Library at the House and in local Ministry offices in the areas concerned. Farmers, who made representations following the 1984 extension, will be notified individually whether their land has been included in the submission.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Hague: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish a report on the environmentally sensitive areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The first report on the environmentally sensitive areas scheme is being published today by HMSO, meeting our obligation under section 18(8) of the Agriculture Act 1986.

The environmentally sensitive areas scheme has been warmly welcomed by conservation bodies and farmers alike. Since going to press we have received further applications from over 300 farmers wishing to bring over 9,000 hectares (22,230 acres) of their land into the scheme this year. Overall, this gives us a total of 2,708 applications and agreements covering 110,495 hectares (273,000 acres) of land in England alone since the scheme was introduced in 1987. This represents over 90 per cent. of the land which we considered likely to enter the scheme and shows overwhelmingly the farming industry's commitment to environmentally conscious farming. It points to real progress in conserving some of our most beautiful countryside.

My colleagues the Secretaries of State for Wales and Scotland have made similar announcements. The report sets out how the scheme operates in each of the designated areas and how we intend to assess its impact. I hope it will add to a wider understanding of environmentally sensitive areas and what they are designed to achieve.

Copies of this report have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and will be available from HMSO bookshops.

Agriculture Council

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Agriculture Council in Luxembourg on 19 and 20 June.

Mr. MacGregor: The main item on the agenda of this Council, at which I represented the Government, was the Commission's proposal for changes to the support arrangements for sheep. The Commission indicated ways in which it might be prepared to adjust its proposal. I emphasised the main points which would be necessary for the proposals to be acceptable to the United Kingdom including the conditions which are necessary for a unified regime. Discussion showed that major differences of view persist and the Council will return to the matter at a subsequent meeting.

The arrangements for the import of New Zealand butter into the United Kingdom, which some member states regard as closely linked to progress in the support system for sheep, were rolled forward for a further month (July) on the basis of unchanged quantities and prices.

The Council adopted a directive laying down health and hygiene standards for egg products. This will bring legislative standards for pasteurised egg in the Community as a whole up to the level of the best practices already applied by the major United Kingdom egg producers.

HOME DEPARTMENT

"Broadcasting in the 1990s"

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to reply to the United Christian Broadcasters letter to him on the White Paper, "Broadcasting in the 1990s"; and if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Renton: I have today placed in the Library a copy of my private secretary's reply of 8 June.

Drugs

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the policy of his Department as to the requirements of each prison in England and Wales to report the finding of drugs; and how often such reports are required to be made.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: All prison service establishments are required to report to their regional office every find which is made of an illicit drug. A report on each incident should be submitted as soon as possible after the find is made.

Voting Rights

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to introduce legislation giving full voting rights indefinitely to Britons abroad for both United Kingdom elections and European Parliament elections, in line with the rights accorded to other European nationals.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has reached any conclusions, in the light of responses to Home Department consultation papers No. 1 Representation of the People: British Citizens Overseas, issued on 29 April 1988, and No. 2 Representation of the People: Absent Voting, issued on 2 March 1989; and if he has any proposals to amend electoral law; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: The Representation of the People Act 1985 brought the United Kingdom into line with most other western democracies by making provision for British citizens to vote whilst living abroad. This step was greatly welcomed by many British citizens worldwide. The detailed arrangements represented a cautious, evolutionary approach. They had the effect, amongst other things, of limiting in time the right to be registered as an overseas elector to five years from the date for which a British citizen was last registered as a United Kingdom resident; requiring the applicant to make a declaration, including a prescribed statement about residence intentions; requiring the declaration to be attested by a consular official; and requiring the overseas elector to make a fresh declaration annually. These provisions, stricter than in many other countries, considerably restricted the numbers abroad who could have access to the franchise and imposed significant burdens on those who did. The Government made a commitment, at the time the legislation was passing through Parliament, to review the new arrangements once they were in operation, and, in particular, to reconsider the five-year time limit.

It is evident from the under-use of the franchise during its first three years of operation, and from replies to consultation paper No. 1, that the measures introduced in 1985-86 are unduly restrictive. They exclude from the franchise British citizens working on longer-term contracts abroad, often in the United Kingdom's interests, and they exclude completely anyone who left the United Kingdom before he was old enough to have been included in a register of electors. In addition, applicants are discouraged by the procedures for registration, and they are not reminded of the need to be registered annually, as are their counterparts resident in the United Kingdom.

The overseas electors' franchise deprives too many British citizens abroad of the right to vote and the existing application procedures should be simplified. I am presenting today a Representation of the People Bill to amend the law relating to overseas electors. This would extend to 25 years the period abroad during which British citizens may apply to be registered to vote in United Kingdom parliamentary and European Parliament elections. The Bill would extend the overseas franchise to include those not previously registered as electors in the United Kingdom by reason of age; and it would remove from the declaration which overseas electors must now make the statement about residence intentions. Proposals to amend the relevant representation of the people regulations, so as to simplify further the registration procedures for overseas electors, will be brought forward.

The Representation of the People Act 1985 also extended, for the first time, the right to a postal or proxy vote to any United Kingdom resident, registered as an elector, who cannot reasonably be expected to vote in person at his allotted polling station at a particular election. This reform meant that holidaymakers, people who had fallen ill, and those whose work took them away from home on polling day could nevertheless exercise their right to vote. Detailed conditions, which applicants for the new absent voting facility must satisfy, are specified in regulations. These include a requirement that applications for an absent vote at a particular election must be attested and, for the most general case, that the attester must not be related to the applicant and shall not have attested any other application in respect of the election for which the application is being made. The general election in 1987 provided the first major test of these new absent voting arrangements, and the attestation requirement gave rise to considerable difficulty with many applications being rejected as a result. We have already greatly simplified the application forms in the light of that experience, but it is clear from the response to consultation paper No. 2 that there should be some easing of the application procedures themselves. Accordingly, proposals to amend the relevant regulations will be brought before this House; it will be convenient to deal with them at the same time as the regulations relating to overseas electors.

The Bill which I am presenting seeks also to deal with a pressing difficulty which has developed over the limits on candidates' expenses at parliamentary by-elections. Electoral law makes no distinction for the purposes of such expenses between a parliamentary general election and a by-election. The character of parliamentary by-elections has changed considerably since the law on which the existing scheme is based was passed, over a century ago. They are, increasingly, national events which focus the attention of political commentators and the media and which, consequently, attract the close involvement of the various party organisations. This trend, which is unlikely to be reversed, has implications for the system of controls on candidates' expenses set out in the Representation of the People Act 1983. I propose to review these implications, in consultation with the representatives of the political parties and the returning officers who have responsibility, under the law, for conducting parliamentary elections. As a first step, I am putting in hand the preparation of a public consultation paper which will set out the background and promote consideration of the issues and options involved. Such a review will take time. In the interim it is important that the limits on candidates' expenses at parliamentary by-elections are realistic and take account of the campaigning activity which takes place. Accordingly, the Bill I am presenting today sets a new limit on candidates' expenses at parliamentary by-elections. The new limit, which is four times the one currently specified (which will continue to apply at general elections), is without prejudice to the outcome of the longer-term review I have described.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the Kurdish asylum seekers from Turkey who have arrived since the beginning of May were refused admission at airports and removed immediately; and to which countries they went.

Mr. Renton: None; immigration officers are required to refer all applications for asylum to the refugee unit of the Home Office for decision.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applications were made in 1988; and what were the nationalities of the applicants.

Mr. Renton: This information will be contained in the 1988 issue of the annual Home Office statistical bulletin "Refugee Statistics, United Kingdom" which will be published next month.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Kurdish asylum seekers from Turkey have arrived since the beginning of May; how many are currently held in (a) prison, (b) Harmondsworth detention centre and (c) elsewhere; and if he will list the institutions where they are being held.

Mr. Renton: The information is not readily available in the precise form requested since records do not identify different ethnic groupings. As of midnight on 19 June, 2,838 Turkish nationals had arrived since the beginning of May and had sought asylum; 81 were detained in prison establishments at Winchester, Dorchester, Exeter and Gloucester; 92 were detained in Harmondsworth detention centre, Gatwick beehive and Latchmere house remand centre.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Kurdish asylum-seekers from Turkey who have arrived in Britain since the beginning of May have been interviewed about their claim for asylum; and how many of these have been (a) given refugee status, (b) given exceptional leave to remain, (c) refused leave to remain and removed and (d) refused leave to remain and are awaiting removal.

Mr. Renton: By 19 June the asylum applications from 138 Turkish nationals had been considered in detail. The results of this consideration are:

12: met the criteria of the 1951 UN convention and have been recognised as refugees;
38: have been given leave to remain in the United Kingdom on an exceptional basis;
5: are receiving further consideration;
3: departed voluntarily before a final decision was reached;
61: have been notified of a provisional decision that they do not qualify for asylum and any further information/representations are awaited;
19: did not qualify for asylum or leave to enter under the immigration rules, were refused entry and have been returned to Turkey.

In addition, 128 have made voluntary departures after withdrawing their claims for asylum.

EC Broadcasting Directive

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the Council of Ministers did not approve the broadcasting directive on 14 June; and what plans the Commission has to pursue the matter.

Mr. Renton: The directive was not approved on that occasion because not enough member states were in a position to adopt it. It is proposed that the discussion of the Commission's re-examined proposal on the directive will continue under the French presidency.

Immigration

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many overseas visitors were initially refused entry to the United Kingdom in (a) January to May 1988, inclusive, and (b) January to May 1989, inclusive, and what were their nationalities;

(2) how many Jamaican citizens were initially refused entry into the United Kingdom as not being genuine visitors in (a) January to May, inclusive 1988 and (b) January to May, inclusive, 1989.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 15 June 1989]: The total numbers of passengers by nationality who were refused leave to enter and removed from the United Kingdom between January and April of 1988 and 1989 are given in the table; figures for May 1989 are not yet available. It is not possible from the information available centrally to ascertain how many sought entry as visitors.

Of the 113 Jamaican citizens removed between January and April 1988 and the 307 removed between January and April 1989, 108 and 273 respectively failed to satisfy the immigration officer that they qualified as genuine visitors under paragraph 17 of the rules. Some of the remainder may also have sought entry as visitors but have been refused for other reasons.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were arrested as being illegal immigrants in the first five months of 1989, and in the corresponding five months in 1988; and what were their nationalities.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 15 June 1989]: The available information is of persons against whom action was commenced as illegal entrants, which is published quarterly in table 13 of Home Office statistical bulletin "Control of Immigration: Statistics", a copy of which is in the Library. The latest available figures relate to the fourth quarter of 1988 (in Bulletin 10/89). The figure for the first quarter of 1989 will be published in the next issue around the end of this month. A breakdown by nationality of the figures for the first and second quarters of 1988 is given in the following table.

TRANSPORT

Radioactive Material

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list year by year for the last 10 years how many tonnes of radioactive material were imported to Sellafield; what method of transport was used to convey the material to Sellafield; and from what countries the radioactive material was imported.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: During the past 10 years, over 2,500 tonnes of irradiated fuel have been imported for reprocessing at Sellafield from the following countries: Japan, Italy, the Federal Republic of Germany, the Netherlands, Sweden, Spain and Switzerland.

The bulk of this material has been transported by sea in BNFL's own ships with the balance being sent by rail/sea from European countries. To break this information down by individual years would involve disproportionate effort.

Blood Testing (Motor Accidents)

Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, in the light of the remarks by the chief constable of Gwent, echoing those by petitioners in Nottingham, of 11 May 1987, Official Report, column 150, he will seek to review the ban against blood testing of unconscious persons involved in motor accidents.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The White Paper "The Road User and the Law" (Cmnd. 576) published in February this year recorded in paragraph 2.41 the conclusion that the case for taking blood samples from unconscious drivers was not generally yet felt to be sufficiently strong to overcome the present serious legal and ethical issues perceived to be involved.

Bus Services (London)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport under what powers he has permitted commercial bus companies to operate in the Greater London area which are not under the auspices of London Regional Transport; and if he will state the conditions under which such services now operate.

Mr. Portillo: Local bus services in London other than those controlled by London Regional Transport are licensed by the metropolitan traffic commissioner under part II of the Transport Act 1985. Between October 1986 and March 1989, 101 licences for local services were granted together with 72 licences for excursions or tours. Conditions attached to licences vary according to the case, and are for the traffic commissioner to decide.

Road Safety

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what records are maintained of accidents occurring on the public highway involving registered blind or visually handicapped persons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Our records of injury accidents occurring on the public highway do not include details of the disabilities of people involved. The Department works closely with local authorities and with organisations of blind and partially sighted people to improve facilities available to those who are visually handicapped so that they can go out with greater safety and confidence.

Great Central Railway Line

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss with the chairman of British Rail the withdrawal from auction, on 6 July, of sites on the Great Central line.

Mr. Portillo: These are commercial matters for the British Rail property board and it would not be appropriate for Ministers to intervene.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss with the chairman of British Rail the action he is taking to secure the route of the Great Central line as far as Rugby as a potential route for trains from the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: Securing land which may be required for potential rail routes to the Channel tunnel is a matter for the proposers of the route.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Pakistan (Non-proliferation Treaty)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any information on the terms and conditions set out by Pakistan that need to be met before Pakistan would sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Eggar: Pakistan has stated on several occasions that it will accede to the non-proliferation treaty if and when India agrees to do so.

Hong Kong

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will take steps to ensure that holders of Hong Kong British passports are given equal treatment with holders of full British passports in the matter of exit in emergency situations from the People's Republic of China; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Our policy is to give Hong Kong people holding British nationality exactly the same treatment for consular purposes as any other British national. This approach was demonstrated by the help and advice given to Hong Kong people by the British embassy in Peking and the consulate general in Shanghai during recent weeks.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Manufacturing Trade Deficit

96. Mr. Graham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the manufacturing trade deficit in 1989.

100. Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the manufacturing trade deficit in 1989.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) on 8 June at column 204.

97. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the deficit in manufactured trade for 1989-90.

Mr. Major: The Financial Statement and Budget Report for 1989-90 provides a forecast for trade in manufactures for calendar year 1989 only (table 3.5).

Trade Deficit

98. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his best estimate of the trade deficit in 1989.

99. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the trade deficit in 1989.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 6 June at column 115.

Composite Rate Investigations

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make an announcement on the next composite rate investigation under section 483(5) of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have asked Inland Revenue to consult the savings institutions on arrangements for conducting a survey in respect of 1991-92.

WALES

Perinatal Services

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to receive the report by Professor Sir Eric Stroud on the perinatal services in Wales.

Mr. Grist: I understand that the expert advisory group on perinatal intensive care services in Wales, under the chairmanship of Professor Sir Eric Stroud, is presently concluding its deliberations and expects to report shortly.

Education Authorities (Funding)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a special allocation of cash to local education authorities in Wales to enable them to meet their legal obligations consequent upon the enactment of the Education Reform Act;

(2) if he will make a special allocation of cash to local education authorities in Wales to enable them to meet their obligations concerning the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will make a special allocation of cash to local education authorities in Wales to enable them to meet their obligations concerning local management of schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: LEAs' expenditure requirements arising from the Education Reform Act are considered in the context of the revenue support grant negotiations. Specific additional support for aspects of ERA implementation is provided through education support grant and the LEA training grant scheme and through direct Welsh Office funding of the Curriculum Council for Wales.

River Pollution

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will issue a direction to the Welsh Water Authority to prosecute all alleged industrial polluters of south Wales' rivers.

Mr. Grist: No.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy that when prescriptions are supplied in a combination pack of two or more items which cannot be taken in isolation and therefore are supplied only to be taken together as one course of treatment, only one prescription charge should be levied on the patient.

Mr. Grist: Unless the patient is entitled to exemption a prescription charge is payable in respect of each quantity of a drug prescribed and the fact that, for convenience, two or more individual preparations may be supplied in one pack does not affect the liability for payment. It would be wrong to allow manufacturers packaging arrangements to determine the amount a patient is liable to pay.

Blind People

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many registered blind persons there are in Wales.

Mr. Grist: There were, in Wales, 8,564 people registered as blind on 31 March 1988.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will publish a report on environmentally sensitive areas in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: I am very pleased to say that the first report on ESAs in Wales has been published today. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Similar announcements are being made by my colleagues the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and by the Secretary of State for Scotland.

The report explains the reasons for designating the Cambrian mountains and Lleyn peninsula ESAs and describes the way the schemes are operating. It sets out progress on implementation and outlines our plans to monitor the effects of the schemes.

Progress with the scheme is very encouraging. Almost two-thirds of the holdings in the original Cambrian mountains ESA have applied to join the scheme. Fifty-four per cent. (13,931 ha) of the semi-natural rough grazing in that area is already subject to management agreements, and this proportion will increase when further applications are processed. I anticipate similar success in the Cambrian mountains extended area in due course. In little more than a year, 15,403 ha (38 per cent.) of the 39,700 ha of agricultural land in the Lleyn peninsula ESA has been the subject of applications to join the scheme. This progress is a sign of considerable interest in the scheme, and of the industry's commitment to farming in an environmentally conscious way.

Northern Ireland Police Authority

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when Mrs. Phyllis Bateson was appointed as a member of the Northern Ireland Police Authority; whether her position as a member of the authority was a matter of consultation or discussion with the Government of the Republic of Ireland under the terms of the Anglo-Irish Agreement; and what was the proposed period of her membership of the authority.

Mr. Ian Stewart [holding answer 19 June 1989]: For security reasons it is not our policy to disclose the names of members of the Northern Ireland Police Authority. Nor is it normal practice to disclose whether any views have been put forward on the composition of individual public bodies under article 6 of the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Community Charge

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether his advice issued to local authority associations that access by community charge registration officers to the schools admissions register was not allowed because the register is under the control of school governors still applies; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Yes. The advice on this subject issued in a letter from the Department to the local authority associations dated 2 May, repeated in a letter dated 17 May from my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State to the hon. Member, remains valid.

National Curriculum (Heritage)

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consideration has been given to the needs of archaeology and the conservation and protection of the British heritage in the development of the national curriculum.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend announced on 13 January the establishment of a working group to make recommendations on attainment targets and programmes of study for history within the national curriculum in England and Wales. He asked the group to take into account, amongst other things, the cultural heritage of Britain; it will also consider links between history and related fields such as archaeology. The group's interim report is to be submitted to him by 30 June, and its final report by Christmas.

Employment Training

Mr. Wall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how many people are on employment training schemes whilst studying at college;

(2) if he will list all employment schemes, other than educational training, which are based in the further education sector; how many students are on these schemes; and how they are funded.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment is responsible for administering and funding most training programmes. The information available for the number of students training in public further education colleges in England on 1 November 1987 (the latest year for which information is available), excluding YTS and TVEI, is as follows:

| | Thousands |
|---|---|
| Industrial Type Training Course[1] | 7 |
| Adult Training Scheme[2] | 13 |
| Other Courses[3] | 12 |

[1] Industrial type training courses are courses at a college consisting entirely of training without a further education element, mounted at the behest of an industrial training board or employer, for which an economic charge is made.

[2] Adult training scheme, includes students enrolled under the job training scheme, training for enterprise and wider opportunities training programmes.

[3] Other courses include access to information technology and local grants to employers schemes.

Discretionary Awards

Mr. Wall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much each of the local authorities in England and Wales spend on discretionary awards as a total and as a percentage of their total budget; and what is the maximum and minimum awards given by them.

Mr. Jackson: The table shows provisional outturn figures for the total amount spent on discretionary awards by each local education authority in England in 1987-88; and for the percentage this represents of their total net expenditure on education in each case where the latter figure is available. Policy for discretionary awards including the amount of support which should be given in each case is for each local authority to determine in the light of its own priorities and information about the value of individual awards is not collected centrally. Expenditure on education by local authorities in Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Further Education

Mr. Wall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much each of the local authorities in England and Wales spend on further education as a percentage of their total budget.

Mr. Jackson: Information in the form requested is not available. According to returns made to the Department of the Environment by local education authorities in England the percentage of the total net expenditure on Education spent on maintained establishments of further education other than polytechnics in 1987-88, the latest year for which actual expenditure is available, was as given in the table. The figures include the expenditure incurred on higher education within the other maintained establishments. Nationally, this represented some 20 per cent. of the total.

Figures for Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. Wall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much was spent in England and Wales on further education in each year from 1979 to 1989.

Mr. Jackson: The information requested in respect of spending on further education, formerly non-advanced further education, in England, is set out in the table. The corresponding figures for Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

| Financial year | Cash (net) £ million |
|---|---|
| 1979-80 | 546 |
| 1980-81 | 688 |
| 1981-82 | 790 |

| 1985-86 | 979 |
| 1986-87 | 1,054 |
| 1987-88 | 1,148 |

[1] Provisional outturn spending.

Mr. Wall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on how many further education colleges in total and as a percentage of all further education colleges have (a) subsidised creche facilities for students, (b) free creche facilities for students, (c) no creche facilities for students, (d) subsidised meals for students, (e) sabbatical officers of student unions and (f) a student union office.

Mr. Jackson: No information is held centrally on the number of further education institutions providing creche facilities, subsidised meals or a student union office. Although we have no record of the total number of sabbatical officers, the DES survey of student unions suggested that it is unusual for mainstream further education colleges to have sabbatical officers.

YTS Trainees

Mr. Wall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the number of YTS trainees based in further education colleges (a) in total at any one time, (b) five days a week for the duration of the academic year, (c) five days a week for a limited period, for example, one term, (d) two to three days a week for the duration of the academic year, (e) two to three days a week for a limited period and (f) one day a week on day release.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment is responsible for administering and funding YTS programmes. The information available for the number of trainees in public further education colleges in England on 1 November 1987 (the latest year for which information is available) is as follows:

| | Thousands |
|---|---|
| Total | 141 |
| Trainees attending full-time for the duration of the course | 42 |
| Other trainees | 99 |

University Funding

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements have been made to wind up the University Grants Committee following the assumption from 1 April of full funding responsibilities by the Universities Funding Council.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The terms of office of the last members of the University Grants Committee expired on 31 March. To allow for the orderly winding-up of the UGC's affairs, the secretariat will continue to have an existence until 14 July 1989, exactly 70 years after the committee's inception. I take this opportunity to pay tribute to the way members and officers of the committee have, over that long period, discharged their responsibilities to help steer our universities steadily through periods of great change.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incomes

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are his latest estimates of the median weekly incomes, net and gross, of couples with (a) one child aged under five years, (b) single pensioners aged 75 years or over and (c) couples with one child under 16 years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is set out as follows:

Median net and gross weekly incomes in 1986

| | Net £ | Gross £ |
|---|---|---|
| Single pensioner aged 75 or over | 59 | 60 |
| Couples with (just) one child aged under five | 171 | 209 |
| Couples with (just) one child aged under 16 | 186 | 239 |

Notes:

1. Gross income is defined as income from all sources (earnings, benefits, investment and other income).
2. Net income is defined as gross income from all sources less income tax and national insurance.
3. The median is defined as the middle case in the distribution. Half the number of cases fall below the median and half above.
4. These figures are derived from the family expenditure survey. The figures may, therefore be subject to sampling errors.
5. Figures are given in cash terms rounded to the nearest £1.

Income Support

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what action is being taken to ensure that adjudication officers are aware of the relevant case law in relation to suspension of income support through claimant's misconduct or leaving without good cause;

(2) what guidance he issues to his officials with regard to 26 weeks being the maximum figure for disqualification from income support on the grounds of misconduct or leaving without good cause, and not the standard figure.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Written guidance, which takes account of relevant case law, is given to adjudication officers by the chief adjudication officer in paragraphs 28901-28966 of the adjudication officers' guide. The adjudication officers' guide is published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office. A copy is in the Library.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of disqualification from income support for claimants who have lost their job through their misconduct, or leaving without good cause.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No one is disqualified from receiving income support because they have either lost a job through their misconduct or left it voluntarily without just cause. In such cases the claimant's personal level of income support is reduced—usually by 40 per cent. but by 20 per cent. if the claimant or a member of the family is seriously ill or pregnant and the family has less than £200 in savings. The average length of such reductions could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the rates bill estimates used to calculate the adjustments made in income support to cover claimants' 20 per cent. liability.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The calculations in April 1988 were based on details of rates paid by housing benefit recipients in 1986 uprated to estimated 1988-89 levels. Income support levels were further adjusted from April this year to include help towards the minimum 20 per cent. contribution to the community charge that recipients would be expected to pay. The amounts included continue to provide help towards the minimum contribution to domestic rates for people living in England and Wales.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average domestic rates bill in England and Wales for 1989-90 of people in receipt of income support.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that this information is not available.

Family Credit

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of claims for family credit were approved and resulted in payment of this allowance since 1 March; and what proportion of those claims resulted in payment of £2 per week or more.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A total of 58·9 per cent. of claims decided from 1 March 1989 to 16 June 1989 have been successful.

Information about the proportion of these claims where the award was £2 a week or more is not available, but 97·6 per cent. of all families receiving family credit on 18 June were receiving £2 a week or more.

PRIME MINISTER

Abortion

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if she will publish in the Official Report a copy of the letter she sent to a Pro-Life group about the Government's intention to allow a clause on the upper time limit for abortion to be added when the Warnock Bill is introduced;

(2) what response she has given to the letter she was sent by a local anti-abortion group claiming that 12,000 abortion notification forms are returned each year with no medical condition recorded.

The Prime Minister: On the basis of the information in the questions I regret that I am not able to identify the correspondence mentioned.

European Community Directives

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will outline the arrangements made for the Cabinet Office to co-ordinate the consideration of European Economic Community directives; when the arrangement was established; what existing procedures within Government have been replaced; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Cabinet Office provides support to the Cabinet and its committees on European Community issues as it does in all other key areas of Government business. A European secretariat was established in 1973 within the Cabinet Office specifically to handle Community issues and under the direction of Ministers to co-ordinate the United Kingdom's approach to the Community. Its work includes ensuring that all Community developments of importance are examined in good time; that policy is co-ordinated between the relevant Departments; and that the processes required to facilitate parliamentary scrutiny of Community legislation are properly observed by Departments.

Rain Forests

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to her reply of 8 June, Official Report, column 368, if she will give details of the beneficial measures that Her Majesty's Government are taking in relation to the rain forests.

The Prime Minister: Details of the Overseas Development Administration's activities to protect rain forests are given in a supplement to the December 1988 issue of "British Overseas Development", copies of which are in the Library. More recent activities were described by my hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development on 23 May, at columns 932-936. Following a visit by a team of British experts my hon. Friend hopes to reach outline agreement on a package of environmental and forestry assistance when he visits Brazil in July. We are discussing the provision of technical co-operation in the forestry sector with the Indonesian Government and sent a mission on a successful visit last month.

European Community (Contributions)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the issue of the size of the net contributions made to the European Economic Community by the various member states; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No. The review of the Community's finances concluded at the European Council in Brussels on 11-13 February 1988 confirmed the arrangements for abating the United Kingdom's contributions. The Fontainebleau mechanism remains totally intact; and it will last as long as the new own resources arrangements, reducing the United Kingdom's payments to the Community by over £1·3 billion in 1989-90.

HEALTH

Trent Regional Health Authority

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, pursuant to his answer of 2 March, Official Report, column 314, to the hon. Member for Don Valley, he can now make an announcement as to which other hospitals in the Trent regional health authority are to be involved in the resource management initiative.

Mr. Freeman: I announced on 20 March the names of 50 hospitals which have been chosen to prepare for resource management in the coming months.

Those hospitals in the Trent regional health authority are listed as follows:

| Hospital | District |
|---|---|
| Chesterfield and North Derbyshire Royal Hospital | North Derbyshire |
| Glenfield Hospital | Leicester |
| City Hospital | Nottingham |
| Royal Infirmary | Doncaster |
| Northern General Hospital | Sheffield |
| Children's Hospital | Sheffield |

General Practitioners

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether there will be any implications for the doctor-patient relationship arising from the increased capitation element in the general practitioners' contract.

Mr. Mellor: By increasing the proportion of GPs' income which comes from capitation payments, we will be encouraging greater competition in the family doctor service. This will ensure a better service for patients by giving GPs a greater incentive to provide the best possible range and quality of services geared to patients' needs. As a result, the relationship between doctor and patient will be improved.

North Western RHA

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the Chairman of the North Western regional health authority; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I last met the chairmen of regional health authorities, including the chairman of the North Western regional health authority on 17 May 1989. Topics discussed included management of the service and implementation of the White Paper "Working for Patients". I have had no recent separate discussions with the chairman of the North Western regional health authority. My hon. and learned Friend the Minister for Health and my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State both met the chairman of the North Western regional health authority on 19 June, and discussed health authority appointments and a capital project issue.

Prescription Charges

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why applications for exemption from prescription charges are now centralised through Newcastle; when this new system was introduced; what representations he has received about its functioning; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: In line with a recommendation of an efficiency scrutiny, all claims for exemption from prescription and other NHS charges on low income grounds have, since 11 April 1988, been dealt with centrally by the agency benefits unit of the Department of Social Security which administers the scheme on our behalf. Operational matters are the responsibility of that Department. On other matters the Secretary of State has received one parliamentary question, 17 letters from Members of Parliament and two letters from members of the public referring specifically to exemption from prescription charges.

Stored Blood

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking, what research he is supporting, and what sums from the estimates approved by Parliament for the current year are being expended in respect of the extension of the usable life of stored blood.

Mr. Freeman: The use of improved anti-coagulants since 1981 has extended the usable life of whole blood to 35 days under standard conditions. Experience has shown that this is adequate to ensure that most blood can be used before it reaches its expiry date. In the case of rare blood groups it is possible and worthwhile to extend the usable life further by freezing, and facilities to freeze and store red blood cells have been set up at some regional transfusion centres. The Department is not currently supporting any research on further developments to extend the usable life of stored blood.

Consultations (Waiting Time)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will undertake a study into the waiting time to see a consultant following referral by a general practitioner.

Mr. Mellor: We have no plans to mount a special study, although we do intend to begin to collect, for the first time, information about out-patient waiting lists and times. In and out-patient waiting times in the 22 districts with serious waiting problems are already being investigated by a team of management consultants. Under the waiting list initiative regional health authorities have been asked to agree with their district targets for reducing waiting times for out-patient treatment.

Doncaster Community Health Council

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by name and nominating organisation, the current serving members of the Doncaster community health council.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally. It is contained in Doncaster community health council's register of members which the hon. Member can inspect at all reasonable hours at thier offices.

Hospitals (Flowers)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost to the Trent regional health authority during the current financial year of supplying (a) plastic flowers and (b) natural cut flowers, to hospital wards and other establishments.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not collected centrally. I suggest that the hon. Member contacts the chairman of Trent regional health authority for the information he seeks.

Physicists

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to which health authorities currently experience difficulties in the maintenance of services involving adequate staffing of graduate physicists.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally.

Margaret Pyke Centre

Sir Charles Morrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he is now in a position to make a statement about the future funding of the Margaret Pyke centre.

Mr. Freeman: In recognition of its role as a national centre of training family planning doctors and nurses and its work in preventing the spread of AIDS I am discussing with North East Thames regional health authority ways of making up the shortfall of £100,000 which would otherwise have arisen in its funding this financial year. These steps are being taken as an interim arrangement before the new funding arrangements proposed in "Working for Patients" comes into operation in 1991-92. There will be further discussions with the region about funding arrangements for 1990-91.

Childhood Cancer

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the report by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment on the incidence of childhood cancer in the West Berkshire and North Hampshire area will be published.

Mr. Freeman: The report has been published today and copies placed in the Library. The committee concludes that there is a small but statistically significant increase in the incidence of childhood leukaemias and other childhood cancers in the vicinity of the atomic weapons establishments at Aldermaston and Burghfield in Berkshire. In the committee's judgment, the authorised and accidental radioactive discharges from these two sites, and from the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's establishment at Harwell, Oxfordshire, are far too low to account for the observed increase in childhood cancer incidence in the area. COMARE has considered a number of possible explanations for its findings, including other mechanisms by which radiation may be involved, but the committee's view is that there is insufficient evidence to point to any one particular explanation and it is possible that a combination of factors may be involved.

More generally, the committee states that

"the findings set out in this report, taken with those in previous reports, indicate that there is a statistically significant increase in the incidence of childhood leukaemia in the vicinities of Sellafield, Dounreay and Aldermaston and Burghfield".

Although the committee cannot exclude completely the possibility that these observations are due to chance, or due to the selection of sites referred to them for consideration, it concludes that these findings warrant further investigation.

COMARE has recommended that studies of the geographical distribution of childhood cancer incidence on a nationwide basis be carried out (recommendation 4). In relation to sites not so far examined by COMARE, the committee has stated that "We consider it unlikely that useful information will emerge from further detailed investigations of alleged childhood cancer incidence around individual nuclear installations".

COMARE has pointed out that such investigations would be difficult to interpret until the results of national studies of childhood cancer incidence, referred to in recommendation 4 of the report, are available. Once the results of these national studies are available, COMARE has recommended that it be asked to participate in a review of the evidence relating to the incidence of childhood cancer and nuclear installations (recommendation 5).

COMARE's other recommendations relate to:

The case-control study in West Berkshire and North Hampshire, which is already underway (recommendation 1);

Studies of any possible effects on the health of children of employees at the nuclear installations studied by COMARE (recommendation 2);

Improvements to the national cancer registration scheme (recommendation 3).

The Government are grateful to the committee for its comprehensive report and accepts all the recommendations made for further work. The case-control study of childhood cancer in west Berkshire and north Hampshire, is already underway and is being funded by the Department. This study will aim to identify possible factors which may have contributed to the excess incidence of childhood cancer in the area.

Abortion Agencies

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will list all agencies which are currently licensed by his Department to counsel or refer women for abortions; what are the names of the owners; and whether they are run by a registered charity.

Pregnancy Statistics

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will list (a) the total number and rate of pregnancies to girls aged 16, 15, 14, 13, 12, 11 and 10 years for each of the years 1970 to 1988, respectively, (b) the figures broken down into stillbirths, livebirths and abortions and (c) the total figure and rate for pregnancies to all girls aged 15 years and under for each of those years.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is given in the table. All pregnancies of women usually resident in England and Wales which led to a maternity or termination by abortion under the 1967 Act are included (pregnancies which led to spontaneous abortions are not included). The latest figures which are available relate to conceptions which occurred during 1986.

Maternal Deaths

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will list the number of maternal deaths each year from 1968 to 1988 from (a) all causes, (b) abortion, illegal, legal and spontaneous and (c) unknown methods of abortion; and what are the percentages for the same years of maternal death due to abortions of all types.

Mr. Freeman: The information for England and Wales is set out in the table.

| Year | A | B | C | D | B as per cent. of A |

Abortion

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will state for each of the past five years, the cost to his Department of replying to parliamentary questions about or related to abortion.

Mr. Freeman: The Department does not maintain a record of expenditure on replies to parliamentary questions and any attempt at retrospective estimation would be disproportionately expensive. The cost varies widely according to the nature of the question, the availability of the information requested and, where statistics are involved, the amount of computer time required.

Self-governing Hospitals

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will define locality as it relates to the provision of core services by self-governing hospitals under the terms of his White Paper "Working for Patients."

Mr. Mellor: "Self-Governing Hospitals: an Initial Guide", published yesterday, gives further information about factors to be considered by DHAs in deciding what services should be core services. It explains that a decision on what is acceptable as a definition of local will vary from place to place depending on geography (especially urban versus rural), historic patterns of referral, and social factors such as travelling time and cost.

"Working for Patients"

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under the proposals contained in his White Paper "Working for Patients" what role patients will have in influencing the placing of contracts.

Mr. Mellor: Providing patients with better health care and a greater choice of service should be the overriding consideration in the placing of contracts. The ability of hospitals which are popular with patients, and in demand, to win further contracts and expand their service will be a major factor in increasing the patient-responsiveness of the NHS. It will be supported by the close involvement with GPs either as budget holders or as users of DHA contracts.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under the proposals contained in the White Paper "Working for Patients" what role community health councils will have in the placing of contracts.

Mr. Mellor: We are still considering the overall role of community health councils in relation to contract funding. They will however continue to be consulted on substantial developments or variations in health care provision.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what element of additional cost required for the administration of the placing of contracts he has estimated is needed to ensure that district health authorities, hospitals and doctors have the knowledge and expertise to negotiate satisfactory contracts under his White Paper proposals.

Mr. Mellor: The administrative cost of contract funding cannot be assessed until detailed plans for implementation have been drawn up. Over time any extra costs will be offset by the improved efficiency that contracts will bring. In the meantime the Government have made it clear that the cost of implementing the White Paper proposals will not be met at the expense of patient care. Over £82 million has been made available to cover implementation work in the current financial year.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role community health councils will have in influencing the decisions of new district health authorities and the running of hospital trusts as envisaged in his White Paper "Working for Patients."

Mr. Mellor: Community health councils will as now have the opportunity to comment on the overall pattern of services which district health authorities will secure on behalf of their residents, including in future any provided by NHS hospital trusts.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role local people will have in influencing the decisions of the new district health authorities and the running of hospital trusts as envisaged in his White Paper "Working for Patients."

Mr. Mellor: The non-executive members of health authorities will normally live, work or have some other connection with the area covered by the health authority. At least two of the non-executive directors of NHS hospital trusts will be drawn from the local community. Community health councils will continue to play an important role in representing the views of the local community on health service matters, while health authorities themselves will be encouraged periodically to test consumer opinion and to act on the findings. Health authority meetings will remain open to the public as now and NHS hospital trusts will be required to hold at least one public meeting a year.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role patients will have in influencing the decisions of the new district health authorities and the running of hospital trusts as envisaged in his White Paper "Working for Patients."

Mr. Mellor: Under our proposals the role of health authorities will be enhanced as they switch from the provision of care to the identification of the health needs of their resident population and the purchase of care and services to meet that need. This enhanced role will enable them to focus on the needs of patients. Individual GPs —especially those with practice budgets—will be involved in the direct placement of contracts to meet their patients needs. This brings the provision of care closer to the level of the individual patient, whose agent the GP is. In the future patients will have more say in choosing and changing their GP.

Hospital Trusts

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any element of quality of care or accessibility of services will be built into a contract between a hospital trust and a district health authority or general practitioner's practice.

Mr. Mellor: "Self-Governing Hospitals: an Initial Guide" sets out the minimum contents of contracts and makes it clear that they will specify the measures of quality, relating to both the process and outcome of treatment that will be applied. District health authorities and general practitioners will be expected to use contracts to ensure that patients get the best quality of services available and that where necessary standards are raised. Among measures of accessibility waiting times in particular will be an important aspect or quality.

NHS Policy Board

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which members of his new policy board for the National Health Service were chosen to represent patients' interests.

Mr. Mellor: The policy board is not a representative body; every member will be aiming to promote patients' interests.

Private Health Care

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received asking him to extend the proposed tax relief on insurance cover for the private health needs of over 65-year-olds to support elderly people living in their own homes purchasing supported lifelines to connect them with back-up facilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I am not aware of any such representations, which would be for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer to consider.

Medical Scientists

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in how many relevant hospitals there are vacancies for medical scientists; and how many such vacancies existed 10 years ago.

Mr. Mellor: We do not collect this information centrally.

Blind Persons

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many registered blind persons there are in England.

Mr. Mellor: At 31 March 1988 there were 126,828 people registered as blind with local authority social services departments in England. This figure is provisional.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Consumer Rights

12. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he now has plans to bring forward legislation affecting consumer rights.

47. Mr. Parry: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he now has plans to bring forward legislation affecting consumer rights.

Mr. Forth: We intend to improve the protection given to consumers in a number of ways including the introduction of regulations under the Consumer Protection Act 1987 on price indications at bureaux de change and changes to other legislation affecting consumers' interests.

Financial Services Act

17. Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last met the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board to discuss the progress in implementation of the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Maude: I met the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board on 24 May. The discussion ranged widely over a number of topics concerning the regulation of financial services.

World Trade

18. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which industrial countries have lost a larger share of world trade in the last 10 years than the United Kingdom.

Mr. Forth: The most recent information available for OECD countries is for the first three quarters of 1988. Since 1978 the Netherlands, France, Greece and Norway recorded larger reductions than the United Kingdom in their shares of world trade.

82. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the United Kingdom share of world trade 10 years ago; and what it is at present.

Mr. Alan Clark: The latest figures of world trade refer to the first three quarters of 1988, when the United Kingdom share of total world visible exports was 5·2 per cent. In 1979 the United Kingdom share was 5·3 per cent.

Information Technology

19. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the balance of trade in information technology in 1979 and 1988.

Mr. Forth: The United Kingdom had a trade deficit in electronics and information technology manufactured goods of £440 million in 1979. Provisional figures indicate a deficit of £2,460 million last year.

25. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what further representations he has received on his response to the Select Committee on Trade and Industry's report on information technology.

Mr. Forth: I have received only one written representation on the White Paper.

64. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on progress of implementation of the Government's policy for information technology.

Mr. Forth: My Department continues to pursue a wide range of activities within the policy framework for IT set out in the Government's response to the Trade and Industry Select Committee report on IT (Cm 646).

New initiatives within the last two months have included:

- the launch of a programme to stimulate greater business awareness of the benefits of open IT systems
- a new LINK R&D programme in opto-electronic systems supported by £15 million of DTI and SERC funding; and
- the announcement of the £20 million second call for proposals under the information engineering advanced technology programme.

78. Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects Britain to have a trade surplus in information technology.

85. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects Britain to have a trade surplus in information technology.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster gave on 19 April, at column 332 to the hon. Member for Midlothian (Mr. Eadie).

Communications Infrastructure (Report)

21. Mr. Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received on the Macdonald report on communications infrastructure.

Mr. Atkins: My Department has received a number of representations on the communications steering group report "The Infrastructure for Tomorrow", sometimes referred to as the Macdonald report. The report sets out the conclusions of the group which was established to advise Ministers on ways in which the United Kingdom electronic communications infrastructure may be expected to develop over the next two decades. The report represents the views of the group and not necessarily those of the Government.

National Engineering Laboratory

22. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received on his recent proposals for the future of the national engineering laboratory.

Mr. Newton: To date, I have not received any representations on the proposals for the laboratory, which I announced on 17 May. However, there will shortly be a further meeting of the departmental Whitley council with the Department of Trade and Industry council of Civil Service unions to discuss the proposals.

North East Shipbuilders

23. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last met the chairman of British Shipbuilders to discuss the future of North East Shipbuilders.

Mr. Newton: I met the chairman of British Shipbuilders on 5 June. A number of matters of current interest were discussed, including the disposal of the assets of North East Shipbuilders Ltd.

Aerospace Industry (Output)

24. Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what, in the north-west of England, was the value of the output of the aerospace industry in 1979 and the last full year for which information is available.

Mr. Atkins: In 1979 the gross value added (at factor cost) by the aerospace equipment manufacturing and repairing industry in the north-west (standard region) was £276 million. The corresponding figure for 1987, the last year for which data is available, was £682 million.

Inflation

26. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received on the effects of the level of inflation on industry.

Mr. Atkins: A number of representations which I receive refer to inflation. The great majority of these recognise that the control of inflation must remain the prime objective of economic policy.

Competitiveness

27. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent representations he has received from industry on matters affecting competitiveness.

72. Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent representations he has received from industry on matters affecting competitiveness.

Mr. Maude: Most contacts which my Department has with industry and commerce involve matters having a bearing on United Kingdom competitiveness.

Civil Research and Development

28. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which countries in the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development have reduced the share of gross domestic product spent on civil research and development between 1983 and 1986; and which countries have increased it.

Mr. Forth: The available information relates to gross expenditure on research and development in the fields of science, technology, social science and humanities as a percentage of gross domestic product. On this basis, of the OECD countries for which the information is available in both years only Turkey shows reduction in the percentage.

79. Mr. Faulds: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in which OECD countries the proportion of gross domestic product spent by Government on civil research and development has fallen since 1983.

87. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in which OECD countries the proportion of gross domestic product spent by Government on civil research and development has fallen since 1983.

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Tyne Bridge (Mr. Clelland) on 15 March at column 265.

Japanese Overseas Investment

29. Mr. Raffan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been Britain's share of total Japanese overseas investment in Europe since 1979.

Mr. Forth: Based on information published by the Japanese Ministry of Finance on overseas investment projects notified to them, the United Kingdom received a third by value of Japanese overseas investment projects in Europe over the period 1980 to 1988 inclusive.

Beer (Supply)

30. Mr. Janman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how near he is to forming his conclusions about the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the supply of beer.

46. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to implement the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the supply of beer.

48. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to make a decision relating to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the supply of beer; and if he will make a statement.

52. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next expects to be able to respond to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the supply of beer.

65. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a further statement on the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the brewing industry.

83. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he will make his response to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the supply of beer.

Mr. Maude: We are anxious to bring this matter to a satisfactory conclusion as soon as possible. I made a statement on our preliminary intentions in a written answer on 8 June and my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry developed this in a statement in another place on 14 June.

CBI

31. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last met the Confederation of British Industry; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Newton: I last met the Confederation of British Industry on 5 June 1989 at the launch of the CBI's initiative 1992 series of seminars on information technology.

Trade Balance

32. Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he now expects Britain's trade to be in balance.

54. Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he now expects Britain's trade to be in balance.

66. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what forward estimate he has made of the monthly trade deficit over the next nine months.

Mr. Alan Clark: Forecasts of Britain's trade have been made up to the end of the first half of 1990. The results are in the Financial Statement and Budget report.

Base Rates

33. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the estimated cost to industry of the rise in base rates since April 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The cost to industrial and commercial companies to date of the changes in bank base rates since April 1988, compared with the cost if bank base rates had remained the same since April 1988, is estimated to be about £1·5 billion. The hon. Member should bear in mind, however, that a one percentage point increase in interest rates, even if sustained for a full year, costs companies far less than a one percentage point increase in pay settlements.

Export Credits Guarantee Department (Report)

34. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to publish his response to the Kemp report on the Export Credits Guarantee Department.

Mr. Alan Clark: An inter-departmental working group of officials, chaired by ECGD, has been established to provide advice to Ministers on the options examined by Mr. Kemp. This will report to Ministers as soon as possible.

Direct Investment

35. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the balance of inward and outward direct investment; and what it was 10 years ago.

70. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the balance of inward and outward direct investment; and what it was 10 years ago.

Mr. Atkins: In 1988, net direct investment overseas by United Kingdom residents was £15·1 billion, compared with overseas net direct investment in the United Kingdom of £7·8 billion, giving a net outflow of £7·3 billion. The corresponding figures for 1978 were £3·5 billion and £2·0 billion respectively, giving a net outflow of £1·5 billion.

Sterling Exchange Rate

36. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what advice his Department is giving to export industries regarding the exchange rate of sterling.

Mr. Alan Clark: Our consistent advice to exporters on exchange rates has been that they should consider protecting themselves against the risk of exchange rate fluctuations and consult experts about the best way of doing this.

Eden Committee

37. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he proposes to introduce legislation to implement the recommendations of the Eden committee which were accepted by Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Forth: Those recommendations accepted in the Government's response (Cmnd. 9850) to the report of the Eden committee which did not require primary legislation have already been implemented. It remains my Department's intention to introduce legislation to implement the remaining accepted recommendations when parliamentary time is available.

EC Consumer Affairs Committee

38. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the outcome of the European Economic Community Consumer Affairs Council held on 1 June.

Mr. Forth: As I announced to the House on 12 June, the Council reached agreement on a number of issues, including amendment to the consumer credit directive on December 1988 and continued support into 1990 for the European home and leisure accident surveillance system.

The Commission presented a proposal for a general product safety directive which was discussed for the first time by EC Ministers. Council also noted a report by the Commission on consumer education.

The United Kingdom was unable to support adoption of a draft resolution for the relaunch of consumer policy because of its proposals relating to product quality, which would constrain consumer choice without benefit in terms of additional protection.

Goods (United Kingdom Manufacture)

39. Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he is taking to encourage people to purchase goods made in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alan Clark: The greatest encouragement to purchasing from United Kingdom sources is the availability of competitive United Kingdom products. My Department's policies are geared to helping businesses achieve this.

Natural Environment

40. Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he has any plans to require the annual publication by firms of the effects of their business on the natural environment.

Mr. Newton: No. We believe the emphasis should be on increasing business awareness of environmental issues and helping firms to improve their environmental standards. This is what the DTI environmental programme launched last month is designed to achieve. Details of the programme are set out in the booklet, "Your Business and the Environment", copies of which have been placed in the Vote Office and Library.

Motor Manufacturers (Investment)

41. Mr. Strang: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will estimate the level of investments in the last financial year by indigenous motor manufacturers.

Mr. Atkins: The most recent reliable estimate of investment is from the annual census of production for 1987. In that year it is estimated that net capital expenditure by the United Kingdom motor industry[1] amounted to £612 million.

[1] Class 35 of the standard industrial classification, revised 1980.

Trade Deficits

42. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which Organisation for European Economic Co-operation and Development countries are running a smaller trade deficit as a percentage of gross domestic product than the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alan Clark: According to the most recent OECD figures, of the 14 countries which recorded deficits on their visible trade in 1988, those of the following were smaller, as a proportion of their GDP, than that of the United Kingdom:

Austria, Turkey, Switzerland, Iceland, United States of America, France, Italy, Norway, Australia and Belgium.

59. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster with which European Economic Community members Britain's trade is in deficit.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the 12 months to April the United Kingdom was in deficit on visible trade with Belgium/Luxembourg, Denmark, Federal Republic of Germany, France, Italy, the Netherlands and Portugal.

Inner-city Task Forces

43. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what further progress has been made in the 16 inner-city task forces.

51. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the progress of the inner-city task forces.

Mr. Forth: The inner-city task forces have continued to make good progress in meeting their objectives of securing more jobs and training for local people and encouraging local enterprise. Since the task forces began their work in 1986 they have committed about £33 million in support of nearly 1,100 projects. These generate, or safeguard, nearly 4,000 jobs, facilitate over 23,500 training places and provide support for over 2,600 businesses. Over 450 private sector companies have supported task force projects.

We have always made it clear that task forces would not be permanently located in any one inner-city area. One of their aims is to promote the long-term capability of local organisations so that eventually these bodies can take over from them, thus releasing resources for task forces to be set up in other inner city areas.

I announced on 9 March, as part of the Government's action for cities anniversary announcements, that the task forces would be withdrawing from Leicester, Wolverhampton and Preston; and that new task forces would be opening in Bradford, Granby/Toxteth in Liverpool and Deptford in Lewisham.

49. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what estimate he has as to the number of firms which have now been assisted as a result of the activities of the inner-city task forces.

Mr. Forth: Task forces provide a variety of assistance to existing local firms and start-up businesses; for example, by providing loans through task force development funds and by supporting local enterprise agencies and other organisations offering business advice. Through these and other ways, task forces are estimated to have assisted over 2,600 businesses.

Single Market

44. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the help which is being given to companies to enable them to take full advantage of the establishment of the internal market in 1992.

Mr. Maude: Our 24-hour "1992 hotline"—01-200 1992—provides business with access to a wide range of information and advice on the single market, including detailed factsheets, booklets on standards, and an action checklist. Practical help and advice is available through our enterprise initiative; the consultancy initiatives and the export initiative are particularly relevant for firms seeking to take specific steps to prepare for the single market.

The CBI's "Initiative 1992" is a major private sector source of help on the single market; whilst a number of trade associations, Chambers of Commerce and professional bodies are providing their members with guidance on how the single market will affect their activities.

45. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps his Department is taking to ensure that British firms are made fully aware of the opportunity to become a member of an European economic interest grouping as a means of preparing for 1992.

Mr. Maude: Full details on the form of a European economic interest grouping are given in our main single market booklet "The Facts" and in an article in the current edition of "Single Market News", copies of which are available through our 24-hour "1992 hotline": 01-200 1992. The rules on registering an EEIG in Great Britain are given in the statutory instrument SI 1989/638.

56. Mr. Hague: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on progress with regard to arrangements made by his Department to assist British firms to take full advantage of the completion of the internal market in 1992.

Mr. Maude: Our "Europe Open for Business" information service is constantly updated and expanded to help business prepare for the single market. Recent additions include: a booklet and video on the decision-making process in Brussels ("Brussels Can You Hear Me?"); new standards booklets ("construction products", "simple pressure vessels", "directives under discussion"); a checklist on progress on single market legislation ("White Paper Checklist"). This material, together with our comprehensive single market information pack, can be obtained free of charge, through our "1992 hotline"—01-200 1992. Two new booklets—an action guide for smaller firms and a guide to public purchasing—will be available later on this summer.

57. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent estimates his Department have made of the effects of 1992 on each of Britain's regions.

92. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what further estimates his Department has made on the effects of 1992 on each of Britain's regions,.

Mr. Maude: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to my reply to the hon. Member for Leicester, South (Mr. Marshall) on 19 April at column 177.

Consumer Credit

50. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the level of personal consumer credit.

Mr. Maude: At the end of March 1989 the amount of consumer credit outstanding on the broad definition, which includes bank lending, was £43·4 billion. The vast majority of household borrowing is accounted for by mortgages.

Sunderland Shipyards

53. Mr. Clay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last discussed the future of the Sunderland Shipyards with the chairman of British Shipbuilders; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I met the chairman of British Shipbuilders on 5 June. A number of matters of current interest were discussed, including the disposal of the assets of North East Shipbuilders Ltd.

Toys (CE Mark)

55. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has had recently from the toy trade about the length of time to dispose of stocks which do not have CE marks.

Mr. Forth: Representations have been received from various bodies about the length of time needed to dispose of stocks which do not carry the CE mark. The toy industry has sought a longer period than 1 February 1991 or that no cut-off date should be imposed. Consumer organisations are of the opinion that the proposed cut-off date in the draft regulations should not be extended. My Department will carefully consider all the representations received before making final decisions.

Regional Selective Assistance

58. Mr. Hind: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the levels of regional selective assistance to applicants in the north-west of England in 1988-89.

Mr. Atkins: In the year 1988-89, for the DTI north-west region, offers of regional selective assistance totalled £32·1 million and payments totalled £21·8 million.

China

60. Mr. Gow: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he will make a statement about trade with the People's Republic of China.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the light of the recent events in China the Government have announced the suspension of ministerial and high level military exchanges and a ban on arms sales. The ECGD is maintaining cover for the China market, but awaiting clarification of the economic position before taking decisions on respect of new businesses.

Company Liquidity

61. Mr. McFall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is his latest estimate of company liquidity; and when it was last lower.

Mr. Maude: The liquidity ratio for all large industrial and commercial companies is estimated by the Department's survey to be 72 per cent. at the end of the first quarter of 1989 on a seasonally adjusted basis. It was lower at the end of the third quarter of 1982.

However, profitability of non-North sea industrial and commercial companies has risen in each year since 1981 and the sector has been a large net saver.

Takeovers and Mergers

62. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the expenditure on takeovers and mergers in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what has been the spending on research and development, training and manufacturing investment on a comparable basis.

Mr. Maude: Expenditure by industrial and commercial companies on acquisitions and mergers within the United Kingdom during 1988 is estimated to be £22·1 billion. During the same period gross domestic fixed capital formation by industrial and commercial companies is estimated to have been £37·4 billion. No directly comparable figures are available for spending on training or research and development.

Shops (Closing Down Sales)

63. Mr. Gregory: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has any plans to introduce legislation to prevent shop owners from misrepresenting their closing down in order to attract customers.

Mr. Forth: Part III of the Consumer Protection Act 1987 makes it an offence to give misleading price indications. The code of practice for traders on price indications issued under section 25 of the Act gives guidance on good practice to help traders avoid giving misleading price indications. The code makes it clear that use of the term "sale" normally implies a price comparison and the basis for such a comparison should be made clear to the customer.

Estate Agents

67. Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress is being made in the regulation of estate agents.

Mr. Forth: Over the past 11 months I have carried out an extensive review of estate agency issues. In the course of this review I have had meetings with the major bodies representing estate agents and other interested parties.

The main objective of the review was to identify ways in which the practices of estate agents could be significantly improved to provide a better service. I have concluded that the best way to achieve this is through a combination of self-regulation and statutory provision. I have asked the Director-General of Fair Trading to discuss with the industry the introduction of a code of practice for estate agency to improve consumer protection and enhance standards of service. The code will need to include some form of disputes procedure and a system for monitoring compliance with its provisions. This should create a strong incentive, not least on commercial grounds, for estate agents throughout the industry to comply in order to attract public confidence. The director general has agreed to report to me early next year.

I have also concluded that we need to act against a number of undesirable practices identified in the review of the working of the Estate Agents Act 1979 recently published by the Director General of Fair Trading. I intend to do this by introducing an order under Section 3 of the Act which would define certain practices as "undesirable". I expect these to include, for instance, tie-in sales where the agent refuses to pass on bids unless the purchaser agrees to arrange finance or insurance with hin, "bidding-up", misleading advertising and unfair or misleading contract terms. If an agent is found to be engaging in "undesirable" practices, the director general will have the power to prohibit that person from doing estate agency work. The exact wording of the order will follow from how the code of practice is set out, and I hope to lay an order soon after the director general makes his report next year.

I have also asked the director general to review the arguments for extending the Trade Description Act 1968 to misdescriptions of property.

In the course of my review discussions of the problems and potential solutions have gone wider than estate agency, and have touched on other aspects of the property transfer system. I look forward with interest to announcements by my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor on the subject of competition in conveyancing, and by the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Northern Ireland on the conclusions to their reviews on the position there.

Copies of my report have been placed in the Library and the Vote Office.

Interest Rates

68. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received on the effects of current interest rates on industry.

90. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received on the effects of current interest rates on industry.

Mr. Newton: I have received a number of representations from business about the effects of interest rates on investment. Investment has continued to rise strongly and the DTI's June survey of investment intentions shows that a rise of 13 per cent. of total investment is expected in 1989, with a further increase in 1990.

Brewing Industry (Report)

69. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received regarding the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the brewing industry.

Mr. Maude: I have had meetings with the Brewers Society and with a number of brewers individually. I have also met representatives of the National Licensed Victuallers Association, the Campaign for Real Ale, the Consumers Association and others. In addition, the Department has received a number of letters, representing a range of views.

Footwear Industry

71. Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last met representatives of the British footwear industry; and what issues were discussed.

Mr. Alan Clark: I attended, and spoke at, the British Footwear Manufacturers Federation's annual luncheon on 14 June. Various issues arose, including the EC Commission's investigation into imports of footwear from Taiwan and South Korea and United Kingdom objectives for the GATT Uruguay round.

Mergers and Acquisitions

73. Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the percentage increase in mergers and acquisitions since 1979.

Mr. Maude: Expenditure on acquisitions and mergers by industrial and commercial companies within the United Kingdom in the 12 months to March 1989 is estimated to be about £19½ billion. In current prices this is about 12 times greater than the 1979 total of about £1¾ billion.

Inward Investment

74. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the level of inward investment into the United Kingdom in 1988.

Mr. Atkins: Inward investment into the United Kingdom in 1988 was £11·4 billion of which £7·8 billion was direct investment and £3·6 billion was portfolio investment.

Trade Statistics

75. Mr. Orme: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if any changes are planned in the collection of trade statistics after 1992.

76. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if any changes are planned in the collection of trade statistics after 1992.

Mr. Maude: A proposal for an EC Council regulation, which sets out a revised methodology for the collection of trade statistics between member states of the European Community after 1992 to replace the current procedure based on Customs documentation, has been prepared by the EC Commission and will be considered by EC Ministers later this year.

The Government are seeking to ensure that the collection of these statistics does not impose unnecessary burdens on businesses who are involved in trade between member states and who will be required to provide the relevant data. Recently, this Department has started a consultation exercise seeking the views of trade associations and industry on the possible impact of the proposal.

Statistics of trade with countries outside the European Community will continue to be collected as at present.

Regional Initiatives

77. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he plans to announce any new initiatives to benefit Britain's regions.

Mr. Atkins: Major changes in the focus of DTI's policies were made only last year. Regional policy now operates within a framework designed to encourage enterprise and economic growth in all parts of the country but with extra help available for firms in the regions.

Manufacturing Productivity

80. Mr. Wood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the latest figures he has for the productivity of manufacturing industry; and what were the comparable figures one year ago.

Mr. Atkins: In the three months to April 1989 manufacturing productivity, as measured by output per person employed, was at a level of 119·3, based on 1985 equal to 100. This is six per cent. more than the level of 112·5 for the first quarter of 1988.

95. Mr. Knox: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the most recent figure for output in manufacturing industry; and what was the figure for the same month in 1973.

Mr. Atkins: In April 1989 manufacturing output was at a level of 118·5, based on 1985 equal to 100. This is 8½ per cent. more than the level of 108·8 for April 1973. But my hon. Friend will appreciate that monthly data can be erratic. A firmer based comparison would be that in the three months to April 1989 manufacturing output was 9½ per cent. higher than in the same period in 1973. Manufacturing output is now at is highest ever level.

Postal Monopoly

81. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last consulted the chairman of the Post Office on the lifting or easing of the postal monopoly.

Mr. Newton: We have not consulted the chairman of the Post Office on the lifting or easing of the postal monopoly since 1981. In 1981 the monopoly was suspended for 25 years to permit time-sensitive mail to be delivered by private carriers, provided that they charge a minimum fee of £1 per letter.

Goods (Labelling)

84. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if his Department is intending to make any new proposals for the labelling of goods.

Mr. Forth: Additional labelling requirements will come into force over the next year for furniture and furnishings, and toys.

Manufacturing Output

86. Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the latest figures he has for the output of manufacturing industry; and what was the comparable figure one year ago.

Mr. Atkins: In the three months to April 1989 manufacturing output was at a level of 118·0, based on 1985 equal to 100. This is 6¼ per cent. more than the level of 111·0 for the first quarter of 1988.

British Shipbuilders Ltd.

88. Dr. Godman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last met Mr. John Lister, chairman of British Shipbuilders Ltd.; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Newton: I met the chairman of British Shipbuilders on 5 June. A number of matters of current interest were discussed.

Japanese Market

89. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received about improving access to the Japanese market for British exporters.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Government continue to attach great importance to Britain's trade with Japan. Representations on market access are received from time to time and, where appropriate, we take them up vigorously with the Japanese authorities, both directly and through the European Commission. My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State continued to press the Japanese Government on problems of access during his visit to Japan last month.

Barlow Clowes

91. Mr. Michael: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress he is able to report towards achieving a satisfactory outcome for investors in Barlow Clowes in respect of (a) the United Kingdom-based and (b) the Gibraltar-based operation; what fresh initiatives he intends to take to speed up settlements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Following judgment given on 16 June in respect of the May court hearings, I understand that it has been determined that Barlow Clowes International investors are entitled to recover from Barlow Clowes Gilt Managers (the United Kingdom operation) BCGM assets representing gilts of £16·2 million to the extent that such assets can still be identified in BCGM's hands. Further judgment gives certain BCI investors, who invested after 29 February 1988, the entitlement to recover the relevant part of their investment (after expenses). I understand that the joint receivers are returning to court on 28 June to determine the basis upon which each individual BCI investor's entitlement to any distribution will be calculated.

Although the judgments do not affect those BCGM investors whose funds were placed with Lloyds Bank plc, the outstanding issue of quantification of BCGM investors' claims will be dealt with when counsel for all other categories are present. The joint liquidators have informed me that they will return to court as soon as possible to obtain direction on the outstanding issues.

EC (Discussions)

93. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he next expects to discuss trade and industry matters with his counterparts in the other EEC member states.

Mr. Newton: I have just returned from a Research Council and a meeting with EC counterparts to discuss the Eureka initiative and I am planning to attend the next Industry Council on 26 September.

Manufacturing and Service Industries (North-West)

94. Mr. Butler: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the health of manufacturing and service industries in the north-west.

Mr. Atkins: I am pleased to report that the manufacturing and service sectors in the north-west are both performing impressively.

At current prices, the north-west standard region's gross domestic product in manufacturing rose by almost 27 per cent. between 1984 and 1987 (from £8,653 million to, provisionally, £10,961 million) with financial and business services sector showing an increase of 48 per cent. over the same period (from £3,549 million to £5,268 million).

Major new investments programmes by companies such as Pilkington and ICI, the decision by the Sanwa and Fuji Banks to establish northern offices in the region, and the contract-winning performances by British Aerospace and Simon Engineering, are all evidence of the excellent health of the region's manufacturing and service sectors.

Trade Fairs

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if any changes are proposed in the terms under which the Department of Trade and Industry provides support for United Kingdom companies participating in overseas trade fairs.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. and noble Friend and I are concerned that the Department's support for exporters at trade fairs abroad should be focused more sharply on its main purpose of assisting new exporters to become established in overseas markets. We have therefore decided to raise the overall level of assistance to such exporters but to limit the number of times that a company is supported at trade fairs within any country. The total value of assistance on offer will be unchanged.

The new arrangements for assistance to firms in groups supported by the Department at overseas trade fairs will be as follows:

(i) Subject to the exceptions referred to in sub-paragraphs (iv) and (v) below, support will be limited to three participations per country. Firms which have already received assistance in three or more participations in a particular country will no longer be eligible for support in fairs in that country.

(ii) The level of support for eligible companies will be 50 per cent. of the Department's estimate of the cost of providing stands and certain services at the trade fair in question. This compares with the present level of support which varies between 60 per cent. for the first time participants to 25 per cent. for third time participants.

(iii) Support in the form of travel grants for events outside western Europe will continue for a maximum of three participations, instead of the present four.

(iv) Because it is more difficult for firms to enter the Japanese market, the limit of the number of times on which support can be given there will be five. Assistance will be at the level of 50 per cent. of costs on each occasion. Similarly, the limit on the number of times that firms qualify for travel grant will also be five.

(v) A limited number of fairs are of major international significance and are the principal event for the product sector concerned. Because these fairs are aimed at buyers from all over the world rather than the market of the country in which they are held, firms will be eligible for support in two extra participations in successive events of this sort, in addition to the three participations per country described in sub-paragraph (i) above. The level of support will be the same as in sub-paragraph (ii).

The new arrangements will come into effect for group participations in overseas trade fairs which commence after 31 March 1990, except where the Department has already made a formal offer of support.

Telephone Systems

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what information he has on the extent of provision of leased circuits in Wales, including kilostream and megastream, on the number of towns in Wales catered for by these services and in the case of megastream, on the number of local exchanges equipped with pulse code modulation;

(2) what information he has on the extent to which and the places in which, trunk and local exchanges in Wales have been converted to digital switching and as to which areas are serviced by integrated digital access;

(3) what information he has on the number and location of packet assemblers and disassemblers in Wales.

Mr. Atkins: These are commercial and operational matters for British Telecommunications plc.

EMPLOYMENT

Small Firms (Report)

101. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what consideration he has given to the conclusions of the Public Accounts Committee report on assistance to small firms.

Mr. Cope: The Government's response to the Public Accounts Committee's eighth report is set out in the Treasury minute dated 17 May 1989 presented to Parliament by my hon. Friend the Financial Secretary (command 697). A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he expects to announce the allocation of funds for training and enterprise councils by area.

Mr. Cope: The allocation of funds for an individual TEC will relate to the business plan that the TEC agrees with my Department and will be announced when the TEC is fully approved.

Labour Statistics

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about the trends in unemployment in Hendon, South since 1987.

Mr. Nicholls: In May 1989 there were 1,343 unemployed claimants in the parliamentary constituency of Hendon, South. This compares with 2,562 in May 1987, a fall of 1,219 or 47·6 per cent. over two years. The comparison is slightly affected by the change of coverage in the count from September 1988 due to the new benefit regulations affecting people aged under 18 years.

Rehabilitation Service

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how are the processes of assessment and rehabilitation differentiated within the work of the employment rehabilitation service.

Mr. Nicholls: The assessment process carried out by the employment rehabilitation service results in individual action plans being agreed with clients. For some clients the agreed action plan can include subsequent attendance on a course of employment rehabilitation which is a longer process and normally modular in form.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many clients have passed through the assessment process of the employment rehabilitation service over the last two years; and how many through the rehabilitation process.

Mr. Nicholls: In 1987-88 the employment rehabilitation service helped about 16,000 people in total. About 13,400 attended assessment courses and 12,200 attended rehabilitation courses. In 1988-89 the ERS helped about 26,000 people in total. About 25,300 attended assessment courses and 11,800 attended rehabilitation courses. In each year a number of people attended both types of courses.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many organisations other than the employment rehabilitation service have the facilities to provide residential employment rehabilitation services to disabled people such as are currently provided by Egham and Preston employment rehabilitation centres.

Mr. Nicholls: There are a number of organisations with facilities which potentially could be used for the provision of residential rehabilitation services as currently provided by Egham and Preston employment rehabilitation centres.

My Department has contracted with a number of residential establishments for the provision of services and is conducting negotiations with others.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many vacancies currently exist in the employment rehabilitation service for each of the following grades (a) occupational psychologists, (b) social workers, (c) ERC nurses and (d) physiotherapists; and how many staff in each group are in post.

Mr. Nicholls: The information sought in the first part of the question is not available in the form required.

The number of staff in post by grade at 8 June 1989 is:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| (a) occupational psychologists | 63 |
| (b) social workers | 28·5 |
| (c) ERC nurses | 24 |
| (d) physiotherapists | 5 |

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what publications are available which give guidance to training agents and training managers on the services provided by the employment rehabilitation service; and how training agents and managers can obtain copies of such guidance.

Mr. Nicholls: In addition to references in the training agents' and training managers' handbooks, the services of the employment rehabilitation service have been outlined to training agents and training managers through the Training Agency publication "Employment Training News" and through the publicity leaflets of the employment rehabilitation service.

Disabled People

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he expects to publish the report of the ministerial review of employment provision for disabled people.

Mr. Nicholls: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam) on 8 November 1988 at column 54.

Student Union Fees

Mr. Wall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage the Training Commission pays of student union fees of those students on Government training schemes whilst at college.

Mr. Cope: The Training Agency (formerly the Training Commission) is not responsible for payment of student union fees for students on Government training schemes whilst at college.

Visually Handicapped Employees

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many registered blind or other visually handicapped persons are employed in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: This information is not available. My Department provides a wide range of help to visually handicapped people including specialist placing, rehabilitation and training provision, a personal reader scheme, provision of special aids and equipment and sheltered employment.

We work closely with the Royal National Institute for the Blind in developing these provisions.

Part-time Education

Mr. Wall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many unemployed people studied part-time in further education in each year from 1979 to 1989.

Mr. Cope: Available estimates from labour force surveys show that the number of unemployed people (using the ILO/OECD definition) receiving part-time education in Great Britain was as follows:

| Year | Thousands |
|---|---|
| 1984 | 74 |
| 1985 | 68 |
| 1986 | 79 |
| 1987 | 81 |
| [1]1988 | 70 |

[1] Preliminary estimate

This includes those on a part-time course at university, polytechnic or college, including day release and block release, studying through the Open Tech, Open University or Open College, or studying on another correspondence course. The term "further education" is not specifically used in the LFS question. Data on unemployed persons receiving part-time education were not collected in labour force surveys prior to 1984, on a basis comparable with later years.

Unique Fish (Employees' Award)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment why the employees of Unique Fish in Swansea have waited six months and have not yet received their protective award; and what part of the delay has been attributable to his Department transferring the administrative work from Cardiff to Birmingham and then to Manchester.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 19 June 1989]: Following my reply to the hon. Member on 10 April 1989, the insolvency practitioner has submitted a statement of the amount due. This has been approved by my Department's Birmingham office, and I expect payment to be made shortly by the regional finance office in Manchester. Cardiff office was closed prior to this case and was not involved.

Council for Social Aid (ET Scheme)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what responsibility he accepts for payment to staff on the Council for Social Aid employment training scheme for work done prior to the liquidation of the training scheme.

Mr. Nicholls: Wages owed to CSA Ltd's staff are the responsibility of the company and the employees concerned are its creditors. As such their interests are now a matter for the company's liquidators.

The Training Agency has provided CSA Ltd. with all the funding due under its contract, including amounts to cover wages costs up to the date the company ceased trading.

Job Club (Walkden)

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what are the circumstances which led to the decision to close the job club at the Walkden jobcentre;

(2) if there are any plans to offer alternative job club facilities in the Walkden are a consequent upon the recent closure of the job club at Walkden jobcentre.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answers 16 June 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my Friend the Member for Bury, North (Mr. Burt) on 27 January 1989, at column 810 in which I announced that we would be able to increase numbers helped by job clubs while streamlining the network.

The job club located in the jobcentre at Walkden closed on 28 April 1989. A second job club in Walkden remained open and had enough spare capacity to take on members from the job club which closed. There is also a job club in nearby Swinton.

Employment Services (Privatisation)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what implications his policy of privatising employment services have on future receipts of grants for those services from the European social fund; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 14 June 1989]: Professional and Executive Recruitment has already been privatised, and arrangements for the sale of the Skills Training Agency are well advanced. Such initiatives do not affect support under the European social fund.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Kurdish Refugees

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place a copy of his reply to Charter 87 on the Government's treatment of Kurd refugees in the Library.

Mr. Renton: I hope to be able to reply shortly to Charter 87's letter of 8 June and will place a copy of that reply in the Library.

Punishment in the Community

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list all those organisations and individuals who responded to the Green Paper "Punishment, Custody in the Community", Cm. 424 and indicate which of them were in favour and which against (a) direct payment of compensation awards to victims of crime via court funds, (b) mediation by the probation service, (c) alterations of the minimum 40 hours for community service, (d) increasing the maximum period for attending a day centre, (e) greater use of tracking, (f) giving courts powers to require offenders to stay at home, (g) negative restrictions in probation orders, (h) judicial supervision of the proposed supervision and restriction order, (i) increasing the age limit for the juvenile court to 18 years, (j) giving magistrates or GPs the power to determine in which courts 16 to 20-year-olds should be heard, and (k) the setting up of a new organisation to take responsibilities for the arrangement of punishment in the community;

(2) if he will make copies of the responses of the organisations and individuals who have responded to the Green Paper "Punishment, Custody in the Community", Cm. 424 available to researchers and other interested bodies.

Mr. John Patten: The main organisations that responded to the Green Paper "Punishment, Custody and the Community" were set out in reply to a question from the hon. Member for St. Helens, South (Mr. Bermingham) on 2 May. It is for those who responded to decide whether to make their comments available more widely.

Remand System

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list all those organisations and individuals who responded to the Green Paper, "Private Sector Involvement in the Remand System" Cm. 434 and indicating which of them were in favour and which against (a) privately managed secure bail hostels (b) the privatisation of remand prisons and (c) the privatisation of escort services;

(2) if he will make copies of the organisations and individuals who have responded to the Green Paper, "Private Sector Involvement in the Remand System" Cm. 434 available to researchers and other interested bodies.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Eighty five organisations and individuals submitted comments on the Green Paper. These are listed as follows. Copies of the responses (except that from one organisation which commented in confidence) were placed in the Library when my right hon. Friend made his statement of 1 March at columns 277-78. A wide range of views was expressed on many aspects of the issues raised in the Green Paper, and it would be misleading to attempt to summarise the responses in the form requested. The responses are available for inspection on application to the Remands Unit, Home Office, Room 723, Thames house south, Millbank SW1P 4QJ.

Organisations and individuals who responded to the Green paper "Private Sector Involvement in the Remand System" (Cm. 434)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to take to ensure that 15 and 16-year-olds cease to be remanded in custody to prison department establishments.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are considering the present arrangements for juvenile remands in the light of responses to last year's consultation paper on the unruliness certification procedure and other representations.

Hull Prison

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to improve facilities in B wing of Hull prison; and what resources are being provided for this task.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A programme of work is in hand to improve conditions in B wing at Her Majesty's prison, Hull. To date, the bathing areas have been upgraded and the wing has been redecorated throughout. In addition, a library has been provided and existing classrooms extended; these are now used for association purposes in the evening. Fire precautions have also been improved, and polycarbonate windows are now being installed. The work to date has cost approximately £130,000.

Prisons

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) occupied places in open prisons, (b) unoccupied places in open prisons and (c) prisoners categorised as category D but held in closed prisons, there are in each prison department region.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is as follows:

| Prison service region | Population of open prisons[1] | | Number of unoccupied places in open prisons[1] | | Number of category D prisoners in closed prisons[2,3] |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Male | Female | Male | Female | |
| Midland | 849 | — | 33 | — | 390 |
| North | 958 | 315 | 52 | 35 | 550 |
| South East | 955 | 75 | 96 | 0 | 600 |
| South West | 591 | — | 3 | — | 370 |
| TOTAL | 3,353 | 390 | 184 | 35 | 1,910 |

[1] On 9 June 1989. Open young offender institutions are not included.
[2] On 31 March 1989, the most recent date for which information is available. The figures are known to contain some inaccuracies.
[3] Males only. Females are not categorised in the same way as males.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the average daily prison population and (b) the number of places in open prisons each year from 1966 to 1988.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is published annually in the report of the work of the prison service (appendix 4 of the latest issue, for 1987-88, Cm. 516).

Television (Scotland)

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money has been raised through the ITV levy from Scottish companies for S4C in each of the years since S4C was established.

Mr. Renton: S4C is not funded from levy income. All ITV companies pay a fourth channel subscription to the Independent Broadcasting Authority, which is used to fund both Channel 4 and S4C. The IBA determines the proportion of this subscription to go to S4C, which may be up to 20 per cent.

Fourth channel subscription payments by Scottish ITV companies in the years since S4C was established were as follows:

| Year ending | STV | Grampian | Border | Total (rounded) |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | £ million | £ million | £ million | £ million |
| December 1982 | 2·35 | 0·12 | 0·05 | 2·52 |
| December 1983 | 6·11 | 0·46 | 0·11 | 6·68 |
| March 1985 | 7·21 | 0·53 | 0·12 | 7·86 |

| Year ending | STV £ million | Grampian £ million | Border £ million | Total (rounded) £ million |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| March 1986 | 9·76 | 0·59 | 0·16 | 10·50 |
| March 1987 | 11·11 | 0·55 | 0·16 | 11·82 |
| March 1988 | 12·46 | 0·40 | 0·16 | 13·01 |
| March 1989 | 13·20 | 0·39 | 0·16 | 13·75 |
| Total (rounded) | 62·20 | 3·03 | 0·92 | 66·15 |

These figures do not represent the net cost of the fourth channel subscription to the ITV companies. The subscription is offset by reduced levy and tax liabilities and fourth channel advertising revenue. Precise figures on the extent of these offsets are not available.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the initiatives that he is taking to combat abuse of the drug known as crack.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Bosworth (Mr. Tredinnick) on 15 June 1989 at column 1113.

Gambling

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make representations to other Governments in the European Community that they only authorise gaming competitions on conditions that invitations to forward stakes are not sent through agencies or otherwise to countries whose laws forbid such lotteries within their national territories;

(2) To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has made to other Governments in the European Community to prevent the unauthorised sale of foreign lottery tickets in the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has approached the authorities in the Federal Republic of Germany to explore means of stopping the posting of invitations to participate in lotteries based there to people in Great Britain, as the promotion and conduct of foreign lotteries here is unlawful under the Lotteries and Amusements Act 1976. We have no evidence of need to ask for a similar approach to be made to the authorities in any other member state of the Community, but we would certainly do so if necessary. Our understanding is that gambling legislation is a matter for each member state of the Community, as in any other country; and the means, if any, necessary to achieve respect for the law on lotteries in another country is a matter for national determination.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he has received from the European Commission on whether national legislation on gambling games is justified on grounds of public morality and consumer protection.

Mr. John Patten: None.

Official Secrets Act 1989 and Security Services Act 1989

Mr. Livingston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date the Official Secrets Act 1989 and the Security Services Act 1989 will come into force.

Mr. John Patten: As soon as practicable.

Tamil Refugees

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what representations he has received concerning Navaratnasingam Vathanan, a Tamil who was returned to Colombo in February 1988; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has received concerning Vythialingam Skandarajah, a Tamil who was returned to Colombo in February 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 19 June 1989]: A judicial review of our decisions to refuse refugee status to these two cases and to four other Tamils was dismissed by the House of Lords in December 1987 and they were returned to Sri Lanka in February 1988. On 13 March 1989 an adjudicator upheld appeals against refusal of leave to enter in five of these cases. My right hon. Friend sought leave to appeal to the tribunal on 22 March but on 19 April the tribunal decided that it had no jurisdiction to consider this appeal because of a clerical error in the service of the papers. On 12 May my right hon. Friend sought leave to move for judicial review of the tribunal's decision and leave was granted on 17 May. We have received a number of representations about the cases from hon. Members, organisations and individuals.

Pop Concerts

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will urgently examine existing legislation governing the holding of mass outdoor pop concerts and similar functions to assess the need to strengthen any provisions concerning (i) sound levels and decibel controls, (ii) prior warnings to local residents and (iii) provisions against exceeding any licence terms including time limits.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 14 June 1989]: The powers conferred on local authorities for the granting of public entertainments licences under the London Government Act 1963 and the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982 are already very wide and should, in my view, be sufficient to enable them to regulate these matters.

PC Gerald Corley

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask the chief constable of Manchester to list the complaints made by members of the public against former PC Gerald Corley and the action taken in each case.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 12 June 1989]: Responsibility for the investigation of complaints against police officers and for consideration of disciplinary action rests with the chief officer of the force concerned, subject to the provisions of part IX of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. My right hon. Friend has no part to play in these procedures.

It is not the normal practice to reveal details from a police officer's personal file. I understand from the chief constable of Greater Manchester, however, that complaints were made by members of the public against ex-PC Corley on 19 occasions from December 1977. All these complaints were fully investigated in accordance with the statutory procedures in force at the time. Where a complaint was withdrawn prior to the completion of the investigation it was reviewed by a senior police officer in accordance with force procedures.

In only two cases were complaints against Mr. Corley found to have a sufficient measure of substantiation to justify action being taken against the officer. Both concerned allegations of irregularity in procedure. On both occasions Mr. Corley was interviewed by a senior officer.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

"Phones on the Move"

Sir David Price: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether there has been any further developments following the publication of the discussion document "Phones on the Move" in January; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has considered carefully the responses to the discussion document in the light of our wish to select at least two operators to provide personal communications networks (PCNs) in the 1990s. We have also received advice from the Director General of Telecommunications.

The director general has advised us that the capacity of Mercury Communications Ltd., a subsidiary of Cable & Wireless plc, to provide the full range of telecommunications services in competition with British Telecom is limited by the lack of a mobile radio network to compete with Cellnet, in which BT has a majority stake. We have therefore accepted his advice that a consortium led by Mercury or Cable & Wireless should be a prospective operator and in due course be offered one of the licences to operate a mobile communications network within the frequency range 1·7-2·3 GHz. This is subject to the submission of an acceptable proposal, both in regard to the consortium and in business and technical terms, by 14 September.

On the advice of the director general, we intend to identify one, or possibly two, other prospective operators by the end of the year. We are issuing notes for the guidance of applicants today. Copies of these notes have been placed in the libraries of both Houses. The closing date for applications is noon on Thursday 14 September.

Applications may be made by any company, whether or not it responded to the discussion document. The exceptions are Cellnet and Racal Vodafone, their associates and main shareholders. Since the new networks are intended to compete with these companies' existing cellular radio operations, we have decided, on the director general's advice, that they should not be able to participate in their development or operation either in their own right or as a member of a consortium. We will, however, keep under review their needs for additional frequencies in the light of the progress they make on the pan-European cellular network and the development of competition in the United Kingdom.

We have also considered the choice of PCN technology, which will govern the appropriate technical standards. The two technologies which emerged strongly from the consultation period were those being developed for the pan-European digital cellular radio system and the digital European cordless telephone. it is our intention that the PCNs should operate according to a common technical standard, in order to ensure competition between the operators. It would be highly desirable for this to be based on a technology developed in Europe. Accordingly, we have decided that applications must be based on one or other of these technologies, and applicants may, if they wish, put in separate proposals based on each. The selected common standard will be announced when the choice of operator is made and will take account of developments in Europe.

We have also considered the major cost of linking the small radio cells needed to provide a true PCN. To aid the planning of these networks for the 1990s, we have decided that the operators will be able to provide their own radio-based network infrastructure between individual radio cells. However, the links to the public switched network, which provides the basic telecommunications service of conveying messages over fixed links, will still be provided by British Telecom or Mercury pending the outcome of the November 1990 duopoly review. In order to protect the position of the new entrants, any request by the existing cellular operators to provide similar radio links for their own networks will be considered in the light of their progress in implementing the pan-European cellular network but will in any event not be implemented until two years after both of the new PCNs have entered service, provided there are no undue delays in the introduction of the new networks.

We have been aware of the possible affect of this initiative on the four Telepoint operators we announced in January. We do not believe that the PCN initiative should significantly affect their prospects for success. The new networks will offer two-way call initiation aimed to compete with cellular radio, with its relatively expensive and sophisticated technology, and will not begin service until 1992 at the earliest. By contrast the inherently lower cost one-way Telepoint technology has already been developed and we expect it to be introduced into the marketplace well before the end of the year. We have, however, asked the director general to pay particular regard to any new ideas from the Telepoint operators themselves as to how the Telepoint concept could be further developed in the future and to advise us as necessary.

The "Phones on the Move" discussion document put forward our vision of the future in PCNs and companies responded to it with enthusiasm and imagination. We intend to maintain this momentum, and to encourage industry to make this vision a reality in the early 1990s. We do not anticipate any further major developments in new mobile telecommunications systems for some time. As a result of our announcement today and previous announcements on Telepoint, cellular radio, private mobile radio and paging, the Government have opened up new markets and provided for effective competition. We hope that all the companies involved in this field will continue to respond vigorously and to exploit the opportunities that have been created.

Public Houses and Clubs

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he has any evidence, in the form of comprehensive and reliable consumer surveys, on the state of consumer satisfaction or dissatisfaction with public houses and clubs in Britain.

Mr. Forth: I am aware of two surveys which are relevant. First the Consumers Association conducted a survey of 2,175 adults in May 1987, which formed the basis of their evidence of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission investigation into the supply of beer. A number of questions were asked which related to consumer satisfaction. According to the Consumers Association, of those respondents who said they visited pubs less often than two years previously, the largest single reason was that drinks in pubs were too expensive.

Two thirds of respondents agreed that all pubs should be allowed to sell draught bitter from more than one brewer, and 61 per cent. agreed that pub prices were too high compared with supermarkets and off-licences. More recently, Haig Whisky has published results from a MORI poll of 1,037 adults who go to the pub at least once a month, carried out in 65 constituency sampling points in the second half of May 1989. This survey was carried out to examine attitudes towards the MMC's recommendations for changes in the brewing industry. It showed a majority in favour of the Government implementing the MMC recommendations. Eighty-four per cent. said landlords (that is publicans) should have more freedom to introduce other beers. Sixty per cent. thought the quality of pubs would increase as a result of the MMC recommendations.

The Consumers Association and Haig Whisky have published documents containing the detailed results of their surveys. I am aware of recent reports that a survey commissioned by the Brewers Society comes to different conclusions, but I have not yet seen the details.

International Organisations

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the continued location of the International Sugar Organisation and the Wheat Council in London; what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the anti-competitive foreign subsidies being deferred to those organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister told the House on 25 April, the Government welcome the location of these organisations in London. They have based themselves here for many years because of the merits of London as the leading international trading centre for their products. The Government are therefore prepared to give the London chamber's proposal their full support including a financial contribution in equal partnership with the private sector. The Government will, of course, also provide the usual rates concessions to the two organisations. We shall continue to work to discourage subsidised competition so that different locations can compete fairly on their merits.

Frag 12

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in respect of which countries export licences have been applied for in respect of the weapon known as Frag 12; and what is the result of the application in each case.

Mr. Alan Clark [holding answer 20 June 1989]: No application has been received for a licence to export the Frag 12 fragmentation grenade from the United Kingdom.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Clinical Cytogeneticists

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the level of pay and recruitment of university clinical cytogeneticists.

Mr. Jackson: It is for the universities as employers to determine the level of pay and recruitment of their staff.

English Teaching

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects his proposals for attainment targets and programmes of study for English for pupils in junior and secondary schools to be published for consultation.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have now formulated our proposals for attainment targets and programmes of study in English for pupils in key stages 2 to 4 (broadly ages eight to 16). Our proposals endorse without modification the relevant recommendations of the national curriculum English working group, and build on the provisions in the order covering English in key stage 1 laid before Parliament on 31 May. We are grateful to the group for its clear and helpful advice.

I have today referred our proposals to the national curriculum council to start the consultation in England required by the Education Reform Act. My right hon. Friend will be initiating separate consultations in Wales as required by the Act. I have placed a copy of our proposals and the working group's report, together with a copy of my letter to the national curriculum council, in the Library.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Radio Broadcasting

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Lord President of the Council what information he has available and what information is available to hon. Members concerning the scope and extent of reportage by sound radio of proceedings in the Chamber of the House of Commons throughout its sittings.

Mr. Wakeham: I am not aware of any recent systematic monitoring carried out, either by the House or on its behalf, of the use to which the sound feed from the Chamber is put. So far as the broadcasters themselves are concerned, I am advised that the BBC does not collate statistics of the degree of detail implied by the hon. Gentleman's question and that to do so would be a time-consuming and costly exercise.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Lord President of the Council what guidance is issued to departmental Ministers on the criteria to be observed in determining whether to answer parliamentary questions tabled during the previous day's sitting.

Mr. Waldegrave: Ministers are expected to follow the provisions of Standing Order No. 17.

ENVIRONMENT

Community Charge

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the full set of community charge practice notes; to whom the public should apply for these notes; and when applications should be made.

Mr. Gummer: Community charge practice notes are published jointly by the Government and local authority associations. Nineteen notes have been issued so far and copies are available in the Library of the House. The notes are detailed, technical manuals intended for the use of local authority practitioners rather than the general public. A separate series of explanatory booklets are available to the public free of charge from Community Charge Leaflets Section PO Box 622, Bristol B599 1TR.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidelines he has issued on the evidence which is acceptable for poll tax purposes, that an individual is entitled to severe disablement allowance or to invalidity pension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Government have no plans to introduce a poll tax.

Detailed guidance on the evidence required to satisfy an exemption from the community charge on grounds of severe mental impairment is contained in community charge practice note No. 19, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities have indicated to his Department that their costs in implementing the community charge are likely to be (a) less and (b) more than the amount granted for the purpose by Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Gummer: The information we have on the revenue costs to authorities of implementation suggest that about 15 per cent. of them will be spending less than has been provided in the 1989-90 rate support grant settlement; most of the remainder intend to spend more.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the proportion of total community charge implementation costs Her Majesty's Government have provided.

Mr. Gummer: The actual costs of implementation will not be known until next year but the figures contained in authorities' budget returns suggest that Government provision will support about half of authorities' estimated revenue expenditure on preparation. Similar figures for capital are not available. It was never the intention that resources received by individual authorities would necessarily meet in full the estimated costs of their own preferred plans. This would give no incentive to efficient implementation. We believe the resources we have made available—£110 million in the 1989-90 rate support grant settlement and capital allocations totalling £160 million—are sufficient to support reasonable levels of local authority expenditure in preparation.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received that his Department arrange for a survey to be made of the costs actually incurred by all local authorities on implementation of the community charge; whether he will undertake such a survey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: We have received no such representations and have no plans to carry out such a survey. The usual financial returns from authorities to the Department will provide this information.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek to exempt from the provisions of the poll tax those who are mainly or wholly dependent on moneys provided to victims of Nazi persecutions.

Mr. Gummer: The Government have no plans to introduce a poll tax.

Individuals are exempt from the community charge if their circumstances conform to one of the categories set out in schedule 1 to the Local Government Finance Act 1988.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many newspapers printed his recently circulated articles on the community charge.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State gave the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East (Mr. Nellist) on 23 May at column 488.

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many requests for community charge practice notes have been refused.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 12 June 1989]: Community charge practice notes (which are produced jointly by the Government and the local authority association) contain guidance on technical details of the new system for the local authority staff who will be operating it. Copies of each note are provided free to all local authorities and others with a specific need for the information, and are placed in the Library of the House. Copies of the notes have not been made generally available to other bodies or the public. We have prepared a range of leaflets for that purpose.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether itinerant workers under the community charge will have to pay a personal charge at their permanent address and a collective charge if they are living in a designated dwelling at or near their workplace levied by their landlord.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 21 June 1989]: A person registered for the personal community charge at his or her sole or main residence who stays in a property designated for the collective community charge will pay contributions towards the collective charge payable by the landlord or owner of the property.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sites of special scientific interest have been designated each year since the inception of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981; and how many he estimates will be created in the next 12 months.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 provides for both renotification of sites of special scientific interest originally notified under the National Park and Access to the Countryside Act 1949 and notification of new SSSIs. The number of such sites are:

| Financial year | Number of new SSSIs notified in the year |
|---|---|
| Renotifications | |
| To 31 March 1989 | 3,187 |
| New notifications | |
| 1981-82 | 0 |
| 1982-83 | 35 |
| 1983-84 | 183 |
| 1984-85 | 268 |
| 1985-86 | 358 |
| 1986-87 | 261 |
| 1987-88 | 274 |
| 1988-89 | 282 |

In addition the Nature Conservancy Council expects to renotify 135 sites and notify a further 250 sites in the current financial year.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of the total number of sites of special scientific interest have been (a) destroyed and (b) damaged since the inception of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No information is available prior to 1 April 1984. I am informed by the Nature Conservancy Council that since then the numbers of SSSIs which have sustained damage are as follows:

| | Number | Per cent. |
|---|---|---|
| 1984-85 | 192 | 6·77 |
| 1985-86 | 151 | 4·84 |
| 1986-87 | 205 | 6·86 |
| 1987-88 | 139 | 4·36 |

This includes damage of all kinds, whether significant or not, and to both those SSSIs notified under the 1981 Act and those notified under the National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act 1949 and not yet renotified. The number of SSSIs suffering significant damage averaged about 1 per cent. over the period.

Over this period three SSSIs were destroyed, two in 1984-85 and one in 1985-86.

Full information is provided in the NCC's annual reports copies of which are in the Library.

Bristol Channel (Discharges)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sources of industrial and trade effluent discharges there are into the Bristol channel; and where they are located.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Responsibility for the control of discharges of industrial and trade effluent to the Bristol channel rests with the Welsh, Wessex and South West water authorities. Details of consents granted by the authorities in respect of such discharges are held on the registers maintained by each authority.

Rating Reform

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will tabulate what a single person living in the london borough of Waltham Forest would pay (a) in community charge and (b) in a system of capital value rates plus local income tax paid in proportions of 80 to 20, respectively if the person earned (a) £40,000, (b) £80,000 and (c) £120,000 and lived in (i) property owned by that person worth £90,000, (ii) property owned by that person worth £120,000 and (iii) property owned by that person worth £150,000, making the same assumptions as in his reply to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Sir H. Rossi) on 22 March, Official Report, column 626.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is provided in the table.

Illustrative annual liability in Waltham Forest under a system of capital value rates combined with local income tax, 1988-89

| Single persons earnings | Property value £90,000 | Property value £120,000 | Property value £150,000 |
| £40,000 | 1,375 | 1,655 | 1,935 |
| £80,000 | 1,940 | 2,220 | 2,505 |
| £120,000 | 2,510 | 2,790 | 3,070 |

The figures are based on illustrative tax rates placed in the Library on 23 June 1988 and are for 1988-89. It is assumed that the person lives alone and taxable income is taken as earnings less £260·5, the single person's allowance, in each case. The illustrative 1988-89 community charge in Waltham Forest is £269.

Public Rights of Way

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to introduce legislation in response to the Rubinstein case on definitive maps of public rights of way.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government have announced their intention to introduce legislation to enable genuine errors in definitive maps to be corrected when there is a suitable opportunity.

Hong Kong Citizens (Housing)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received any representations to allow large scale construction of new properties in the Yeovil constituency to accommodate citizens of the colony of Hong Kong claiming right of abode in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Trippier: None, as yet. It would need about 1¼ million new homes to accommodate 3¼ million people.

HOTCHA Scheme

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to be able to announce a replacement to the HOTCHA scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Housing Corporation has published proposals to introduce an incentive scheme in 1990 to help housing association tenants to move out and buy homes on the open market. The corporation is considering the responses.

Community Charge

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress of student certification for the community charge in England and Wales.

Mr. Gummer: The Personal Community Charge (Students) Regulations 1989 were laid before the House on 17 March. They provide for certification officers in all relevant educational establishments in England and Wales, and place a duty on them to issue a certificate in the prescribed form to each person pursuing or about to pursue a full-time course of education. The regulations will come into force on 1 October 1989.

Fossil Fuels (Pollution)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about reducing pollution from burning fossil fuels; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received many representations on this topic. The commitments agreed by the Government under the large combustion plants and motor vehicle emissions directives of the European Community will lead to very substantial reductions in the emissions of sulphur dioxide, nitrogen oxide, hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide.

London City Airport

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received an application to extend the runway at London City airport.

Mr. Chope: No.

Nuclear Waste (Storage)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the development of sub-sea bed dry storage for civil nuclear waste.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: UK Nirex Ltd. has been established to identify and develop a disposal facility for low and intermediate-level radioactive waste. Nirex is currently investigating a repository in the form of a mine under the land. The Government have endorsed this programme. The possibility of investigating other locations at a later stage, or of utilising offshore options cannot be ruled out.

Bathing Beaches

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had about imposing a statutory requirement on local authorities (a) to clean European designated bathing beaches of litter and (b) to clean any beach regularly used by the public after an oil spill.

Mr. Moynihan: I have had no specific representations on these subjects. We have, however, announced our intention to place local authorities under a duty to keep land clean. This is one of a number of proposals for legislation on litter which my right hon. Friend intends to announce soon.

Childhood Cancer

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what decision has been reached by the steering committee of the London School of Hygiene's small area statistics unit as to whether to proceed with an investigation into the incidence of childhood cancer in Humberside.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 20 June to explain that existing information is being considered by independent export members of the steering committee so that they can advise the committee when it next meets.

Pollution (Wales)

Mrs. Clywd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his responsibilities for the control of environmental pollution in Wales.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the Department's publication "Protecting Your Environment —A Guide" a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Pages 2 and 3 give a succinct but complete summary of the respective responsibilities of the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales for environment protection.

Rugby Union

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet representatives of rugby union; and what subjects he expects to discuss.

Mr. Moynihan: I have no plans at present to meet representatives of the Rugby Football Union.

Dioxins

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the report on dioxins will be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department of the Environment has today published a report, "Dioxins in the Environment", in the pollution paper series. It is the report of an interdepartmental working group on poly chlorinated dibenzo-para-dioxins and polychlorinated dibenzofurans. The report is the culmination of work on dioxins which began two years ago. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The main purpose of the report is to make available the best information we have on dioxins from the United Kingdom and elsewhere. There is an analysis of what this means in terms of possible human health effects and environmental impact.

Advice on the health effects of dioxins from the Department of Health's independent advisory committee on toxicity of chemicals in food, consumer products and the environment is also included in the report.

It recommends that the major sources of dioxins should be identified and appropriate measures taken to reduce inputs of dioxins to food, consumer products and the environment.

The Government welcome this advice and have already taken steps to implement the committee's recommendations.

The report has been compiled jointly by the central directorate for environmental protection in DOE, the Department of Health, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Department of Trade and Industry and the Health and Safety Executive.

Drinking Water

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of which of the standards set in the European Community drinking water directive are regularly exceeded by each of the water supplies in England which have been granted derogations.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 14 June 1989]: A list has been placed in the Library of those supplies which regularly exceed the EC drinking water directive in respect of the standard indicated and have been granted derogations by the Department under the terms of article 9 of the directive. Such derogations can be granted only where the situation is due to the nature and structure of the ground and there is no public health risk.

Catalytic Converters

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, following the agreement of European Community Environment Ministers in Luxembourg on 9 June on the use of catalytic converters in small cars from December 1992, he has made an assessment of the increased contribution to the greenhouse effect that will be caused by carbon dioxide and water vapour released in exhaust gases from United Kingdom-based cars, in the period to the year 2000.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 19 June 1989]: Yes. A United Kingdom fleet of 3-way catalyst cars would emit about 7·5 million tonnes per annum more carbon dioxide than a fleet of vehicles conforming to the standards of the common position reached by Environment Ministers last November. The emission of water vapour from cars does not have a significant input on the greenhouse effect.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the progress on phasing out aerosols containing chlorofluorocarbon propellants; and if he expects to introduce legislation making the sale of such items illegal.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 21 June 1989]: Members of the British Aerosol Manufacturers Association are well on course to meet the objective of eliminating the non-essential use of chlorofluorocarbons in their products by the end of this year. Legislation to this effect is not needed in the circumstances.

English Heritage

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if English Heritage has any plans to commission a study of the archaeology of waterlogged urban centres.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 21 June 1989]: I understand that English Heritage intends to fund a number of archaeological surveys in urban areas. These will include waterlogged sites.

Environmental Impact Assessment

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to issue guidance to archaeological bodies on environmental impact assessment and monitoring.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 21 June 1989]: No. The broad principle of requiring information on the effect of proposed development being available before planning applications are considered will be discussed in guidance on "archaeology and planning", which is being prepared for local authorities, developers and archaeologists.

Repairs Grants

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date English local authorities were first informed of changes in the amount of mandatory repairs grant from 75 per cent. to 20 per cent. for landlords under sections 130 and 131 of the Housing Act 1988; and on what date they came into effect.

Mr. Trippier: Local authorities in England were notified of proposed changes in the rate of intermediate and mandatory repairs grants for landlords in a letter from the Department dated 14 December 1988, following consultation with the local authority associations in November. These changes were given effect by the Grants by Local Housing Authorities (Appropriate Percentage and Exchequer Contributions) Order 1989 (SI 1989 No. 72), made under sections 509 and 517 of the Housing Act 1985, which came into foce on 19 January 1989.

ENERGY

Fossil Fuels

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent disussions he has held on concepts of fossil fuel utilisation fiscal devices to enhance or reduce the consumption of such energy sources.

Mr. Parkinson: I have had a number of recent discussions with my officials and others about the details of the levy on fossil fuel use for power generation, provision for which is included in the Electricity Bill now before Parliament.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he intends to make any further appointments to regulatory posts covering the privatised electricity industry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No. Under the terms of the Electricity Bill it is the Director General of Electricity Supply who will be empowered to appoint the staff of the Office of Electricity Regulation, subject to Treasury approval of their numbers and conditions of service.

SCOTLAND

Sheriff Courts

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects publication of the report by Dr. Carol Jones of Edinburgh university on contested cases in the Scottish sheriff courts.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Dr. Carol Jones' report on contested cases in the Scottish sheriff courts has not yet been submitted in final form. The question of publication will be considered after it has been submitted.

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects publication of the report by Dr. Kenneth Miller of Strathclyde university on delays in summarising clinical cases in the sheriff courts in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I hope to be able to publish Dr. Kenneth Miller's report on delay in summary criminal proceedings in the sheriff courts during the summer.

Forestry Commission Land

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the value of sales so far of Forestry Commission land; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Receipts from the disposal of land and property from the start of the disposals programme in 1981 to 31 March 1989 amounted to some £124 million.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to sell off, and over what period of time, Forestry Commission woodland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. and learned Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) on 16 June at columns 544-45.

Tree Planting

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the total planting between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, respectively, in each of the categories (a) Forestry Commission direct planting, (b) private planting assisted by the woodland grant scheme, (c) planting under the farm woodland scheme, (d) other assisted private planting and (e) other non-assisted planting.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information, showing new planting (NP) and restocking (R), is as follows:

Hectares

| | England | | Scotland | | Wales | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | NP | R | NP | R | NP | R |
| (a) Forestry Commission direct planting | 130 | 2,890 | 3,860 | 3,980 | 60 | 1,720 |
| (b) Planting under woodland grant scheme | 150 | 150 | 150 | 160 | 20 | 10 |
| (c) Planting under farm woodland scheme | 110 | — | 10 | — | — | — |
| (d) Planting under other Forestry Commission grant schemes | 1,490 | 2,180 | 22,270 | 2,090 | 900 | 250 |
| (e) Other non-assisted | 140 | 100 | 40 | — | — | — |

The figures given for categories (b), (c) and (d) are the areas on which planting grant was paid by the Forestry Commission during the period 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989.

The situation in Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Health Service

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been achieved as a result of competitive tendering in the National Health Service in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Since the last general election savings from competitive tendering have increased from £600,000 to £29 million from 81 contracts for ancillary services. That represents substantial additional resources for patient care in Scotland's Health Service over the next three to four years. Almost three quarters of the contracts have been won by in-house teams. The success of the competitive tendering programme so far has encouraged health boards to press ahead with further tendering.

Water Quality

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the water supply at Lochaber is in breach of European Community guidelines for aluminium content, or for any other additives, metals or pesticides.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 19 June 1989]: Lochaber district is served by numerous public water supplies; which have differing qualities. These supplies are the responsibility of the Highland regional council from which information on any particular supply may be obtained. A number of supplies in the area contain naturally derived aluminium at concentrations which occasionally exceed the European standard but on average are below it. Work to reduce the lead content of water at consumers' taps in lead-plumbed properties is virtually complete. No supply has been found to contain other metals or pesticides in excess of the EC standards.

Forestry Commission (Wildlife)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the last advice he received from the Nature Conservancy Council concerning the practice of blocking of badger setts and digging of fox earths by fox hunters on Foresty Commission land.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [pursuant to his reply, 21 June 1989; c. 127]: The Forestry Commission has an earth stopper's code which is designed to prevent undue interference with badger setts and fox earths.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Social Fund

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table, similar to the one printed on 15 May, Official Report, columns 76-78, in reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, West, (Mr. Battle) but in respect of his Department's local offices at Eston, Hartlepool, Middlesbrough, Redcar and Stockton, showing reasons for social fund loan and grant refusals during the period April 1988 to March 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 9 June 1989]: The information requested is set out in the table.

The proportions have been calculated as percentages of the total number of reasons for refusal. The total number of reasons for refusal may equal or exceed the total number of refusals because the social fund officer can give more than one reason for refusing an application.

I refer the hon. Member to my pursuant reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) today.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, further to his reply on 4 May, Official Report, column 220, he will categorise the reasons for the remaining social fund loan refusals and community care grant refusals for the year 11 April 1988 to 31 March 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [pursuant to his reply, 15 May 1989 c. 76-78.]: I regret that the reply given has been found to contain an error. The information requested with the amended figures is as follows:—

Family Credit

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many new claims for family credit were made, how many were decided and how many awards resulted in each week since the beginning of April 1989; how many renewal claims, decisions and awards were made; how many existing awards expired and were not renewed; and what was the net increase in the number of current awards.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 13 June 1989]: The available information is as follows:

| | Registrations[1] | Decisions | Awards |
|---|---|---|---|
| New Claims | | | |
| Week ending:— | | | |
| 7 April | 7,639 | 7,535 | 4,383 |
| 14 April | 8,697 | 7,656 | 4,397 |
| 21 April | 16,995 | 8,554 | 4,660 |
| 28 April | 22,867 | 10,926 | 5,018 |
| 5 May | 17,881 | 10,975 | 4,191 |
| 12 May | 24,166 | 15,740 | 5,541 |
| 19 May | 26,267 | 17,141 | 6,038 |
| 26 May | 26,586 | 14,003 | 4,714 |
| 2 June | 17,803 | 12,990 | 4,150 |

| | Registrations[1] | Decisions | Awards |
|---|---|---|---|
| 9 June | 20,927 | 23,886 | 8,744 |
| 16 June | 17,014 | 21,968 | 8,391 |
| Renewal claims | | | |
| Week ending:— | | | |
| 7 April | 7,795 | 6,615 | 5,799 |
| 14 April | 7,600 | 7,152 | 6,394 |
| 21 April | 7,425 | 7,115 | 6,325 |
| 28 April | 6,475 | 6,912 | 6,124 |
| 5 May | 4,770 | 5,044 | 4,371 |
| 12 May | 7,705 | 5,978 | 5,207 |
| 19 May | 8,572 | 5,902 | 5,100 |
| 26 May | 9,115 | 4,652 | 4,025 |
| 2 June | 7,552 | 4,263 | 3,592 |
| 9 June | 8,713 | 8,854 | 7,662 |
| 16 June | 6,938 | 8,381 | 7,213 |

45,964 awards expired in April, and 64,345 in May, and 44,038 are due to expire in June[2].

[1] Some claims received each week were not registered until the following week. On 16 June, 1,127 claims were awaiting registration.

[2] Figures for awards expiring are available only on a monthly basis. No information is available about how many of the awards expiring were not renewed.

The number of current awards is not available on a weekly basis. At the end of March 253,500 awards were actually in payment, and at 18 June this had risen to 255,702.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average amount of family credit awarded in each week since the beginning of April 1989.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 13 June 1989]: I regret that the information requested is not available. The latest information relates to all awards of family credit in payment on 18 June 1989, when the average amount was estimated to be just over £25. This is broadly the same as the average amount in payment in March 1989.

Form RR4

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if form RR4 is available in all post offices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 16 June 1989]: Leaflet RR4 "Housing Benefit—new rules" is no longer available in all post offices.

From mid-June 1988 to the beginning of April 1989 the leaflet was on display in all Crown post offices. It was removed two months ago at the time of the benefit upratings and changes in some benefit rules. In Crown post offices the four A5 format leaflet display space that the department purchases is now occupied by information on family credit, housing benefit, NHS costs, and in Scotland, community charge rebate.

In sub-post offices, whilst leaflets such as RR4 are sent to all of them, neither the Department nor the Post Office has the power to instruct that these leaflets should be displayed or given out. As independent retailers sub-postmasters/mistresses can only be requested to do so.

TRANSPORT

Road Accidents

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to implement recommendation 23 of the efficiency scrutiny into his Department's activities in relation to local authorities' capital expenditure on roads, published in November 1988, which would allow accident investigation and prevention schemes on local roads to be eligible for transport supplementary grant.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: When the efficiency scrutiny report was published last month, I said that there were seven recommendations which the Department wished to discuss with the local authority associations. Recommendation 23 is one of those.

Officials of the associations reported the views of their members on the matter at a meeting on 7 June. I expect that it will be discussed when my right hon. Friend and I meet representatives of the associations on 4 July.

LRT (Fares)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are his current instructions to London Regional Transport concerning the level of fares; when they were published and in what form; which instructions or guidelines they replaced; and when he modified his instruction that fare increases should, in general, parallel changes in the cost of living index.

Mr. Portillo: An initial remit has been given to the new LRT chairman, Mr. Wilfrid Newton. This was set out in a written answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Richmond and Barnes on 22 March at columns 594-95. It asked the chairman for proposals for a management, investment and financial strategy which aims to give London safe and reliable rail and bus services; provides good value for money; and, so far as possible, transfers costs from the taxpayer to the passengers and other beneficiaries. It gives no specific instructions on fare levels. This remit replaced the objectives given to the then chairman of LRT on 20 July 1984.

Computer Reservation Systems

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin) on 8 June, Official Report, column 219, whether he will summarise the additional requirements concerning the disclosure of personal information described in the code of conduct about computer reservation systems produced by the European Community.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Subject to national legislation on security, public order and data protection, personal information concerning a consumer and generated by a travel agent may be made available by the system vendor to those not involved in the transaction only with the consent of the consumer.

M25

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many possible routes of the proposed motorway from the M25 to Chelmsford he has asked his officials to investigate;

(2) when he expects to appoint consultancy engineers to determine the route of the proposed motorway from the M25 to Chelmsford.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We expect to appoint design agents later this year. When they have carried out preliminary investigations we shall have an indication of practicable options.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what environmental considerations will be taken into account in determining the route of the motorway from the M25 to Chelmsford.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Choice of route is generally a balance of environmental, economic and operational considerations. Subject to that, we shall seek to adopt the route and solution which does the least environmental damage. On deciding on the options we shall as usual carry out a full environmental assessment.

Coastal Waters (Chemicals)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he holds concerning chemicals in drums or containers which have sunk within 100 miles of the British coast in the last 30 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Portillo: On each occasion of a loss of packaged chemicals into the sea from a ship being reported to the marine pollution control unit a decision is taken on scientific advice as to whether it is necessary to relocate and recover the chemical to protect the marine environment. Where it is not, no permanent record of the incident is maintained and the location of the lost chemical is generally unknown. Accordingly, the only detailed record held by the Department stems from the only chemical salvage operation carried out by the MPCU to date. This was after the mv Perintis sank in United Kingdom waters near the channel light vessel in March, 1989. All 12 of the drums of Cypermethrin and 16 of the drums of Permethrin carried by the vessel were successfully recovered, leaving four 50 kg drums of Permethrin which could not be found. 5·8 tonnes of Lindane from the same vessel floated off from the wreck in a commercial container was subsequently lost in the approaches to Cherbourg while under tow by a French tug, and its location remains unknown.

Four tonnes of PCB contained in four electrical transformers were lost in the Piper Alpha disaster in July, 1988 and remain unlocated.

HEALTH

National Health Service (Reform)

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received to date on the White Paper "Working for Patients"; and how many have been critical of the Government's proposals.

Mr. Mellor: We have received over 7,500 representations on the White Paper, "Working for Patients". Many ask questions, many support all or some of the proposals, some refer only to specific aspects. It is not possible to distinguish the letters in the way the hon. Member suggests.

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many letters from members of the public about the proposed changes in the National Health Service, to which he has replied, have resulted in further correspondence from the writer.

Mr. Mellor: We have dealt with over 5,500 letters from members of the public about the White Paper "Working for Patients"; a very small number has resulted in further correspondence from the writer.

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will instruct the chairman of the Wakefield family practitioner committee to arrange a meeting between the full family practitioner committee and local Members of Parliament to discuss the White Paper "Working for Patients".

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 June 1989]: No.

Speech Therapy

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to develop speech therapy services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: It is for individual health authorities to determine the appropriate level of provision of their speech therapy services, having regard to local circumstances, competing priorities and available resources. The number of speech therapists employed in the National Health Service in England has risen by nearly 75 per cent. since 1979 and expenditure on speech therapy services has increased by 100 per cent. in real terms over the same period.

Census Questions

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to inform the public in advance of the census; what purpose is intended in including in the census questions on educational qualifications; what use will be made of the answers to these questions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is given in the White Paper "1991 Census of Population", Cm. 430, published on 19 July 1988, a copy of which is in the Library. Publicity and information about the census is covered in paragraphs 45 and 46 and a statement on the purpose and uses of the proposed question on higher educational and professional qualifications is given at paragraph 23.5.

Patients (Documentation)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any proposals to expedite the transfer of patients' National Health Service administrative documents between general practitioner practices, when required by patients' removal, avoiding processing by family practitioner committees and the central registry in Southport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The computerisation of the central register due in 1990 should speed up the transfer of records. In addition, where necessary, special arrangements can be made by telephone between family practitioner committees and general practitioners for records to be transferred urgently. We attach importance to speedy transfers.

Midwives (Grading)

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will now make a statement about the recommendations from the Social Services Committee on midwives grading; and if he will provide a date for their implementation.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Garrett) and my hon. Friend the Member for Batley and Spen (Mrs. Peacock) on 10 May 1989 at columns 450-51.

Treatment Costs

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the variations in cost of treatment between different health districts.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Pembroke (Mr. Bennett) on 18 May, at column 283.

Tobacco Advisory Council

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will meet the chief executive of the Tobacco Advisory Council to discuss its recent distribution of literature to hon. Members on 13 June; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We are aware of the literature concerning environmental tobacco smoke which the Tobacco Advisory Council has sent to hon. Members, but we do not feel that a meeting with the chief executive is necessary. The Government accept the finding of the independent scientific committee on smoking and health concerning environmental tobacco smoke, that there is a 10-30 per cent. increased risk of lung cancer among non-smokers exposed to environmental tobacco smoke through most of their lives than for non-smokers not so exposed. This increase could account for several hundred deaths per year. The Tobacco Advisory Council's literature reflects the fact that it disputes this position, but the council, like all other representative organisations, is entitled to draw attention to its own viewpoint.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received from the Tobacco Advisory Council about smoking and health; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Tobacco Advisory Council has recently made written representations on the draft EC recommendation on banning smoking in public places (which was adopted as a mixed resolution at the Council of Ministers on 16 May), and on the draft EC directive on the advertising of tobacco products. In addition to this, officials have had meetings with the Tobacco Advisory Council at which a range of tobacco-related issues have been discussed.

Allocation of Resources

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of what would be the allocation of resources to each regional health authority in the current year if it was done on the basis of the formula proposed in the White Paper "Working for Patients".

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 May 1989]: It is not possible at this stage to produce reliable estimates of notional regional allocations for the current year. Such notional figures would in any event have little meaning since the application of the new formula will be carefuly phased in and will not take full effect until 1992-93.

West Lancashire Family Practitioner Committee

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in the Official Report details of (a) the numbers of general practitioners employed, (b) the numbers of patients registered and (c) the cost of the general practitioners service, in the area covered by the West Lancashire family practitioner committee for 1979 and 1988 respectively.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 15 June 1989]: The figures for Lancashire family practitioner committee, using the latest available year, 1987-88, are:

| | Date | Figures |
|---|---|---|
| Numbers of unrestricted principals | October 1978 | 578 |
| | October 1987 | 673 |
| Numbers of patients registered | October 1978 | 1,395,862 |
| | October 1987 | 1,434,464 |
| Cost of the service | 1978-79 | £10,543,000 |
| | 1987-88 | £38,328,000 |

This represents an increase in real terms of £16,000,000, a rise of 78 per cent.

Family Practitioner Committees

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the circumstances in which chairmen of family practitioner committees act as agents of the Secretary of State.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 June 1989]: I have nothing to add to my reply to the hon. Member for Normanton (Mr. O'Brien) on 6 June 1989 at column 105.

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the powers of chairmen of family practitioner committees.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 June 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Gloucester (Mr. French) on 24 January 1989 at column 538.

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines about their responsibilities he gives chairmen of family practitioner committees on appointment.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 June 1989]: General guidance for chairmen, members and staff of family practitioner committees is issued as and when necessary in order to enable them to discharge the varied responsibilities placed upon them. The guidance takes many forms. The Department customarily invites newly appointed chairmen to a specially arranged seminar for this purpose.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Mr. Roc Sandford

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Attorney-General what were the reasons for the Director of Public Prosecutions' decision not to institute criminal charges against the officers involved in the prosecution of Mr. Roc Sandford for possession of drugs in October 1985.

The Attorney-General: After careful consideration of the evidence the Director of Public Prosecutions concluded that it was insufficient to justify criminal proceedings against any of the officers concerned.

Police Computers

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General what is his policy on prosecuting under the Official Secrets Act unauthorised disclosures of personal data from police computers; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to my previous written answer to him on 12 May 1989.

Immigration

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General if he will publish in full in the Official Report, the recent correspondence between the Treasury solicitors department and immigration adjudicators concerning the application of the immigration rules in appeals tribunals.

The Attorney-General: No. I refer to my reply to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) on 9 June, at column 255.

Sunday Trading

Mr. Cran: To ask the Attorney-General what information he has concerning the level of enforcement of Sunday trading laws by local authorities; and whether he has any plans to issue guidance to local authorities on the enforcement of such laws.

The Attorney-General: I refer to the answer of the Solicitor-General on 14 November 1988 at column 738: and to my answer on 17 April 1989 at column 26 which I have drawn to the attention of a number of local authorities.

Fiat Applications

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Attorney-General how many applications have been made to him in each of the past 10 years for his fiat; in respect of what proceedings such applications were made; and in how many and what percentage of such cases in each such category he granted and withheld his consent, respectively.

The Attorney-General: Records are no longer available for the entire period. In so far as records are available, the task of collating them so as to provide the information sought by the hon. Member could be undertaken only at disproportionate cost to the taxpayer.

PRIME MINISTER

Government Information

Q14. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will raise during the course of her next meeting with Sir Leon Brittan, Vice-President of the European Commission, the implications for the treatment of sensitive documents pertaining to financial affairs of companies transmitted by Her Majesty's Government to the European Commission in the light of the recently revised Cabinet Office guidance on Government Information.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so.

United Nations General Assembly

Q105. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to pay an official visit to the United Nations General Assembly.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so. My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary will visit the United Nations General Assembly in September.

NATO Summit

Q159. Mr. John Browne: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the recent North Atlantic Treaty Organisation summit.

The Prime Minister: No. There is a general agreement that the summit was a success for the Alliance, for the reasons I set out in my statement on 6 June.

Poland

Q196. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the recent elections in Poland.

The Prime Minister: When I met General Jaruzelski on 10 June, I told him that we welcomed the holding of the elections in Poland, and the confirmation by the Polish authorities that they would stand by the results.

Common Agricultural Policy

Q197. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the common agricultural policy.

The Prime Minister: The Government frequently receive representations about the common agricultural policy. Reform of the CAP is well under way. The measures agreed at the February 1988 European Council, particularly those dealing with budgetary discipline and stabilisation of agricultural production and expenditure, represent the most significant steps to date. The Government's policy is to build on those major reforms in EC negotiations, and to work with our GATT partners to fulfil the commitment to achieve progressive and substantial reductions in agricultural support and protection.

Energy Conservation

Q200. Mr. Page: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding energy conservation.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations regarding energy conservation and energy efficiency.

Community Charge

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if she will pay an official visit to the Nottingham, North constituency to explain Her Majesty's Government's policy on the poll tax.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so. The Government have no plans for a poll tax. The purpose and application of the community charge has been admirably explained in the leaflets published by the Department of the Environment and the Welsh Office.

Civil Service Records

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister where personal records of Downing street civil servants covering January 1986 are to be stored on their retiral from the Civil Service.

The Prime Minister: Personal records of any kind are stored in accordance with instructions given in general circular GC/228 issued in February 1984.

Heads of Government Meeting, Madrid

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister if she will state the matters that are now due to be place on the agenda of the forthcoming European Council, Heads of Government meeting, in Madrid.

The Prime Minister: The European Council in Madrid is likely to discuss monetary co-operation; social issues; progress on the single market; frontiers; the environment; external issues and other current Community subjects.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 22 June.

Mr Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 22 June.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 22 June.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 22 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today, including attendance at the plenary session of the Australian-United Kingdom conference on trade and investment.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Security Forces (Complaints)

2. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what complaints have been received about alleged violence by members of the security forces in the Ballymurphy area during the second half of May.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Royal Ulster Constabulary is currently investigating three complaints concerning the behaviour of soldiers in the Ballymurphy area of west Belfast. No complaints were made against the police.

Licensing Law

9. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the Licensing (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The Government have received representations from various sources, including district councils, church bodies and trade organisations. The majority of respondents strongly supported the proposals and in particular the proposed extension of the ban on off-sales of alcohol after 9 pm. The Federation of the Retail Licensed Trade and other trade interests opposed the extension and suggested several other changes to the licensing laws.

The Government will consider very carefully all the views expressed in finalising the contents of the draft order to be laid before Parliament.

Debt

10. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to repeal the payments for Debt (Emergency Provisions) Act (Northern Ireland) 1971.

15. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent meetings he has had with groups seeking a repeal of the payments for Debt (Emergency Provisions) Act (Northern Ireland) 1971.

Mr. Ian Stewart: There are no current plans to repeal the Act and there have been no meetings on this subject recently. The need for the legislation is kept under review in the light of prevailing circumstances.

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were subject to deductions from (a) wages and (b) welfare benefits under the Payment for Debt (Emergency Provisions) Act (Northern Ireland) 1971 in the years 1979 to 1989 inclusive.

Mr. Ian Stewart [holding answer 20 June 1989]: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The number of people from whom deductions from salaries have been made in the last two years under the Payments for Debt Act is approximately as follows:

|---|---|
| 1988-89 | 1,809 |

These figures are the total numbers of people from whom deductions from wages or salaries have been made on behalf of Northern Ireland Electricity, the Northern Ireland gas undertakings, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and the rating division of the DOE (NI).

Figures for 1983-84 to 1986-87 are contained in the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir J. Stanley) on 2 November 1987 (Official Report, column 612). Equivalent information for the years prior to 1983 could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

(b) Information in relation to deductions from welfare payments is not available.

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what total levels of debt existed in each of the years from 1979 to 1989, inclusive, in each category for which deductions were made from debtors in those years under the Payment for Debt (Emergency Provisions) Act (Northern Ireland) 1971.

Mr. Ian Stewart [holding answer 20 June 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon.

Friend the Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Sir J. Stanley) on 12 February 1988 at column. 396. Comparable information for 1987-88 and 1988-89 is as follows:

| | 1987-88 | 1988-89 |
|---|---|---|
| NIHE (Rent, Rates, District Heating) | 16·8 | 18·2 |
| NIE (Electricity) | 6·5 | 6·0 |
| Rating Division | 8·5 | 8·1 |
| Belfast Gas | 2·2 | 1·9 |

Prison Reform

11. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met a pressure group campaigning for a reform of the prison system.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend and I regularly meet various bodies with an interest in prison matters. The last such occasion when prison matters were raised was during a meeting between myself and NIACRO on 12 May 1989. I have also recently invited comments on proposals to improve conditions and facilities for visitors to prisoners.

Local Government

12. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will now set up an inquiry into the structure of local government in the Province.

Mr. Tom King: I have no such plans, although I am ready to consider and discuss any proposals which elected representatives from Northern Ireland and others may wish to put to me.

EC Funding

13. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to maximise the share of European Community structural funds assigned to Northern Ireland.

22. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what efforts he is making to ensure that Northern Ireland's share of European Community funding is maximised.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer the hon. Members to the answer that I gave earlier to the right hon. and learned Member for Warley, West (Mr. Archer).

Education (Reorganisation)

14. Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the proposed degree of parental consultation on current proposals for the reorganisation of state education in certain areas of Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: There are statutory development procedures for school reorganisation proposals. These provide an opportunity for all interested parties—including parents—to make representation to the Department of Education. School authorities would normally consult parents before publishing a proposal.

16. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy to reject any proposals by the South Eastern education and library board to amalgamate Castlewellan Quoile and Killyleagh secondary high schools with Down high school, thereby removing grammar school status from Down high.

Dr. Mawhinney: No. Article 14 of the Education and Libraries (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 places a statutory obligation on the Department of Education to consider all proposals submitted by an education and library board.

Security

17. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make an assessment of the security situation in Northern Ireland.

18. Mr. Molyneaux: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation.

Mr. Tom King: I refer the right hon. Members to the answer that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Duffy).

Terrorism

19. Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much terrorist activity has cost in terms of damage to buildings and to businesses, investment and jobs in the last year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: In the financial year ended 31 March 1989 the total cost of compensation for property damaged by terrorist activity was £18·7 million. This includes £9·4 million for damage to buildings, the balance including compensation for stock and contents, consequential loss, expenses and vehicles. These figures do not include damage to property held by the Crown or other public bodies who bear their own costs. The precise information which the right hon. Member seeks on the effects of terrorism on businesses, investment and jobs is not available, but terrorist activity cannot improve the perception of Northern Ireland as a location for investment which would reduce unemployment.

23. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with Ministers in the Government of the Republic of Ireland about granting to the police and armed forces of the Republic and of the United Kingdom reciprocal rights to enter the territory of the other in pursuit of suspected terrorists.

Mr. Tom King: Within the framework of the Intergovernmental Conference both Governments have regular discussions about ways of improving the effectiveness of security co-operation. My hon. Friend will understand why it is not possible to go into detail on the content of those discussions.

Labour Statistics

20. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current level of unemployment in the Province.

Mr. Viggers: The latest unemployment figures, released last week, are encouraging. They show that at 11 May 1989 the seasonally adjusted level of unemployment in the Province stood at 107,200, which is its lowest level for almost six years.

Police Authority for Northern Ireland

21. Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any proposals to change the composition, and if he has assessed the level of commitment, of the Police Authority for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tom King: I have no plans to change the composition of the Police Authority for Northern Ireland. I meet members of the authority on a regular basis and appreciate the commitment and courage of its members in fulfilling their responsibilities in relation to the police force in Northern Ireland.

Security Forces (Vetting)

24. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will review arrangements for vetting members of the security forces in Northern Ireland.

27. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures he has taken to improve vetting arrangements for members of the security forces in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Vetting arrangements for the RUC and RUC Reserve are the responsibility of the Chief Constable, and those for the remainder of the security forces in Northern Ireland are a matter for the Secretary of State for Defence.

Catholics (Discrimination)

25. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in reducing discrimination against Catholics in employment since 1979.

Mr. Viggers: Since the introduction of fair employment legislation in 1976 there have been significant increases in the proportion of Catholics employed in various sectors of employment, most notably in the public sector which accounts for 42 per cent. of Northern Ireland's working population. The proportion of Catholics employed in the public sector as a whole is now more closely in line with their representation in the population. Improvement in the position of Catholics elsewhere in employment has however been less marked and it is this problem that the radical and far-reaching legislation now before Parliament is largely designed to address.

Assembly

26. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he now has any plans to introduce a devolved assembly in Northern Ireland; and if he has considered the impact of such a proposal.

Mr. Tom King: I have no present plans.

Harland and Wolff Ltd.

28. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in the disposal of Harland and Wolff Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Viggers: Since the signing of the Heads of Agreement on 22 March significant progress has been made in preparation for the formal completion of the sale. Discussions between officials and the MEBO-Olsen team are continuing and officials have submitted the formal notification of the terms of the disposal to the European Commission. Subject to Commission approval and the satisfactory conclusion of other pre-contract conditions and procedures completion is planned for September.

Physically Handicapped School Children

29. Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the level of provision of boarding facilities for physically handicapped school children in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: Provision of boarding facilities for physically handicapped children at schools in Northern Ireland is a matter for the education and library boards in the first instance. I have not had any proposals from boards for any change in that provision.

Intergovernmental Conference

30. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was discussed at the last Intergovernmental Conference; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: The last meeting of the Intergovernmental Conference in Belfast on 24 May completed the review of the working of the conference provided for in article II of the Anglo-Irish Agreement. Copies of the joint statement issued after the conference and the communiqué on the review were placed in the Library.

"Who Framed Colin Wallace"

31. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the activities of the security services documented in the book "Who Framed Colin Wallace", by Paul Foot.

Mr. Ian Stewart: No.

Planning Procedures

32. Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will take steps to give objectors the right of appeal to the Planning Appeals Commission against the granting of planning permission.

Mr. Needham: No, Sir.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why the fencing and planting at No. 35 Ballygelagh road in the borough of Ards have not been provided in accordance with the conditions of planning permission; what proposals the Department of the Environment, planning division, has to ensure the implementation of the planning approval conditions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 19 June 1989]: The occupier of the new development adjacent to No. 35 Ballygelagh road submitted a planning application on 18

January 1989 for the retention of the dwelling without compliance with the condition requiring the erection of the screen fence. Since there was no reasonable ground for refusal, planning permission was granted on 23 May 1989.

Mental Handicap

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was his Department's participation in the first European national conference for vocational training for mental handicap which took place in Maastricht, Holland, in April; what lessons have been drawn from this event; and what efforts are being made to implement the findings of the conference in the Northern Ireland context.

Mr. Viggers: Two officials from the Department of Economic Development attended the conference together with a representative from the Industrial Therapy Organisation in Northern Ireland. The conference provided an opportunity to learn how other countries are dealing with this particular disability group and the experience gained will be valuable in the planning of future provision in Northern Ireland.

Turbines (Rivers)

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, further to his written answer to the hon. Member for Upper Bann, 25 April, Official Report, column 483, he will list the principal statutory responsibilities of the Northern Ireland Departments of Agriculture, Environment and Economic Development, for installations affecting the flow in a particular water course for water abstractions and for health and safety at work considerations arising from the operation of such turbines.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The information requested is as follows:

(i) If the installation of any structure is likely to affect the flow of water in any particular watercourse, the consent of the Department of Agriculture is required in accordance with article 32 and schedule 6 of the Drainage (NI) Order 1973. The Fisheries Act (NI) 1966 contains requirements to provide and maintain fish passes in dams constructed, re-built, reinstated or heightened since 1842; and to close mill sluices for 24-hour periods at weekends or when mills are not in use.

(ii) The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland has power under section 14 of the Water Act (NI) 1972 to make regulations to control the abstraction of water from waterways if it is considered expedient to do so. No such regulations have yet been made.

(iii) Where turbines form part of an undertaking for which the Department of Economic Development is the enforcing authority for health and safety at work legislation, the principal health and safety enactments which apply to the operation of turbines are the Health and Safety at Work (NI) Order 1978 and the Factories Act (NI) 1965.

Social Security

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many people awarded transitional protection as a result of the implementation of the new social security legislation from 11 April 1988 at each of the social security offices in South Down are no longer entitled to such a payment; (2) how many people were awarded transitional protection as a result of the implementation of the new social security legislation from 11 April 1988 at each of the social security offices in South Down.

Mr. Needham: This information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Prisoners

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners in Northern Ireland, who were under 20 years of age when convicted, have now served 10 or more years in prison.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Forty-two. Of these, 16 are Secretary of State's pleasure cases. The remaining 26 are life sentence prisoners.

Housing Executive

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the number of persons recruited and employed in the headquarters, and in each regional and district office of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in each of the last two years, broken down as far as possible into the various departments of the organisation, or as much of such information as is available to him.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 June 1989]: The information requested in so far as it can be readily provided is set out in the following tables. The figures shown for industrial and non-industrial staff represent permanent staff in post and do not take account of temporary staff as the numbers of such staff could not be disaggregated between various locations except at disproportionate cost. The figures for temporary non-industrial staff at 31 March 1988 and 31 March 1989 were 193 and 145 respectively. The figures for temporary industrial staff at 31 March 1988 and 31 March 1989 were 207 and 487 respectively.

Information on the composition by departments of non-industrial staff at district office level and figures for recruitment of industrial staff cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Population Statistics

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are his Department's estimates for the numbers of people aged 65 to 74 years, 75 to 79 years, and over 80 years in Northern Ireland in the years 2000 and 2020; and what percentage increase this represents in each category over the actual figures for the last year in which they are available.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 19 June 1989]: The information requested is as follows:

| Age groups | 1988 Mid-year estimates | Year 2000 | Percentage change | Year 2020 | Percentage change |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 65-74 | 113,000 | 110,000 | − 2·7 | 135,000 | +19·5 |
| 75-79 | 41,000 | 41,000 | 0·0 | 46,000 | +12·2 |
| 80 and over | 39,000 | 47,000 | +20·5 | 54,000 | +38·5 |

EMPLOYMENT

Tourist Industry

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will now publish the report of the review committee into the tourist industry which he established in July 1988.

Mr. Lee: I have no plans to publish the report.

Employment Training

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report (a) the number of ET starts (b) the number of people who have left the scheme and finished their courses, (c) the number and percentage of those leaving and finishing who obtained a nationally recognisable qualification and (d) the qualifications obtained for the latest available date.

Mr. Nicholls: To 9 June, the latest date for which information is available, 317,800 people had started on employment training. Information broken down as requested about trainees who have left the programme is not available.

Training

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the sources for the figures for the number of single parents on employment training schemes at December 1988, given by his Department to the Gateshead metropolitan borough council's special programmes committee on 25 January.

Mr. Nicholls: [holding answer 15 May 1989]: The information provided to the special programmes committee of the Gateshead metropolitan borough council about the number of single parents joining employment training was provided by the Department's officials from the normal management information system. It relates only to those people who entered the programme under the special arrangements for lone parents in receipt of income support on an order book through the Department of Social Security. In addition, lone parents may enter under other eligibility conditions, including the main one of being unemployed for six months or more.

The information I provided on 7 April about single parents on employment training to the hon. Member in my reply to his previous question is correct; there is no information presently available about the total number of single parents on the programme.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

China

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the application for asylum by a member of the Chinese educational mission in Middlesex.

Mr. Renton: I have been asked to reply. An official of the Chinese embassy walked into Ealing police station on 11 June and asked for political asylum. The application is under consideration.

WALES

Derelict Land (Shotton)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will call a conference on Clwyd county council, Alyn and Deeside council and Deeside town and community councils with a view to discussing how 7,000 new jobs might be created on the derelict industrial land adjacent to Shotton steelworks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: Clwyd has clearly benefited from the success of the Government's policies to revitalise industrial and economic performance in Wales. Unemployment in the county has fallen by 4,860 in the last 12 months. Regional aid approvals since January 1988 are associated with capital investment of £590 million, including £200 million inward investment, forecasting some 11,300 new jobs.

I am confident that this progress will be maintained and I see no reason to convene a meeting along the lines proposed.

Broadcasting

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he has had formal talks with the chairman of the Welsh Fourth Channel S4C; and what plans he has for further meetings.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has visited S4C twice since becoming Secretary of State, most recently last month. He has had informal discussions with the chairman and members of the authority, as well as with senior staff, on both occasions.

Radiation

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he now intends to conduct an aerial survey for radioactivity in the restricted area of North Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: No.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those sites for which he has given authorisation for the disposal of low-level radioactive waste during the last five years.

Mr. Grist: A list of current authorisations for the disposal of low-level radioactive waste issued in the last five years is as follows:

(2) how many people aged 18 to 25 years are unemployed in each of the parliamentary constituencies of Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in the Official Report the number of long-term unemployed people, male and female, indicating in each instance how many are under the age of 25 years in Wales and in each of the parliamentary constituencies of Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The latest available information, for April 1989, is shown in the table. This includes figures for two years earlier. I am sure that the hon. Gentleman will join me in welcoming the substantial fall in the number of long-term unemployed over the last two years.

Welsh Language

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to allow children whose first language is Welsh to take national curriculum testing at seven through the medium of Welsh; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Yes. Children taught through the medium of Welsh will be assessed in Welsh. Organisations contracted to develop standard assessment tasks are preparing them in both English and Welsh.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to publish a Welsh Language Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have made clear to the chairman of the Welsh Language Board that I will consider very carefully any specific proposals that the board might make.

The strategy document that the board has published today makes clear the board's view that all those with an interest should have the opportunity to shape future policy in support of the Welsh language. The strategy document is the starting point in that process and the board will be consulting on it widely.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the representations he has received concerning national curriculum testing of pupils at the ages of seven and 11 years and whose first language is Welsh; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: A number of the respondents to the consultation exercise on proposals for attainment targets and programmes of study in English 5-11 commented on assessment and testing; most of these supported the Secretary of State's proposals. I shall write to the hon. Gentleman to list the respondents and to list those who subsequently responded to the consultation on the proposal to exempt pupils taught in Welsh from assessment against the attainment targets for English.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet the county councils of Wales to discuss his Department's proposals to enhance the status of the Welsh language; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to meet the Welsh county councils to discuss the Welsh Language Board's proposals in relation to the Welsh language. The Welsh Language Board will however be consulting all those organisations with an interest.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy under the national curriculum on testing in English of pupils whose first language is Welsh at 11 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Pupils who are taught through the medium of Welsh will be assessed in Welsh. At the age of 11 all pupils, whether taught in Welsh or English, will be assessed against the same attainment targets for English.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he proposes to meet the Welsh Language Board to discuss the board's suggestion concerning the possible contents of a Welsh Language Bill.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend regularly meets the chairman of the Welsh Language Board to discuss any proposals that they make.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those district councils in Wales which have published (a) bilingual poll tax forms, (b) English-only forms with a reference to provision of Welsh language forms if requested and (c) English-only forms with no such statement.

Mr. Grist: This information is not held centrally. A welsh translation of the model community charge canvass form circulated in practice note 8 was sent to all district councils in Wales. Camera-ready copy of this translation was also made available on request.

Language Teachers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will call a conference in Wales of local education authorities, teachers unions, parent-teacher associations, trades unions and employers organisations to discuss the shortage in Wales's high schools of teachers of modern languages; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will call an all-Wales conference to discuss the shortage of Welsh language teachers with the local education authorities of Wales; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what initiatives he plans to end the difficulties of recruiting to the high schools of Wales sufficient numbers of Welsh language teachers; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what plans he has to enable the recruitment in the high schools of Wales of sufficient teachers of (a) German, (b) French and (c) Spanish before 1992; and if he will make a statement;

(5) what steps he has taken to ensure that there are sufficient numbers of teachers of the Welsh language to meet the requirements of the national curriculum in (a) local education authority secondary schools and (b) private secondary schools.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: There are no immediate plans to call a national conference to discuss shortages either of Welsh language or of other modern language teachers. The Department will shortly be consulting each of the Welsh local education authorities about the number of teachers needed, including teachers of Welsh and other modern languages, to meet the requirements of the national curriculum and to discuss how the demand can be met.

Officials are also in close touch with the training institutions and we intend to promote liaison between the Department, the Wales Advisory Body and the Universities Funding Council, over the distribution of initial teacher training places within Wales, to ensure that targets are set as high as demand requires and realistic recruitment expectation justifies. Measures to encourage recruitment both from traditional and non-traditional sources have already been taken in conjunction with the Department of Education and Science. The teaching as a career unit has developed a specific programme to attract more Welsh language and Welsh-medium students.

We have no plans to ensure the supply of teachers to private schools but, in setting overall targets of teacher demand, full account is taken of the numbers of trained teachers expected to transfer to or directly enter the private sector.

However, encouraging teacher recruitment, either direct from training or of teachers returning to the profession, represents only part of our strategy for staffing schools to deliver the national curriculum. A very large part of the demand will need to be met by the re-training of teachers already in service. A framework for delivering the necessary in-service training is in place under the local education authority training grant scheme. My right hon. Friend has made expenditure provision for £223,000 under the scheme in 1989-90 for Welsh language training and a further £2·8 million for other training related to the national curriculum, including that necessary for modern languages. A further allocation of £582,000 for school management is intended to help heads and senior staff to manage the changes arising from the Education Reform Act.

We again expect to give a high priority to these training categories when the scheme allocations for 1990-91 are announced later this summer.

Education Reform

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will convene a conference of the local education authorities of Wales to discuss with directors of education and chairmen of local education authorities the (i) financial and (ii) professional consequences to the schools service of local management of schools and the national curriculum;

(2) if he will visit each of the local education authorities in Wales to discuss with them the (i) financial and (ii) professional consequences of local management of schools and the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No request has been made to my right hon. Friend by local education authorities to meet and discuss the consequences of the implementation of the Education Reform Act 1988. At official level discussions on these issues continue to take place through working groups on which all local education authorities are represented.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in the Official Report all Government documents issued to (a) local education authorities and (b) schools as a consequence of the Education Reform Act listing both the number of pages and the cost of the document; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The following documents have been issued by the Welsh Office to local authorities and schools as a direct result of the passing of the Education Reform Act 1988. Most of these documents were produced within the Department and costs cannot be separately identified. I am ensuring that copies are available in the Library of the House.

Cancer Patients

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to make public his plans to improve the facilities in north wales for cancer patients; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Central funds have been made available to Clwyd and Gwynedd health authorities to improve facilities for cancer patients. A comprehensive study of cancer treatment services in north Wales, commissioned by the Welsh Office, is nearing completion and I will wish to consider it carefully, with the health authorities involved, in planning the further development of services.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of BSE infected cattle at EEC-approved slaughterhouses in Wales have been identified.

Mr. Peter Walker: Two.

Environmental Pollution

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his responsibilities for the control of environmental pollution in Wales.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Lady to the reply given today by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the current acreage of the Forestry Commission in Wales;

(2) what is the estimated acreage in Wales of Forestry Commission land planted with (i) broadleaves, and (ii) conifers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: At 31 March 1989 the Forestry Commission managed the following areas of land in Wales:

| | Hectares |
|---|---|
| Broadleaved woodland | 6,000 |
| Conifer woodland | 124,000 |
| Other land | 13,000 |
| Total | 143,000 |

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated value of the assets of the Forestry Commission in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: The estimated value of the Forestry Commission's fixed assets in Wales at 31 March 1988 was as follows:

Plantations (land, roads and timber) £440 million.

Other tangible assets (land, buildings, machinery, plant and equipment) £11 million.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Scrapie

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will ban food stuffs made from scrapie-infected sheep for all fowls, animals and fish following the Southwood report's recommendation of a ban on such feeds for ruminants;

(2) whether only ruminants were being fed with scrapie-infected feed when the Southwood report recommended banning it.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Southwood working party was aware of the fact that protein derived from ruminants was fed to types of animal other than ruminants, and recognised the fact. The working party endorsed the action that the Government had already taken in banning the feeding of ruminant-based protein in ruminant rations. There are no plans to include feed for other types of animal in this ban.

Fur Farming

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations the British Government has made and will be making to the Council of Europe concerning its current discussions on fur farming.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My officials attend these meetings at which recommendations for the welfare of fur-bearing animals are being elaborated. They are seeking to negotiate the most suitable recommendations for the welfare of these animals bearing in mind the Farm Animal Welfare Council's view that there is not enough evidence to set specific cage sizes and that further research is needed into some aspects of fur farming.

Whales

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will raise at the next meeting of the European Community Council of Fisheries Ministers the continual slaughtering of whales by the whaling fleets of certain maritime nations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The European Community does not have competence on whaling matters as such, but those members with an interest in whaling are members of the IWC and we consult them in that forum. At the recent 41st annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission, the commission passed resolutions asking Japan, Iceland and Norway to reconsider their scientific research whaling programmes and rejected Japan's request for its small coastal whaling boats to take 320 minke whales off Japan. I welcome those decisions.

Rabbits

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if there have been any reports in the last year of viral haemorrhagic disease in rabbits in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what steps he is taking to prevent viral haemorrhagic disease in rabbits entering the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: There have been no reports of viral haemorrhagic disease in rabbits in this country. Imported rabbits are subject to six months quarantine and this is an effective safeguard against the introduction of the disease.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report figures for the importation into the United Kingdom of frozen rabbit meat and live rabbits, and the countries of origin, for the last five years.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Data on imported rabbit meat are not available for the years prior to 1988. For 1988, imports of frozen rabbit meat were not separately identified. But imports for 1988 of all presentations of rabbit meat (fresh, chilled, frozen and edible offal) were:

| Country | Rabbit meat and offal (kg) |
|---|---|
| France | 113,800 |
| Poland | 1,700 |
| China | 2,314,100 |

Imports of live domestic rabbits and countries of origin for the last five years were:

| Country | Live rabbits (kg) |
|---|---|
| 1984 | |
| France | 1,076 |
| Irish Republic | 3,000 |
| 1985 | |
| France | 720 |
| 1986 | |
| France | 412 |
| 1987 | |
| USA | 490 |
| 1988 | |

Food Labelling

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is yet in a position to make an announcement about the outcome of his consultation on the proposed guidelines by the Food Advisory Committee on the use of the word "natural" and similar terms in the labelling and advertising of food; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: We have received a large number of comments on the proposed guidelines from consumer, trade and enforcement bodies and from others with an interest in the proposals. I am pleased to say that there has been general support for the principle of the FAC's guidelines and for the voluntary approach proposed. However, concern has been expressed about the detail of certain parts of the guidance and some clarification has also been requested. In view of this, I asked the FAC to consider all the responses received and advise whether, in the light of these, they wished to amend their guidance.

My colleagues and I have now received the committee's further advice. After careful consideration the committee has reaffirmed its recommendation for voluntary self regulation, in the first instance, in this area of labelling. The committee has also agreed some important revisions to the text of the statement, which I believe directly address many of the concerns raised by respondents, generally by clarifying or expanding on certain principles in the statement to ensure that they are as clear and unambiguous as possible. My colleagues and I consider the committee's revised statement to be a sensible basis from which answers to problems in this area of labelling might be developed.

I am sending the FAC's advice out to all interested parties in the United Kingdom with a firm suggestion that in future, when considering food labelling, they observe and adopt the principles that the Food Advisory Committee has set out. I shall watch carefully to see whether this voluntary approach achieves the desired results, and will consider whether further action would be appropriate.

The FAC has also reaffirmed its advice that an advisory group of interested parties, to which cases of doubt could be referred, would ease adoption of the principles proposed. The committee has emphasised that it is not their intention that such a group should in any way circumvent the legal process but simply assist in interpretation of the guidance for particular cases. I cannot see, however, how such a group could operate effectively without becoming involved in matters of legal interpretation which are the responsibilities of the courts. I shall therefore not pursue this idea, but I shall ask my officials to inquire from the various interested parties, in 12 months' time, how the FAC's guidelines are working out in practice.

I have also written to the European Commission enclosing the FAC's advice, and commending this approach to them in formulating their own policies for Community rules in this area of labelling.

Fisheries Council

Mr. Marland: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Fisheries Council in Luxembourg on 20-21 June; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Together with my right hon. colleague, Lord Sanderson, Minister of State, Scottish Office, I attended the Council of Fisheries Ministers in Luxembourg on 21 June 1989.

We secured agreement to an important amendment to restriction on beam trawl lengths that would have applied on 1 July. This will assist our inshore beam fleet and allow them to continue their operations without incurring costly modification. This is most welcome.

We also secured in the negotiations a commitment from the Commission to review urgently this year's total allowable catch for Channel cod and other precautionary TAC's.

After a difficult discussion the Council adopted a regulation laying down common marketing standards for preserved sardines. I ensured that our traditional sardine pastes and pates could continue to be marketed to the benefit of consumers.

On quota-hopping, I stresed the Community-wide nature of the problem and expressed my hope that the Commissioner will come forward urgently with a Community solution. I received strong support from five other member states, and the Commissioner undertook to examine the problem and present the proposals to the Council. The Commissioner also undertook to ensure that in enforcing Community rules there would be no discrimination between member states.

As we requested last December, the Commission reported on recent scientific advice reviewing the TACs for North sea cod and haddock. We have to accept that there is no case for increasing these this year if we are to safeguard the future of these stocks.

Set-aside Scheme

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much land he expects to be taken out of agricultural production under the set-aside scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much land has been set aside under the set-aside scheme.

Mr. Ryder: United Kingdom arable farmers who joined the scheme for the 1988-89 crop year have set aside some 55,000 hectares of land. The scheme is open until 31 July 1989 for applications from farmers wishing to join for the 1989-90 crop year. The amount of additional land entered for the scheme, in this and future years, will depend on the decisions of farmers in the light of their own circumstances and the continuing reductions in support for arable crops under the stabiliser system.

Multi-annual Guidance Programme

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made by the United Kingdom and other European Economic Community countries towards meeting the targets set in the fisheries multi-annual guidance programme.

Mr. Donald Thompson: A number of member states are deemed by the Commission to have made sufficient progress towards meeting their programme targets. The United Kingdom is currently considering with industry representations various options for reducing fleet capacity.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the largest number of cases of BSE recorded on a single farm; what is the average number of cases per affected herd; what is the proportion of affected herds which have had a single case; and what is the proportion of all dairy herds that have had one or more cases.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information is as follows:

—largest number of confirmed BSE cases on a single farm—18
—average number of cases per infected herd—1·5
—proportion of affected herds having a single case—71 per cent.
—proportion of all dairy herds having one or more cases—6·5 per cent.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Caerphilly of 19 June, when he intends to introduce recording of the information concerning the incidence of BSE at EEC approved and non-approved slaughterhouses.

Mr. Donald Thompson: This is already in hand. The results will be collected each quarter beginning with the period April-June 1989.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the public policy considerations which underlie the decision to operate a slaughter with compensation scheme for cattle infected with tuberculosis but not for deer infected with tuberculosis.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I announced on 16 June at column 563, in reply to my right hon. Friend the Member for Westmoreland and Lonsdale, (Mr. Jopling) my intention to introduce a slaughter with compensation scheme for deer suffering from tuberculosis.

Animal Disease

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in respect of which notifiable animal disease he operates a slaughter without compensation scheme; and if he will list such schemes together with details of the appropriate authority.

Mr. Donald Thompson: None.

Divisional Headquarters

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the divisional headquarters offices of his Department.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My department's regional and divisional Offices are situated in the following locations in England:

Eastern Region
Regional office:
Cambridge

Divisional offices:
Chelmsford
Huntingdon
Lincoln
Norwich

Midlands and Western Region
Regional office:
Wolverhampton

Divisional offices:
Crewe
Nottingham
Preston
Worcester

Northern region
Regional office:
Leeds

Divisional offices:
Beverley
Carlisle
Newcastle-upon-Tyne
Northallerton

South Eastern region
Regional office:
Reading

Divisional offices:
Guildford
Maidstone
Oxford

South Western region
Regional office:
Bristol

Divisional offices:
Exeter
Gloucester
Taunton
Truro

Staff of my Department's Agricultural Development and Advisory Service are also located in Wales, but the Welsh Office is responsible for their accommodation.

Price Fixing

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food with which organisations he or his ministerial colleagues had meetings to discuss the price fixing of agricultural produce prior to their agreement in Brussels in 1988.

Mr. MacGregor: In 1989, as in 1988 and previously, Agriculture Ministers and senior officials held meetings with a number of organisations to discuss the Commission's price fixing proposals. In 1989 these discussions involved, in particular, the following bodies:

Agricultural and Allied Workers National Trade Group of the Transport and General Workers Union

Consumers in the European Community Group

National Farmers Union, Scottish National Farmers Union, Ulster Farmers Union

Farmers Union of Wales

Food and Drink Federation

A number of other organisations were offered invitations to attend meetings to discuss the Commission's price proposals but declined to do so.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to designate all the areas on the original list submitted to him by the Countryside Commission and Nature Conservancy Council as environmentally sensitive by the end of 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: I have no plans at present to designate any further ESAs. All the areas shortlisted for ESA status in England by the Countryside Commission and the Nature Conservancy Council have been designated. These schemes are being monitored and I plan to carry out a full review of ESA policy before the first agreements terminate in 1992.

Farm Diversification Grants

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of grants approved under the farm diversification grants scheme; and the number that were rejected on environmental grounds.

Mr. Ryder: During 1988, 669 applications for capital grant were approved under the farm diversification grant scheme; 137 applications were rejected but none were on environmental grounds.

Between 1 January and 31 May 1989, 332 applications were received and 87 were rejected. I regret that information on the reasons for rejections during this period is not readily available.

Hedgerows

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the names of all grant schemes available to farmers for planting hedgerows, giving their date of introduction, when they ceased; and whether they are still available, since 1959;

(2) if he will list the names of all grant schemes available to farmers for renewing hedgerows, giving their date of introduction, when they ceased, and whether they are still available, since 1959.

Mr. Ryder: Grant was available under the following schemes for the provision, replacement or improvement of hedges:

| Name of Scheme | Date Introduced | Date Closed to Applications |
|---|---|---|
| Farm improvement scheme | 1 September 1957 | 31 December 1970 |
| Horticulture improvement scheme | 14 April 1960 | 31 December 1973 |
| Hill land improvement scheme | 14 August 1967 | 31 December 1970 |
| Farm capital grant scheme | 1 January 1971 | 30 September 1980 |
| Horticulture capital grant scheme | 1 January 1974 | 30 September 1980 |
| Farm and horticulture development scheme | 1 January 1974 | 30 September 1980 |
| Agriculture and horticulture development scheme | 1 October 1980 | 30 September 1985 |
| Agriculture and horticulture grant scheme | 1 October 1980 | 9 July 1985 |
| Agriculture improvement regulations | 1 October 1985 | 28 November 1988 |
| Agriculture improvement scheme | 1 October 1985 | 29 November 1988 |

The closing dates quoted are those for the receipt of new applications. Expenditure incurred before the closing date could be claimed subsequently and where the applicant held an approved plan of investments, the expenditure too could be incurred after the closing date. Claims are still being accepted from holders of approved plans under the agriculture and horticulture development scheme and the Agriculture Improvement Regulations.

Grants of 50 per cent. in the less favoured areas and 40 per cent. elsewhere for the provision, replacement or improvement of hedges are currently available under the farm and conservation grant scheme which was introduced on 20 February 1989.

Training Courses

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the number of training courses given on protectiing rivers and streams from agricultural pollution by the agricultural development advisory service officers on (a) a national basis and (b) a regional basis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: ADAS provides routine training for new entrants and specialist and general advisers on pollution avoidance and control measures. The training is undertaken at national and regional level as an integrated part of discipline training, but records are not available of the precise number of courses held.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the number of training courses given on conservation of wildlife and landscape by the agricultural development advisory service offices on (a) a national basis and (b) a regional basis in each year since 1981; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: Since 1981, 35 national training courses have been held by ADAS on conservation of wildlife and landscape involving approximately 900 advisory officers. Information on regional training over the same period is not available, but since 1987 more than 20 conservation courses have been held in regions. Conservation is also included as an integral part of discipline training for new entrants and ADAS advisers.

Planning Applications

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many planning applications he has commented on (a) within national parks and (b) outside national parks since 1986; and in each category how many were opposed;

(2) how many planning applications he has commented on (a) within environmentally sensitive areas and (b) outside environmentally sensitive areas since 1987; and in each category how many were opposed;

(3) how many planning applications he has commented on (a) within areas of outstanding natural beauty and (b) outside areas of outstanding natural beauty since 1986; and in each category how many were opposed.

Mr. Ryder: The statistics on consultations with MAFF by planning authorities about development involving agricultural land are not kept in the format requested. The information is, therefore, not readily available.

DEFENCE

Territorial Army (Vetting)

33. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any proposals to improve the arrangements for vetting members of the Territorial Army in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Neubert: The procedures aimed at ensuring members of paramilitary or extremist organisations are excluded from service in the Territorial Army in Northern Ireland or any other part of the armed forces are kept under constant review.

Photonics

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if any research programmes are under way concerning the use of photonics for communicating with Royal Navy submarines.

Mr. Neubert: It is not our practice to comment on operational matters of this kind.

Transmitters

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the sites of all current and proposed extremely low frequency, very low frequency and low frequency transmitters in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Neubert: I am not prepared to comment on security grounds, beyond acknowledging the proposed trial of an extremely low frequency transmitter at Glengarry, which has been the subject of several previous answers to the hon. Member.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans his Department has to increase the number of low frequency transmitters in the United Kingdom;

(2) what plans his Department has to increase the number of VLF transmitters in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Neubert: I am not prepared to comment for security reasons.

Submarine Communications

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what plans his Department has to increase the number of systems available for communicating with the Trident submarine fleet;

(2) what water space management agreements exist to ensure that United States and United Kingdom SSBNs do not encounter each other whilst on patrol.

Mr. Neubert: It is not our practice to comment on operational matters of this kind.

Submarines (Communications)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the reasons why a TACAMO-type system of very low frequency communication with submarines was rejected for the Royal Navy.

Mr. Neubert: No.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if there are any plans to equip Royal Navy submarines in order to receive Oscar or Lasercom signals.

Mr. Neubert: It is not our practice to comment on operational matters of this kind.

Tornado Aircraft (Storage)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Tornado aircraft are currently held in storage at RAF Leeming.

Mr. Neubert: None.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Tornado aircraft are currently held in storage at RAF Coningsby.

Mr. Neubert: No Tornados are held in storage at RAF Coningsby. However, as the RAF's receiving point for new Tornado F3s, at any one time a small number of aircraft may be held there in reserve while awaiting allocation to their operational squadrons.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Tornado GR 1 aircraft were held in storage on 1 April in each year since 1981;

(2) what is the average length of time for which individual Tornado GR1 aircraft have been held in storage since 1981.

Mr. Neubert: No Tornado GR1s were held in storage on 1 April of any year since 1981 with the exception of 1983 and 1984. Although detailed records are no longer held, it is estimated that seven and 18 Tornado GR1s were held in storage on 1 April 1983 and 1984 respectively, while awaiting allocation to their operational squadrons. The average period in storage of each aircraft is estimated to have been between six to nine months.

RAF St. Athan (Aircraft Storage)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the (a) average and (b) peak total number of aircraft held in storage at RAF St. Athan in each year since 1980.

Mr. Neubert: RAF St. Athan is a major maintenance depot and is used routinely for storing attrition aircraft and aircraft awaiting servicing. Records of the number of aircraft held in storage are not kept in the form requested. However, it is estimated that, on average, about 50 aircraft of various types and ages are held at RAF St. Athan.

Land (Cunninghame, North)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans exist for acquisition of additional land by his Department in the Cunninghame, North constituency.

Mr. Neubert: There are at present no such plans.

Nuclear Deterrent

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Don Valley of 2 March, Official Report, columns 253-54, if he will make a statement as to what factors Her Majesty's Government consider to be the essential constituents of a fully effective, reliable and survivable deterrent.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the second memorandum submitted by the Ministry of Defence to the Foreign Affairs Committee on 11 May 1988, which was published on pages 35 to 37 of the minutes of evidence in its third report of the 1987-88 Session (HC280). Paragraphs 6 to 8 in particular contain the information he seeks.

Sea-based Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Her Majesty's Government have any plans to (a) withdraw some of the sea-based tactical nuclear weapons on Royal Navy vessels and (b) re-evaluate the utility to United Kingdom national defence of sea-based nuclear weapons.

Mr. Neubert: As part of the studies related to modernising the United Kingdom's theatre nuclear weapons capability, consideration is being given to the replacement of the full spectrum of United Kingdom tactical nuclear weapons, including sea-based systems. However, no decisions have yet been taken.

F111 Aircraft

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many United States Air Force F111 aircraft were withdrawn from bases in England in 1988; and what was the reason for their withdrawal.

Mr. Neubert: None.

"Who Framed Colin Wallace?"

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on allegations concerning the forging of CIA documents used by former serving army officers and civil servants reported in the book "Who Framed Colin Wallace?" by Paul Foot.

Mr. Neubert: The hon. Member made allegations as to the forging of CIA documents during the Adjournment debate of 20 June last year, but they are not repeated in Mr. Foot's book. I have nothing to add on this matter to the many answers the hon. Member has already received, for example in the letter sent to him on 15 August 1988 by my predecessor, a copy of which was placed in the House of Commons Library.

Reserve Establishments

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the locations of all Royal Naval Reserve and Royal Marines Reserve establishments in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Neubert: Not all Naval reservist units have their own establishments; some are accommodated with other service units. The following is a list of all Royal Naval Reserve and Royal Marines Reserve units with their locations:

RNR

HMS Calliope, Tyne and Wear
HMS Cambria, Cardiff
HMS Camberdown, Dundee
HMS Caroline, Belfast
HMS Ceres, Leeds
HMS Claverhouse, Edinburgh

Nuclear Depth Bombs

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what increase there has been since 1980 in the number of Royal Naval helicopters capable of dropping nuclear depth bombs; what plans are in existence or under consideration to increase this capability; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: The number of helicopters capable of dropping nuclear depth bombs has remained broadly constant since 1980. Our plans in this area, as in all others, are kept under regular review.

NATO (Report)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has received a copy of the report "New Directions for NATO: Adapting the Atlantic Alliance to the Needs of the 1990s" by the Institute for Resource and Security Studies and the Institute for Peace and International Security.

Mr. Neubert: Yes.

BAOR (Security)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are involved in the maintenance of security at the British Army of the Rhine base at Osnabruck.

Mr. Neubert: A range of measures, including the use of service personnel, is taken to maintain security at the base but, for security reasons, I am not prepared to disclose details.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are involved in the maintenance of security at British Army of the Rhine bases.

Mr. Neubert: For security reasons it is not our policy to divulge such details.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has about the reported bombing of Quebec barracks at the British Army of the Rhine base at Osnabruck; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: At 0130 hours on 19 June 1989 an explosion took place at Quebec barracks at Osnabruck. The attack involved five high explosive devices, only one of which exploded. Shortly before the explosion, an unidentified intruder was challenged by a German civilian employee. The intruder was armed and a shot was fired. The German civilian was then struck in the face by the intruder, sustaining minor injuries. As a result of the shot being fired, the occupants of a nearby accommodation block were roused, the alarm was raised and several suspected devices were discovered outside the accommodation block. The building was successfully evacuated before one of the devices exploded. There were no casualties. Police inquiries are in progress in Germany and elsewhere.

It is worth noting that, like the failed attack on Clive barracks at Tern hill on 20 February this year, the terrorists' intention of causing significant casualties was thwarted by the vigilance and prompt action of on-duty personnel. In the case of Quebec barracks I would like to pay tribute to the action of the German employee who, though unarmed, challenged the intruder.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the annual expenditure on physical security arrangements for British Army of the Rhine bases in each of the last five years;

(2) what was the annual expenditure on physical security at the British Army of the Rhine base at Osnabruck for each of the last five years.

Mr. Neubert: It would require disproportionate cost and effort to identify such figures.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the last co-ordinated test and evaluation of security at the Osnabruck British Army of the Rhine base was carried out.

Mr. Neubert: A co-ordinated test and evaluation of security at Quebec barracks was last carried out on 9 June 1989.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any civilian workers at British Army of the Rhine bases have any involvement in the maintenance of security at those bases.

Mr. Neubert: For security reasons it is not our policy to disclose this information.

Blind Take-off Manoeuvres

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of the practice of blind take-off manoeuvres; how frequently this manoeuvre is carried out by (a) RAF aircraft based in the United Kingdom and (b) United States Air Force aircraft based in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: Take-off manoeuvres by aircraft of the Royal Air Force or the United States Air Force stationed in this country are not carried out "blind".

HOME DEPARTMENT

Harp Seals

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards the culling of baby harp seals.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Since there are no harp seals which are native to the United Kingdom, the question of culling does not arise in this country.

Prisoners (Transfers)

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what basis his Department considers requests by prisoners to serve the remainder of their sentences in another United Kingdom jurisdiction.

Mr. Hurd: My Department, in conjunction with the Scottish and Northern Ireland Offices, has recently reviewed the policy governing requests by prisoners to be transferred to another jurisdiction in the United Kingdom. Any inmate in England and Wales, Scotland or Northern Ireland who applies to be transferred to either of the other jurisdictions to serve the rest of his or her sentence will normally be transferred, provided that (1) the inmate would have at least six months left to serve in the receiving jurisdiction before his or her date of release; (2) the inmate was ordinarily resident in the receiving jurisdiction prior to the current sentence; or his or her close family currently reside there and there are reasonable grounds for believing that it is the inmate's firm intention to take up residence there on release; and (3) both Departments concerned are reasonably satisfied that the inmate will not, if transferred, disrupt or attempt to disrupt any prison establishment, or otherwise pose an unacceptable risk to security.

Even if these conditions are met, however, transfer may be refused if it is considered that the inmate's crimes were so serious as to render him or her undeserving of any degree of public sympathy or to make it inappropriate that the inmate should benefit from a substantial reduction in time left to serve, if that would be a consequence of transfer. Similarly, transfers may be refused if there are reasonable grounds for believing that the inmate's primary intention in making the application is to secure a reduction in the time left to serve. On the other hand, an application that does not meet these conditions may nevertheless be granted where there are strong compassionate or other compelling grounds for transfer.

Students (Immigration)

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the new immigration rule which prevents visitors switching to student status whilst in the United Kingdom will be applied to visa nationals only; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Yes. The generous provisions in the current rules have been abused by some who are not students but whose aim is to take work or to remain here permanently. Many of these enter as visitors and subsequently switch to student status, but have no intention whatsoever of pursuing genuine study here. The "no-switching" provision is designed to prevent this abuse and has been confined to visa nationals because the available evidence suggests that passengers from visa countries are the major source of the abuse. Hence, while in recent years visa nationals have made up only about 20 per cent. of those admitted to the country as students, they have constituted 60 per cent. of grants of extensions of stay as a student to those originally admitted as visitors. Further, two exercises conducted by the immigration service and the police against suspect educational establishments revealed that, of some 6,000 alleged students on the books of these establishments, 95 per cent. were visa nationals and 95 per cent. of these had been orginally admitted as ordinary or business visitors. The educational facilities offered were adequate for only a fraction of the number on the books.

The change is therefore necessary to ensure the effective operation of the visa system. It would be wasteful of resources and unnecessary to extend it to non-visa nationals; in particular such an extension would require the needless issue of over 100,000 additional entry clearances worldwide each year. Visa nationals will still be able to come to the United Kingdom for study, even if they have been unable to finalise all the arrangements beforehand, provided that they make their intentions clear and obtain the necessary visa in advance. Genuine visitors will not be affected in any way.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Social Security (South Down)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of claimants who made application, were awarded and accepted (a) social fund loans, (b) community care grants at each of the social security offices in South Down for the financial year 1988-89.

Mr. Needham: The information for the period 11 April 1988 to 31 March 1989 is given in the table.

| Social Security Office | Budgeting loans | | Crisis loans | | Community care grants | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pensioners at each of the social security offices in South Down no longer qualify for housing benefit as a result of the recent pension increase.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of the total social fund expenditure has been written off as unrecoverable for the financial year 1988-89.

Mr. Needham: Total social fund expenditure in the period 11 April 1988 to 31 March 1989 was £18,485,998. It was not practicable to pursue recovery of funeral payments of £934,665 and loans of £1,952. These figures are provisional.

Kincora Boys' Home

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his reply of 18 April, Official Report, column 130, to the hon. Member for Brent, East, on what date the three claims were settled; and when he expects the eight other claims to be processed by.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 22 June 1989]: One claim was settled on 15 April 1988, the other two on 5 April 1989. It is not possible to give any indication of when the eight other claims will be processed.

Housing (Armagh City)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many units of accommodation there are in each Housing Executive estate within Armagh city; how many units are currently unoccupied at each estate; how many units of each estate are presently vandalised or boarded up; and how many new units of accommodation does the executive propose to construct in Armagh city in each of the next five years.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 15 June 1989]: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. I am advised by the chairman that at 1 May 1989 the number of units of accommodation, the number of units unoccupied and the number of units vandalised or boarded up in each estate in Armagh city are as follows:

NATIONAL FINANCE

Government Bonds

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the value of the early repurchases of Government bonds since the April Budget.

Mr. Lilley: Q2 figures will be published in the August Bank of England Quarterly Bulletin. Net transactions, including redemptions, for March and April are published in table F of the Bank of England's monthly monetary statistics.

Value Added Tax

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the operation of the value added tax cash accounting scheme; and whether he has any plans (a) to adjust the turnover level of £250,000 to take into account changes to the retail prices index and (b) to review the level of the threshold.

Mr. Lilley: The cash accounting scheme was introduced on 1 October 1987 and is available to businesses with an annual taxable turnover not exceeding £250,000. It is used by about 60,000 businesses. Customs and Excise have recently consulted representative bodies and small businesses to consider all aspects of the scheme with the aim of improving take-up. The views of those who responded are currently being considered and the outcome of the consultation will be announced in due course. The existing turnover limit is significantly higher than that originally proposed and required the formal agreement of the European Commission. Any further increase would also have to be approved by the Commission.

Privatisation (Debt Repayment)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the individual amounts of debt repayments written off in each of the privatisations and sale of Government assets since 1979 and the aggregate of these write-offs.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The normal practice on privatisation of a nationalised industry or company wholly or majority owned by Government is to repay, rather than write off, debt. This repayment may be financed from the company's existing resources, the injection of new equity or new debt finance. In some cases the Government have provided the finance to repay debts, for example, by an equity injection.

National loans fund debt has been written off only in the cases listed in the table, totalling £3,014,662,728. These write-offs had no direct effect on public expenditure since they represented a reconstruction of the balance sheets of the industries concerned. In each case, having had NLF debt written off, the successor company issued new equity or debt securities to be held by the Secretary of State as assets on the consolidated fund pending realisation.

TRANSPORT

Rail Electrification (Birmingham)

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received a letter dated 16 May from the chairman of the West Midlands passenger transport authority seeking a meeting between him and a delegation of members of the authority to discuss the electrification of the Birmingham cross-city railway line; and if he will meet such a delegation in the near future.

Mr. Portillo: I have agreed to meet the chairman of the West Midlands PTE when I have had BR's formal submission on this scheme.

Pedestrian Safety

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the annual cost of the major research programme designed specifically to help identify further ways of reducing pedestrian casualties to which he refers in his pedestrian safety proposals published in April.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The cost of the research programme referred to in the Department's leaflet on pedestrian safety is roughly £1·6 million in the current year. It is likely to increase next year.

Over 40 per cent. of the current figure is being spent on research aimed primarily at pedestrian safety. The remainder will benefit pedestrians along with other road users.

Fast Rail Link

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report the terms of reference and time scale to which private interests will need to work in order to bring about the construction of British Rail's proposed fast rail link from the Kent coast to London.

Mr. Portillo: These are matters for British Rail to discuss with the private interests concerned.

Birmingham North Orbital Route

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those private companies who have approached his Department in connection with alternative methods of finance for the Birmingham north orbital route; and the date of their first approach.

Mr. Portillo: Some approaches have been made but these must remain commercially confidential.

MV Majestic

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 16 June, Official Report, column 550, to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley relating to MV Majestic, what futher details he has of the nature of the underwater obstruction referred to.

Mr. Portillo: The investigation is continuing. It is known that the nets caught on an obstruction on the sea bottom but the nature of the obstruction has not been determined.

Road Traffic Law

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he proposes to bring forward legislation to implement his proposals in "The Road User and the Law".

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Legislation will be brought forward as soon as parliamentary time is available.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Timetable Motions

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Lord President of the Council if, further to his reply of 16 March, Official Report, column 311, he will list the further occasions on which the Government have introduced the guillotine this Session.

Mr. Wakeham: The information requested is as follows:

Allocation of time order

| Bill | |
|---|---|
| Self-Governing Schools Etc. (Scotland) | 3 May 1989 |
| Dock Work | 8 May 1989 |

WALES

Medical Physicists

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he intends to take on the problem of medical physicists leaving National Health Service hospitals in south Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: The number of medical physicists —whole-time equivalents—employed by health authorities in Wales over the past four years is given in the table. The management side of the Scientific and Professional Staffs Council is currently investigating the recruitment and retention of scientists, including medical physicists, within the NHS generally.

In Wales, medical physicists have been included in staff groups designated for detailed scrutiny as part of the 1989 manpower resource planning exercise being undertaken by all district health authorities under the auspices of the manpower steering group, established by my Department, with the intention of examining manpower requirements over the next 10 years. Those plans will also examine wastage and recruitment rates for the purpose of identifying potential staffing difficulties and to enable action to be taken at the local or all-Wales level to forestall problems. Work is also in hand by the manpower steering group on a study of medical physics and bio-engineering in the NHS in Wales, which will address the question of staff retention, particularly in the area of equipment management.

Water Shortages

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list in the Official Report the outstanding capital projects and their estimated cost throughout Wales proposed by the Welsh water authority which plan to alleviate dry weather water shortages; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list in the Official Report, for each of the years since 1979 and giving their cost, all those capital projects of the Welsh water authority which have been initiated to guard against water shortages as a consequence of dry weather;

(3) if he will list those areas in Wales where water supply levels give cause for concern; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will make a statement concerning water shortages in Wales consequent upon the current heat wave and the Welsh water authority's banning of water hoses and sprinklers in all areas.

Mr. Peter Walker: No. This is a matter for the Welsh water authority.

ENVIRONMENT

Unleaded Petrol

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the effectiveness of the Government television advertising campaign on unleaded petrol.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In a survey conducted during the week commencing 21 April, 60 per cent. of those interviewed, when prompted, were aware of the advertisement. This put it in the top 10 TV advertisements most remembered by the public.

The advertisements ran from 1 to 14 April and were shown on all commercial TV stations in the United Kingdom. It is estimated that 76 per cent. of all adults had the opportunity to see them at least once and 33 per cent. at least four times. On average the target audience of all motorists responsible for purchasing petrol had four opportunities to see the advertisement.

The unleaded petrol share of the market has increased dramatically from 6·4 per cent. in March to 19·3 per cent. in May.

Teesside UDC (Jobs)

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many jobs have been created within the Teesside urban development corporation zone since its inception; how many jobs were created as a consequence of the direct intervention of the corporation; and what has been the cost per job.

Mr. Trippier: Comprehensive figures on the total number of jobs created within the Teesside development corporation area since its inception are not readily available. The corporation estimates, however, that up to the end of March 1989, 1,459 permanent jobs had been created within the UDA, in projects assisted by the corporation, at a cost per job of £984. The Government also have two task forces and an action team contributing to the regeneration of inner cities on Teesside, and unemployment in the 15 wards within the Teesside DC zone has fallen by over one third in the two years since May 1987.

All Souls Burial Ground, Halifax

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to reply to queries about the closure of All Souls burial ground raised by the parochial church council of All Souls Living Church council, Haley hill, Halifax, on 3 May 1988, 23 September 1988, 14 March 1989 and 16 May 1989; and why it is still waiting for a reply.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department replied on 22 June. I very much regret the long delay in replying due to an oversight which has now been rectified.

Community Charge

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated cost of the minority language versions of the community charge leaflet, "The Community Charge (The So-called Poll Tax): How It Will Work For You."

Mr. Gummer: Translations in eight languages are being produced, in initial print runs of 10,000 each. The total cost is estimated at £40,000 approximately.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress on the implementation of poll tax registration by local authorities, with reference to support facilities provided by his Department.

Mr. Gummer: Community charges registration officers (CCROs) have until 1 December 1989 to compile their registers. I believe that most CCROs are making good progress. To assist CCROs and authorities with implementation generally, the Department has issued 18 practice notes, and laid the regulations as soon as was practicable after the enactment of the primary legislation.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether he intends to issue any further advice to community charge registration officers on the information which can be properly sought through community charge registration forms;

(2) if he intends to issue a leaflet to every household in England and Wales informing potential poll tax payers of their precise rights and duties in completing registration forms;

(3) if he will make a statement on action that should be taken by individuals who are asked by community charge registration officers to answer non-statutory questions on their community charge registration forms;

(4) what steps he is taking to monitor the information being requested by community charge registration officers as a part of the registration process in England and Wales.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 19 June 1989]: The Department has given clear and explicit advice to local authorities and community charges registration officers on this matter, and, in conjunction with the local authority associations, issued a model registration form last autumn. It is for registration officers to ensure that their requests for information comply with their statutory powers and the Data Protection Act.

Registration officers may require only such information as is necessary for them to carry out their statutory functions, which are to compile and maintain the register. Advice on the information that needs to be sought from the public in order to compile the register was provided to registration officers in community charge practice note number 3. Advice on the requirements of the Data Protection Act is contained in community charge practice notes numbers 4 and 10 which deal specifically with the data protection aspects of registration, and the need to register as a data user. Practice note number 8 contains the model registration form, and advises registration officers to ensure that any requests for information additional to that needed for registration purposes should be clearly indicated, so that people would know that they did not have to supply it. Practice note number 16, on joint and several liability, specifically points out that joint and several liability is not a registration matter, and advises against including questions on relationships on registration forms.

Birds

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has made to his counterpart Ministers in the EEC concerning the shooting and trapping of protected bird species during migration; and if he will seek to persuade them to enforce in full the provisions of the appropriate European legislation.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 22 June 1987]: The EC directive 79/409 EEC on the conservation of wild birds requires all member states to protect migratory and other birds. The Government fully support the directive and its enforcement. It is the responsibility of the EC Commission to ensure that adequate measures are taken.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Barlow Clowes

Mr. Michael: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the effect on recovery by Barlow Clowes investors in the United Kingdom of last Friday's High Court ruling authorising the transfer of funds from the British-based to the Gibraltar-based operation.

Mr. Maude: It is too soon to make any such assessment.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to be able to provide sufficient information about the Barlow Clowes collapse to make a full statement to the House.

Mr. Maude: The Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration is currently considering the role of my Department in this matter. In addition, there are a number of actions before the courts. It is too soon to say when all these matters will be resolved.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether there are any outstanding requests from the ombudsman to his Department in connection with the cases currently under investigation by him arising out of the Barlow Clowes collapse.

Mr. Maude: My Department is co-operating fully with the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and endeavours to respond to all his inquiries as quickly as possible.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Antarctic (Protection)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 143, what appraisal he has made of the possible effects on the ecology of the Antarctic as a result of the passage of the Antarctic Minerals Bill.

Mr. Eggar: We believe that the Antarctic minerals convention provides protection of the Antarctic environment of a very high order. Its entry into force will protect the Antarctic environment against uncontrolled minerals exploitation. We are proceeding with the Antarctic Minerals Bill to enable the United Kingdom to ratify the Convention.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 143, what steps he is taking to negotiate specific treaty obligations to protect the Antarctic in the event of an oil spill or blowout.

Mr. Eggar: Control of marine pollution and therefore of oil spills in Antarctica is on the agenda of the XV Antarctic treaty consultative meeting in Paris in October.

There can be no oil exploration in Antarctica, and therefore no blowouts, until the Antarctic minerals convention comes into force and a liability protocol has been negotiated and has itself entered into force. The convention contains strict safeguards for the protection of the Antarctic environment, and requires that no minerals activity can take place until the capacity exists to respond effectively to accidents.

Cambodia

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will detail the moves, in which the United Kingdom is participating being taken to oppose a return of the Khmer Rouge army in Cambodia.

Mr. Eggar: The surest way to prevent the Khmer Rouge returning to power by force is a political settlement under which Cambodians can freely elect a Government of their choice. We are actively involved in international efforts to achieve such a settlement, both multilaterally and in bilateral contacts with those most closely concerned.

DNA Testing

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the projected public expenditure savings arising from the introduction of a central DNA testing scheme for those seeking entry clearance to the United Kingdom; and if he will identify the savings to his Department.

Mr. Eggar: We need practical experience of the numbers who will be processed under the scheme to judge what, if any, resource savings may be achievable. The scheme will be voluntary and take-up will vary from post to post. The position will be closely monitored.

Foreign Service Staff (Children's Education)

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many independent boarding schools are accepted by his Department as suitable to receive grant payment for the education of children employed by the foreign service; how many children are currently in receipt of this financal assistance; how often members of his Department visit the schools to satisfy themselves about the education and the welfare provided for young people; and how often financial assistance has been withdrawn because a school has failed to meet the required criteria,

(2) what criteria are used for judging the quality and academic achievements of independent boarding schools before agreeing to provide finance for members of the foreign service wishing to have their children educated at these schools.

Mr. Eggar: As I explained in my written answer of 16 June at column 562, diplomatic service staff may receive an allowance to send their children to any registered independent boarding school in the United Kingdom, provided it offers the full range of subjects normally offered by a state day school and in a form generally available in the state system. Within that broad range parents accept responsibility for choosing a school whose record of accomplishments appears to suit the requirements and capabilities of their children. All such schools will have been approved by the Department of Education and Science and will be inspected periodically by one of Her Majesty's inspectors. We have neither the expertise nor the resources to duplicate the work of that Department.

Allowances are currently paid in respect of 881 children attending a total of 355 schools. There has never been a case of allowances being withdrawn as a result of a school's performance.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when instructions were sent to the British embassy in Islamabad to issue a visa to Mr. Zahood Ahmed to enter the United Kingdom; when Mr. Ahmed, whose date of birth is 22 July 1967 and whose Home Office reference is A412361, first applied for entry clearance; when Mr. Ahmed's appeal against refusal to grant him a visa was upheld; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar [pursuant to his reply, 12 June 1989 c. 310]: In accordance with the recent guidelines on the handling of representations by Members of Parliament in immigration cases, issued to Members on 14 December 1988, I have referred the question to the correspondence unit of migration and visa department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The hon. Member will receive a reply from the unit in due course.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Mr. Afzal Kahn, whose date of birth is 18 November 1969, and whose reference is IMM 92807, applied for entry clearance to the United Kingdom at Her Majesty's embassy in Islamabad; when his application was refused; and when an explanatory statement setting out the detailed grounds of refusal was despatched to Mr. Khan or his representation.

Mr. Eggar [pursuant to his reply, 12 June 1989, c. 310]: Mr. Khan applied for an entry clearance at the embassy in Islamabad on 18 November 1987. His application was refused on 25 September 1988 and the embassy received an appeal from him on 10 November 1988. I regret that due to pressure of work at the embassy the explanatory statement has not yet been despatched. It is, however, nearing completion and will be forwarded to the appellate authority very shortly.

PRIME MINISTER

European Community

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister what benefits have been brought to (a) Doncaster and (b) South Yorkshire from membership of the European Community.

The Prime Minister: The European regional development fund has made grants during the last four years of some £53 million to South Yorkshire, of which about £11 million went to Doncaster. Low interest loans worth £750,000 for Doncaster and £13 million for South Yorkshire have been obtained from the European Coal and Steel Community. In the last three years the European social fund made grants of some £1·65 million to Doncaster, within £11·4 million for South Yorkshire as a whole.

Ivory

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer of 20 June Official Report, column 78, when she returned from Zimbabwe; when the articles were deposited with Her Majesty's Customs and Excise; whether an import licence under CITES was applied for in respect of these items; when she decided that they should be retained by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise; on what date and by what means she informed Her Majesty's Customs and Excise of her decision; if she will describe the three items of silver and ivory jewellery and state a valuation of each item; and whether she took any steps to determine the origin and the legality of the ivory contained in the ivory jewellery.

The Prime Minister: I returned from Africa on 2 April 1989. I deposited the articles with Her Majesty's Customs and Excise as soon as I was informed that the requirements for importation had not been completed. I have nothing further to add to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member on 20 June.

Israel

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Prime Minister whether at her recent meeting with the Israeli Prime Minister she asked him whether he accepted Security Council restriction 242.

The Prime Minister: During my talks with Mr. Shamir, I stressed that, to be successful, negotiations on a middle east settlement must be held on the basis of territory for peace as called for in resolution 242. Mr. Shamir has not so far given any commitment on this point.

Malaysia

Miss. Lestor: To ask the Prime Minister who indicated on behalf of Her Majesty's Government that they would consider a request from the Malaysian Government for overseas aid, contained in correspondence concerning the sale of arms to Malaysia that preceded the signing of the memorandum of understanding in 1988; and what period of time elapsed before Her Majesty's Government stated that it would not be acceptable to link aid with the defence sales package.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 June 1989]: The Government made clear to the Malaysian Government on a number of occasions in 1988 that we were most willing to consider Malaysian requests for aid. However, as indicated in the answer given to the hon. Member on 13 June by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence made it clear in his letter to the Malaysian Finance Minister of 28 June 1988 that the provision of overseas aid as an integral part of a negotiated agreement on the defence package was not possible.

SOCIAL SECURITY

AIDS

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what advice he has received concerning the cost of a recommended diet for people with AIDS or HIV infection; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is his estimate of the current underprovision of benefit for a person on income support who has been recommended a diet for someone with AIDS or HIV infection who (a) does and (b) does not qualify for a disability premium;

(3) what is his estimate of the double provision a person on supplementary benefit before April 1988 would have received if he had been awarded the full cost of a recommended diet for someone with AIDS or HIV infection; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The supplementary benefit scale rates did not include a specific amount for food. It was for individuals to decide how best to spend their money in the light of their own needs and preferences. The same is true of income support. The estimates requested cannot therefore be made.

I am aware that people with AIDS are frequently advised to follow a high protein, high calorie diet. I have been advised that a diet giving 150 per cent. of normal protein and calorie requirements can be devised to meet the needs of individual patients. Such a diet was costed at £14·19 per week (1986 prices) in an article by MacDonald and Forsythe from St. James' university hospital, Leeds, which was published in "Human Nutrition: Applied Nutrition" in 1986.

I am also aware that people with HIV infection, but who are otherwise healthy, are advised to follow a healthy eating plan which is simply a normal balanced diet. Such a diet was costed by Macdonald and Forsythe in their article at £9·46 for a moderately active man.

State Pensions

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the normal level of state pension available to (a) a single male and (b) a married couple in each European Community country for those aged 60, 65, 70, 75 and 80 years who have no private resources or pension including social security payments unrelated to living condition, but related to age subsequent to the increases in benefit about to be made available.

Mr. Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the Department's publication "Tables of Social Benefit Systems in the European Communities (Position at 1 January 1988)", a copy of which is in the Library. These tables set out the levels of pension in the national currencies together with the sterling equivalent converted according to the OECD's purchasing power parity figures as shown in the introduction to the tables.

Community Care Grants

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the success rate in obtaining community care grants in the offices covering the Peckham constituency for applicants (a) assisted and (b) not assisted by an advice worker.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Social Fund

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security why the budget for social fund loans and grants in the offices covering the Peckham constituency was not increased in the current financial year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A note explaining the basis of allocation of social fund budgets to local offices for 1989-90 is in the Library. The allocation formula was applied in exactly the same way to all local offices.

HEALTH

NHS Beds (Occupation)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of National Health Service beds are occupied by people over 70 years of age.

Mr. Freeman: The information available centrally is that in 1987-88, 53 per cent. of NHS beds were occupied by patients aged 65 years and over, and 34 per cent. by patients aged 75 years and over.

Bristol Channel (Bathing Waters)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has received about illness caused to individuals from bathing in coastal waters on either side of the Bristol channel.

Mr. Freeman: I am not aware at present of any reports of any adverse effects to health caused by bathing in coastal waters in the Bristol channel.

Liver and Kidney Transplants

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the latest position in relation to the shortage of blood for liver and kidney transplants.

Mr. Freeman: There was a temporary shortage of blood following the late May bank holiday. There has now been an excellent response from donors, and national stocks are again sufficient for all operations to go ahead.

Abortions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to instigate any new studies into the nature and incidence of post-abortion syndrome; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We await the report of a joint Royal College of General Practitioners/Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists study "Attitudes to Pregnancy". A large body of data from this United Kingdom study, which was funded by the Department, is currently undergoing careful analysis. I understand that the report should be available later this year.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of non-National Health Service abortions performed in each gestational week according to licensed clinic in 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Freeman: The table shows the readily available data. Details relating to numbers performed by individual licensed clinics cannot be released for reasons of confidentiality.

Number of abortions performed in non-NHS premises by gestation week to usual residents of England and Wales, 1987 and 1988

| Gestation weeks | 1987 Non-NHS | [1]Of which agency | 1988 Non-NHS | [1]Of which agency |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Under 9 | 38,879 | 2,283 | 42,387 | 2,709 |
| 9-12 | 35,637 | 4,346 | 42,544 | 5,096 |
| 13-14 | 4,493 | 539 | 4,940 | 597 |
| 15-16 | 2,430 | 258 | 2,795 | 277 |
| 17-18 | 2,659 | 384 | 3,237 | 436 |
| 19-20 | 1,446 | 189 | 1,766 | 196 |
| 21-22 | 779 | 31 | 1,007 | 27 |

| 25+ | 2 | — | — | — |
| Not stated | 11 | 2 | 9 | 4 |
| Total | 86,749 | 8,041 | 99,195 | 9,357 |

[1] These figures represent the operations carried out in the private sector on NHS patients.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice his Department gives to women about the risks of abortion to their mental and physical health; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: This is a matter for the clinical judgment of the medical staff involved in the light of all the relevant facts about the woman's condition.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest medical evidence available to him as to the earliest gestation age at which an unborn child may be capable of being born alive; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The 22nd gestational week is considered by doctors to be the earliest time that there is the slightest possibility of a foetus being born alive, since before then the lungs are not mature enough to function even if ventilated. Between the 22nd and 24th week of gestation the chance of being born alive and the chance of surviving afterwards increase, but up to 24 weeks both are rare. Whether or not any particular foetus is capable of being born alive must be a matter for the clinical judgment of the doctor concerned in the full knowledge of the circumstances of the particular case.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the procedure adopted by his Department in checking and approving abortion notification forms.

Mr. Freeman: All operating doctors are required to notify the chief medical officer, within seven days, of each abortion they perform. The detailed information in these forms is scrutinised by staff authorised by the chief medical officer to ensure that they do not indicate any contravention of the abortion law.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he received in 1987 and 1988, respectively, on (a) abortion and (b) human embryo experimentation; how many were hostile to each of these practices; and what percentage the latter represents of the former.

Mr. Freeman: In 1987 and 1988 we received some 9,000 representations about abortion issues and 500 about human embryo experimentation. Most were from members of the public and the views expressed varied widely. Any analysis on the lines requested would involve disproportionate cost.

Blood Transfusion Service

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement concerning the circumstances in the national blood transfusion service that has caused the recent cancellation of operations and on the action he is now taking to prevent a repetition of such circumstances.

Mr. Freeman: The recent shortage of blood which led to the postponement of a small number of operations in some regions arose primarily because blood donors were not coming forward in sufficient numbers to maintain supplies.

The fine weather, bank holidays, and transport striked contributed to the fall in numbers of donations.

The national directorate of the blood transfusion service will be improving its monitoring of blood stocks and donor attendances so that timely steps can be taken to encourage donors to attend blood donor sessions in the future.

The temporary shortage of blood following the late May bank holiday has now been corrected.

SERCO/Capita plc

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he or his Department have had any representations from, or meetings with, SERCO plc; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what recent meetings he or his Department had with Capita plc; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The director of NHS procurement, Mr. Tom Critchley, has had two meetings in March and May with the director of Capita Health Care group to discuss the services which that company, in collaboration with SERCO plc, is prepared to offer by way of facilities management or technical and non-clinical support services to the NHS. The meetings were part of a wider series of meetings which Mr. Critchley and officials from the NHS procurement directorate have had with a number of service companies able and ready to bid for NHS site management contracts covering a range of different support services. By way of explanation I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 9.11 of the White Paper "Working for Patients".

Venereal Disease

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the latest figures for venereal disease as a total and then disease by disease; and if he will give an indication of the trends in this group of diseases.

Mr. Freeman: The available information is given in the table. This relates to new cases seen at NHS genito-urinary medicine clinics over the last 10 years. Not all patients seen at clinics have conditions which are sexually transmitted, and some do not require treatment. Some patients have more than one condition, and are counted under each condition found. Discernible trends over the last ten years are:

(a) The total number of new cases seen in clinics has been increasing steadily in recent years until 1987, when it fell by over 25,00 compared with 1986. This was the first time since 1962 that the number had declined. The main components of the increase were non-specific genital infection, herpes, wart virus, and candidiosis in women. However, cases of syphilis and gonorrhoea have been declining.

(b) Since 1977 the incidence of syphilis has declined by 64 per cent. and gonorrhoea by 57 per cent. Gonorrhoea has been declining more rapidly, particularly among males aged 35 to 44, since about 1982, but there was a very marked fall in both male and female cases between 1986 and 1987. This is probably due to changes in sexual behaviour following the publicity about AIDS.

(c) The number of new cases of herpes increased rapidly until 1985, but declined slightly in 1986 and again in 1987.

(d) The number of new cases of genital warts has continued to increase at a rapid rate and now accounts for 12 per cent. of all new cases seen.

EMPLOYMENT

Social Measures (EC)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Southend, East on 14 June, Official Report, column 909, if he will list the issues which the Commission proposes to deal with in social measures related to the European Economics Community and the draft directives issued to date; and if he will seek the guidance of the Commission on what social issues it will be presenting directives on the basis of majority voting.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 21 June 1989]: The European Commission has put forward a preliminary draft proposal for a "Community charter of fundamental social rights", which it proposes should be adopted as a solemn declaration of the 12 heads of state and Government. The preliminary draft proposal invites the Commission to draw up a programme of work by June 1990. A copy of the preliminary draft has been deposited in the Library, and an explanatory memorandum has been provided to the Select Committee on European Legislation. The preliminary draft is not based on any article of the treaty and is proposed as a political statement.

The following draft legislation proposals, which have not yet been agreed, have been issued to date:

- draft directive on procedures for informing and consulting employees in complex undertakings;
- draft directive concerning temporary work;
- draft directive on voluntary part-time work;
- draft recommendation on the reduction and reorganisation of working time;
- draft directive on parental leave and leave for family reasons;
- draft directive on the burden of proof in the area of equal pay and equal treatment for men and women;
- draft directive amending directive 68/360/EEC on the abolition of restrictions on movement and residence within the Community for workers of member states and their families.
- draft directive concerning the minimum health and safety requirements for work with visual display units.

Whether the voting arrangements for specific proposals are based on simple majority, qualified majority or unanimity depends on the subject matter and the article(s) of the treaty of Rome on which they are based. The proposed treaty base is indicated on draft legislation.

In addition, in the area of health and safety at work, there are:

- draft directive concerning the minimum health and safety requirements for the workplace;
- draft directive on the approximation of the laws of the member states relating to machinery;
- draft directive on the approximation of the laws of the member states relating to personal protective equipment;
- draft directive on the minimum health and safety requirements for handling heavy loads when there is a risk of back injury for workers.

DEFENCE

Type 23 Frigate

Mr. Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress on the new command system for the type 23 frigate programme.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell) on 6 June at column 124.

SCOTLAND

East Kilbride (Transport)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many homes would have to be demolished to make way for British Rail's proposed extension to East Kilbride town centre.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Until detailed studies have been commissioned it is impossible to say how many homes would have to be demolished, but it is established public policy to keep such numbers to an absolute minimum, consistent with the technical requirements of any development proposal.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends to hold an inquiry into British Rail's proposal to build a rail extension into East Kilbride town centre.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: If British Rail is unable to satisfy the petitioner against the relevant provisional order deposited under the Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act 1936, the provisions of the Act require that the Secretary of State shall direct an inquiry by commissioners.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration has been given to improving the existing 'park and ride' facilities serving East Kilbride town centre.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This is a matter for Strathclyde passenger transport executive to consider in consultation with East Kilbride development corporation and ScotRail. I understand that the existing park and ride facilities are to be retained.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated cost of the proposed British Rail proposed extension to East Kilbride town centre.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A preliminary estimate published with the provisional order gave a total cost of £8·295 million. However East Kilbride development corporation stresses that any such estimates are somewhat speculative until detailed design studies have been concluded particularly in this case as some tunnelling would be necessary and in the absence of detailed knowledge of local geological conditions.

Forestry

Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what effect changes in taxation relating to the forestry industry made in the 1988 budget have had on that industry; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is too early to say precisely what effect the 1988 Budget changes will have on the forestry industry. We do, however, expect that there will be some temporary reduction in the amount of new planting as the industry adjusts to the new arrangements.

Glasgow School of Art

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the total grants given to the Glasgow school of art by his Department for each year since 1981 in 1989 money; and what is the planned grant for 1990-91.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is set out in the table.

Glasgow school of art recurrent and non-recurrent grants (£ million financial year)

| Financial year | Recurrent | Non-recurrent | Total grants |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1981-82 | 3·376 | 0·306 | 3·682 |
| 1982-83 | 3·767 | 0·420 | 4·187 |
| 1983-84 | 3·823 | 0·128 | 3·951 |
| 1984-85 | 3·867 | 0·391 | 4·258 |
| 1985-86 | 3·832 | 0·249 | 4·081 |
| 1986-87 | 3·957 | 0·034 | 3·991 |
| 1987-88 | 4·059 | 0·493 | 4·552 |
| 1988-89 | 3·889 | 0·761 | 4·650 |

Note: The figures have been expressed at 1989-90 prices, using the latest GDP deflator.

For 1989-90, an offer of £3·795 million grant-in-aid for recurrent expenditure has been made, subject to parliamentary approval; the value of non-recurrent grant (for capital items) has not yet been determined. Firm plans have not yet been made for 1990-91; decisions will be made towards the end of this year in the light of the school's institutional plans, resources available for the grant-aided college sector as a whole, and the Government's proposals to shift the balance of funding for universities and colleges such as Glasgow school of art from grant-in-aid towards students' tuition fees with effect from the academic year 1990-91.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to ensure that the Glasgow school of art remains open.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have every confidence that the school will continue. My recent decision to abolish quotas on student intakes will encourage the school to increase student numbers and generate more income.

Departmental officials are in close touch with the school about the preparation of its institutional plan for 1990-91 and beyond, and decisions on the allocation of grant-in-aid for 1990-91 will be taken later this year in the light of that. I am also considering proposals for major capital expenditure to improve physical facilities at the school.

Epilepsy Centre

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the reasons why the support rate for epilepsy centre clients in Strathclyde increased at a lower rate than actual running costs in the period between 1 April 1987 and 1 April 1989;

(2) what is his Department's policy towards the provision of support rate for epilepsy centre clients; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The level of financial support for day care and residential centres provided by voluntary bodies or for those attending them is at the discretion of the regional council. My right hon. and learned Friend has no power to intervene in their decisions.

Common Services Agency

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if doctors will continue to have the same choice when they purchase orthopaedic appliances following the Common Services Agency's takeover of the allocation of contracts from health boards;

(2) what advice was taken from doctors regarding the decision to transfer the purchasing of orthopaedic apliances from the health boards to the Common Services Agency;

(3) what savings he expects will be made following the Common Services Agency's takeover of the allocation of contracts for the purchase of orthopaedic appliances.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The purchasing of orthopaedic appliances continues to be the responsibility of the relevant health boards. The supplies division of the Common Services Agency acts on their behalf in the arrangement of contracts for the supply of orthopaedic appliances, as for many other commodities bought by the Health Service. The new contracts arranged by the Common Services Agency, which come into effect on 1 July, were entered into on the advice of a panel of health board experts including a consultant orthopaedic surgeon from Greater Glasgow health board. The contracts give doctors access to the same range of items as at present and each health board has a choice of suppliers for most items.

The contracts include special clauses designed to ensure that the appliances are of good quality and it is expected that patient satisfaction will be improved as a result. The main purpose of the new contracts is to improve quality, but they will also make significant savings compared with current costs. The precise amount will depend on the number of appliances of various types which are bought under the new contracts but is provisionally estimated at approximately £1 million.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Immigration Appeals (Scotland)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Attorney-General what is the number of immigration appeals heard in Scotland for each year since 1976.

The Attorney-General: The number of appeals heard by immigration adjudicators in each year since 1976 is as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 1976 | 96 |
| 1977 | 86 |
| 1978 | 97 |
| 1979 | 129 |
| 1980 | 119 |
| 1981 | 92 |
| 1982 | 116 |
| 1983 | 163 |
| 1984 | 148 |
| 1985 | 164 |
| 1986 | 149 |
| 1987 | 116 |
| 1988 | 160 |

Legal Aid

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Attorney-General what is the average payment received by solicitors and by barristers acting for the defence in legal aid cases considered by the Crown court and in which the standard fee applies.

The Attorney-General: The average standard fee received by solicitors for preparation of the brief for counsel and other matters including attendance at court in legal aid cases in the Crown court was £258·67 in the financial year 1988-89. In the same year the average standard fee received by barristers for preparing for trial and providing representation in the Crown court in legal aid cases was £209·10.

Killan Fach Farm, Swansea

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Attorney-General if he will outline the action he has taken, and the reasons for that response, on the application to him from the City of Swansea Council to authorise a prosecution under the Agricultural Land (Removal of Soil) Act 1953 against the owner of Killan Fach Farm, Swansea.

The Solicitor-General: I refused my consent to a prosecution since the time limit for commencing proceedings expired before the council presented me with any information to enable me properly to consider the case.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cambodia

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will be attending the Paris peace conference on Cambodia in July.

Mr. Eggar: The French Government plan to host an international conference on Cambodia in August. In principle, we expect to attend.

Ivory

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Bosworth (Mr. Tredinnick), Official Report, 7 June, column 138, what information he has on the Hong Kong Government's urgent review of its position on trading in ivory; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Hong Kong Government announced on 9 June their support for a ban on trade in new ivory. Pending the outcome of the meeting of the convention on international trade in endangered species in October 1989, they have suspended the issue of licences for imports of raw ivory from all sources.

Human Rights

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those members of the European Economic Community who have acceded to the United Nations and Council of Europe conventions on human rights, respectively; and what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government concerning any similar declarations by the European Community.

Mr. Eggar: All members of the European Community except Ireland and Greece have ratified the international covenant on civil and political rights; all but Ireland have ratified the international covenant on economic, social and cultural rights. These are the two major United Nations human rights instruments. The position on other United Nations conventions varies. All EC members have ratified the European convention on human rights.

The United Kingdom is signatory to the 1977 joint declaration, by the European Parliament, the Council and the Commission, of fundamental rights. Protection of human rights forms an important part of EC law.

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will ensure that the United Kingdom delegate to the 41st session of the United Nations human rights sub-commission due to sit in Geneva this summer makes a definitive and strong statement about gross violations of human rights in Ethiopia, and a demand for a direct response.

Mrs. Chalker: The British member of the United Nations human rights sub-commission is an independent expert and does not take instructions from Her Majesty's Government.

Rain Forest

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on the environmental damage caused by British companies to the Amazon rain forest;

(2) whether he will have discussions with the chairman of (a) British Petroleum, (b) Barclays, (c) Shell and (d) British American Tobacco about reducing the environmental damage caused by them to the Amazon rain forest; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether he will sek a meeting with representatives of the Brazilian Government to discuss ways of regulating the activities of foreign companies to prevent the destruction of the Amazon rain forest; and if he will make a statement;

(4) whether he will have discussions with British Petroleum about reducing the environmental damage caused to the Amazon rain forest by that company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development will be visiting Brazil, including the Amazon region, from 4 to 9 July. During his visit, he will be discussing with Brazilian Ministers and officials our efforts to identify effective ways of helping them with a wide range of environmental problems, including rain forest conservation. He will also be meeting representatives of British companies operating in Brazil with whom he hopes to discuss their role in environmental protection.

The hon. Member will be aware of recent media reports alleging involvement by United Kingdom companies in rain forest destruction. We are studying these, but I understand that the companies claim that these press reports contain important errors of fact, and that they themselves operate significant environmental protection programmes in their projects in Brazil.

Human Rights (Australia)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights in the last five years in Australia.

Mr. Eggar: None.

Human Rights (Kenya)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights and the use of torture in the last five years in Kenya.

Mrs. Chalker: We have made a number of representations about human rights to the Kenyan authorities over the last five years, but the precise information requested is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. We welcome the recent release of all political detainees.

Executions (China)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made in connection with the continuing executions of protestors in China: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Representations have been made in Peking to the Chinese authorities on behalf of all 12 EC members appealing for clemency. We have made it clear that we deeply deplore the recent executions and have renewed our appeal to the Chinese authorities not to persecute those campaigning for their democratic rights.

Deportations (Iraq)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Iraq about the forced deportation of 100,000 people from the town of Qaladiza which began on Monday 12 June; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I summoned the Iraqi ambassador on 14 June and repeated our concern about renewed reports of mass resettlement of Kurdish people within northern Iraq. We view these stories with considerable concern. We shall continue to press the Iraqis to allow foreign diplomats and journalists access to the areas in question to see for themselves.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise the matter of the Iraqi programme of forced deportations of its Kurdish minority in the context of European Economic Community political co-operation, as well as in other appropriate international meetings.

Mr. Waldegrave: We discuss this issue regularly with our partners in the Twelve, as well as in other international meetings, and shall continue to do so.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Iraq about its campaign of forced deportation of its Kurdish citizens; if he will protest strongly against this breach of Iraq's obligations under the international human rights conventions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I summoned the Iraqi ambassador on 14 June to repeat our concern at renewed reports of the mass resettlement of Kurds from northern Iraq. The Iraqi authorities are under no illusion that we expect them to fulfil their obligations under the human rights conventions to which they are a signatory.

Immigration

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications for residency in the United Kingdom from all people in (a) Hong Kong, (b) Pakistan, (c) India and (d) Soviet Union have been (i) accepted and (ii) rejected in each year since 1979 for each respective country.

Mr. Renton: I have been asked to reply.

I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 8 May columns 286-88, which gave the information available for the numbers granted settlement in the United Kingdom, and for the numbers of applications received, granted and initially refused for entry clearance for settlement and for a certificate of entitlement to the right of abode in the United Kingdom. The available information on refusals of applications for settlement made on arrival in the United Kingdom and after admission for a limited period are given in the following tables:

Political Asylum

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arrangements his Department is making to deal with requests for political asylum from people in China who fear persecution.

Mr. Renton: I have been asked to reply.

In accordance with our normal practice, we will look carefully at any entry clearance application made in China from a Chinese national claiming to be in immediate danger who has links with the United Kingdom.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Research Biologists

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set up an inquiry into the future supply of research biologists.

Mr. Jackson: No.

Student Loans

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what further information he has received or new decisions he has made since 19 June in respect of his scheme for students' loans.

Mr. Jackson: Following my right hon. Friend's statement on 19 June at columns 21-22, we have set in hand continued discussions with the financial institutions on the arrangements for the top-up loans scheme. We shall announce further details of those arrangements in due course.

Public Relations

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science which public relations firms his Department has employed and at what cost, for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Rumbold: The consistent practice of successive Governments has been to avoid the use of public relations firms or other firms outside government for public relations work, apart from their use by some Departments in the special circumstances of privatisation work.

University Teachers (Outside Earnings)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on his latest discussions with the university authorities about the optimum level of outside earnings of university teachers.

Mr. Jackson: I have not had any formal meeting with the university authorities on this topic but I have discussed it, like many others, in my frequent contacts with the academic world.

Student Loans

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his reply of 19 June, Official Report, column 33, if he will publish a revised version of annex E to the White Paper on student loans to include estimates of administrative costs, interest subsidy, default and write off costs, on the assumption of (a) 80 per cent. take-up, (b) 90 per cent. take-up and (c) 100 per cent. take-up.

Mr. Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to my previous answer of 21 March at columns 497-99, which showed the effect of various take-up assumptions on the estimates in annex E of Cm. 520. Those estimates made allowance for the cost of an illustrative 10 per cent. default rate, and of writing off debts in cases of death or of deferment beyond the age of 50. Those estimates also allowed for the cost of the zero real interest rate, which has the effect, as compared with a higher interest rate, of reducing the size of repayments. The administrative costs mentioned in my right hon. Friend's statement on 19 June at columns 21-22 were based on there being 1·15 million accounts in 1995. It is estimated that the scheme will grow eventually to some 2·5 million accounts in the second decade of the next century, but it is not expected that administrative costs will increase in proportion.

Chinese Students

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the number of Chinese students presently enrolled in each educational institution in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Jackson: Details for individual institutions are confidential. In 1987-88, there were 1,200 full-time and part-time students in further and higher education in the United Kingdom from the People's Republic of China.

Educational Institutions (China)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about current cultural and educational links between educational institutions in the United Kingdom and China.

Mr. Jackson: This Department keeps no record of links between educational institutions in this country and China. The British Council, with funds from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Overseas Development Administration, administers a variety of cultural and educational programmes. A list of current activity under the academic links with china scheme (ALCS) is as follows:

In addition, it is estimated that there are currently about 3,000 Chinese students in this country, under a variety of award schemes. The British Government provide approximately 1,000 of these awards.

There is also a small programme involving Chinese teachers who come to the United Kingdom to work with local education authorities for up to one academic year. In the current year, 10 Chinese teachers are attached to LEAs. Four United Kingdom teachers have visited China under this programme this year. Some administrative support for this programme is provided by the central bureau, a body grant-aided by this Department.

Teachers (Salaries)

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Erith and Crayford of 8 May, Official Report, column 299, if he will now publish a table based on the 1987 database of teacher records data showing the distribution of teachers across the salary scales at March 1987, distinguishing between primary and secondary sectors; whether the numbers of teachers in each sector on scale 3, scale 4 or senior teacher scales agrees with the projections made by his Department based on the March 1985 database of teacher records data for the purposes of salary assimilation in September 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 14 June 1989]: The information is as follows:

Distribution of teachers by salary scale: March 1987

| | Nursery and primary schools[1] | | Secondary schools[1] | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Scale 1 | 55,920 | — | 59,120 | — |
| Scale 2 | 63,240 | — | 59,470 | — |
| Scale 3 | 14,360 | (16,000) | 56,490 | (53,000 |
| Scale 4 | 300 | (0) | 29,950 | (28,500) |
| Senior teacher | 50 | (0) | 7,280 | (6,500) |
| Deputy head | 18,680 | — | 10,310 | — |
| Head | 21,740 | — | 4,990 | — |
| TOTAL | 174,280 | — | 227,610 | — |

[1] The figures in brackets are the numbers forecast in 1987 on the basis of the 1985 database of teacher records.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Entertainers and Sportsmen

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue has been earned by Her Majesty's Inland Revenue under the entertainers and sportmen's rules introduced by the Finance Act 1986 and now contained in chapter III of part XIII of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The special scheme for deducting tax at source from payment to non-resident entertainers and sportsmen yielded £6·9 million net (after repayments) in the period 1 May 1987 (when it took effect) to 31 March 1988 and £12·4 million net in 1988-89.

Housing Costs

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to the reply by the Economic Secretary to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury on 16 June, Official Report, column 549, he will indicate what percentage proportion of (a) the Italian consumer price index, and (b) the United Kingdom retail prices index is represented in each case by the lists of housing costs contained in his reply.

Mr. Lilley: The information is as follows:

(All items = 100)

| | United Kingdom | Italy |
|---|---|---|
| Owner occupier costs | | |
| MIPs | 6·0 | 0·0 |
| Rental costs | | |
| Rent | 3·2 | 4·5 |
| Other costs | | |
| Rates | 4·2 | 0·0 |
| Water and other charges | 0·7 | 0·4 |
| Repair and maintenance charges | 0·9 | |
| Dwelling insurance and ground rent | 0·8 | 0·0 |
| Do it yourself materials | 1·7 | 0·0 |
| Total housing costs | 17·5 | 4·9 |

Interest Rates

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give an estimate of the increased costs to British industry of each 0·5 per cent. increase in interest rates.

Mr. Lilley: The cost to industrial and commercial companies of a 0·5 per cent. increase in United Kingdom short-term interest rates maintained for a full year is estimated to be about £0·2 billion.

Economic and Finance Council

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Council.

Mr. Lilley: The ECOFIN Council met in Luxembourg on 19 June. I represented the United Kingdom.

The Council adopted a regulation re-weighting the ecu.

The Council reached substantive agreement on a common position, subject to some further procedural details, on the draft second banking co-ordination directive and on the solvency ratios directive; and reached agreement on a common position on the insider trading directive.

The Council reached agreement on a common position on a revised financial regulation. The Council adopted the 18th VAT directive.

The Council had a further discussion of the Commission's proposals on fiscal frontiers.

The Council discussed proposals for the three company tax measures to encourage cross-border co-operation.

The Council heard a progress report on the latest proposals for anti-fraud measures, supported the useful progress made since the March ECOFIN, and endorsed the need to continue progress.

Public Service Management

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of his recent Audit Commission lecture on public service management.

Mr. Major: I have already done so.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the estimated gain to the Exchequer in 1988-89 and 1989-90 of reducing capital gains tax exemptions from £5,000 to (a) £1,000 and (b) £2,000; and what would be the number of people who would have chargeable gains on this basis.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 19 June 1989]: I regret that precise estimates are not possible, but the figures for gains realised in each of these years could be of the order of:

| Annual exempt amount | Increase in revenue £ million | Increase in number of taxpayers '000 |
|---|---|---|
| £1,000 | 300 | 500 |
| £2,000 | 200 | 200 |

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the estimated gain to the Exchequer in 1990-91 of reducing capital gains tax exemptions from £5,000 to (a) £1,000 and (b) £2,000 and the number of people who would have chargeable gains on this basis allowing for the impact of independent taxation.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 19 June 1989]: I regret that no sufficiently firm estimate can be made.

Water Privatisation

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he gave specific approval for additional moneys to the water authorities for pre-flotation advertising.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 20 June 1989]: The Government allowed for expenditure on the water authorities' current corporate awareness advertising campaigns when approving the water authorities' overall financing limits.

PRIME MINISTER

NATO (Weapons Deployment)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on what is meant in terms of length of time by the phrase, "for the foreseeable future," in regard to the need for a continued mix of conventional and nuclear weapons in Europe deployed by NATO.

The Prime Minister: This agreement was reached by 16 Governments. It is not for any one Government to vary the normal meaning of the words.

Australian Prime Minister

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if, during her meeting with the Prime Minister of Australia on his forthcoming visit to Europe, she has any plans to raise (a) initiatives to be taken to strengthen the nuclear non-proliferation treaty in the lead up to the 1990 non-proliferation treaty review conference, and (b) the arrangements for safeguards on uranium imported to the United Kingdom from Australia.

The Prime Minister: We discussed non-proliferation matters. The answer to the second part of the question is no.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if, during the forthcoming visit of the Prime Minister of Australia, she plans to raise (a) the amendment conference for the 1963 partial nuclear test ban treaty and (b) the French nuclear testing programme in the Pacific and its effect on the treaty of Rarotonga.

The Prime Minister: Nuclear testing in the Pacific was discussed.

Conventional Force Cuts, Europe

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister what is the basis for her statement at the NATO press conference in Brussels on 30 May that President Bush's plan for conventional force cuts in Europe within six months to a year is a very optimistic timetable.

The Prime Minister: The practical details (such as definitions, counting rules and verification arrangements) of a negotiation as complex as this are daunting. Negotiating satisfactory arrangements within the timetable we have set ourselves will be hard work, but we have made a good start.

Apartheid

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Prime Minister if she will use the opportunity of her planned discussions with Mr. F. W. de Klerk to urge the South African Government to negotiate an end to apartheid.

The Prime Minister: Yes. We want to see the peaceful abolition of apartheid through negotiation.

Rain Forests

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on her discussions on rain forest issues with Dr. Ghillean Prance during her official visit to Kew gardens.

The Prime Minister: During my visit to the Royal botanical gardens at Kew on 16 June, I spoke to a number of experts with whom I discussed, among many other things, the problems of tropical reafforestation which follow the destruction of natural habitats.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will host a conference in Britain for private companies to enable discussions to take place in order to reduce the damage caused to rain forests throughout the world; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I share the widespread concern about the depletion of the tropical rain forests, and this was among the subjects discussed at the seminar which I held at Downing street on 26 April which involved individuals from the world of science and of business. I have no present plans for a further conference.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Wray: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list, for each year since 1986, all the ministerial talks and meetings held by her or other Ministers with Ministers or representatives of the Governments of (a) Guatemala, (b) Haiti, (c) Honduras, (d) El Salvador and (e) South Africa.

The Prime Minister: The following table lists those meetings at ministerial level of which we have records. Ministers have had additional informal bilateral meetings in the margins of international conferences.

In addition to these formal and informal meetings with their opposite numbers, Ministers in London regularly see the ambassadors of these countries in the course of their normal duties.

Economic Assistance

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Prime Minister if she will ensure that the principle of making economic assistance and trade credits conditional on an improvement in democratic and human rights is applied in the case of Iraq as well as in that of Poland.

The Prime Minister: We regularly make clear to the Iraqi Government our concerns over their human rights record, but we do not believe that unilateral economic measures would be effective in ending human rights abuses. Only by maintaining a working relationship can we hope to achieve changes. I announced a number of steps on 10 June following my meeting with General Jaruzelski to support progress towards democracy and a market economy, including the contribution of £5 million a year for five years towards a "Know How" fund. Our policy on export credit guarantees for Poland is governed by economic considerations.

China

Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister if she will ensure that the current events in China and the repression by the Chinese authorities will be discussed as a matter of urgency at the EEC summit in Madrid; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I can assure the hon. Member that the current repression by the Chinese authorities will be discussed at the forthcoming Madrid European Council.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government will protest to the Chinese ambassador to the United Kingdom on the executions now taking place in China; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary told the House on 6 June that he had summoned the Chinese chargé d'affaires to make clear our attitude to the violent suppression of peaceful protest in Peking. As I made clear in the House on 22 June, I was among the first to condemn the recent executions in China, about which representations have also been made to the Chinese authorities by the 12 EC member states.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disability Benefits

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, in the light of the Social Security Advisory Committee's report, "Benefits for Disabled People: A Strategy for Change", he plans to increase spending on disability benefits.

Mr. Scott: Current expenditure plans, Command 615, provide for spending on benefits for the sick and disabled to increase by over £3 billion by 1991-92. We shall give careful consideration to the report of the Social Security Advisory Committee when we reach conclusions on the implications of the results of the surveys of disability carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. It is too soon to say how this will affect existing expenditure plans.

Social Fund

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which of his Department's offices in the Greater London area have spent more than 100 per cent. of their profile allocation for social fund loans and social fund grants for (i) April 1989 and (ii) May 1989.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many decisions made by social fund officers are overturned by social fund inspectors.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The social fund commissioner has advised me that in the period from 11 April 1988 to 31 March 1989 social fund inspectors reviewed 2,499 cases. A total of 1,109 were referred back to social fund officers to redetermine and in 96 cases the social fund inspector substituted his own decision.

Hostels

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what grants are available for the establishment of hostels.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Grants can be made under schedule 5 of the Supplementary Benefit Act 1976, as amended, to voluntary organisations and/or local authorities. These would be to set up facilities for those people without a settled way of life with a view to influencing them to lead a settled way of life. However, such grants are currently being restricted to organisations that provide hostels which form part of an approved scheme to replace resettlement units.

Public Relations

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which public relations firms his Department has employed, and at what cost, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Apart from the special circumstances of privatisation work, the consistent practice of successive Governments has been to avoid the use of public relations firms or other firms outside Government for public relations work.

Housing Benefit

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the numbers of people receiving housing benefit rent allowances in May 1986, May 1987, and May 1988.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is as follows. The figures represent the estimated average number receiving benefit in the year.

|---|---|
| 1986-87 | 1·18 |
| 1987-88 | 1·20 |
| 1988-89 | 0·93 |

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the numbers of people who are currently receiving rent allowance via housing benefit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The latest available estimate for 1989-90 is 1·04 million.

Community Charge

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the categories of information held in his Department that are available for use by community charge registration officers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information that may be passed to community charge registration officers is prescribed in the Community Charges (Information Concerning Social Security) (Scotland) Regulations 1988 and the Community Charges (Information Concerning Social Security) Regulations 1989. It is confined to the name and address of any person aged over 18, and of any partner he or she may have aged over 18, who has been awarded income support and who, prior to 1 April 1989 in Scotland and prior to 1 April 1990 in England and Wales, has not claimed housing benefit, or who, after 1 April 1989 in Scotland and after 1 April 1990 in England and Wales, has not claimed a community charge rebate. In Scotland the information may also include the date of birth of any such person.

Pensioners

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of pensioners in (a) Scotland and (b) the United Kingdom whose only source of income is the basic national insurance retirement pension.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In 1986, just under 20 per cent. of United Kingdom pensioners' sole source of income was from state benefits.

Source: Family Expenditure Survey 1986.

Notes: The data cannot be broken down further to provide the proportion of pensioners' income derived from the basic state pension.
It is not possible to provide information for Scotland because the Scottish sample size in the FES is too small to be statistically significant in answering this question.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of pensioners in (a) Scotland and (b) the United Kingdom who are in receipt of housing benefit for each year since 1981.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The available information for Great Britain is as follows. Figures for Scotland and the United Kingdom are not available in the form requested. Housing Benefit did not come into full operation until April 1983.

Estimated number of pensioners receiving Housing Benefit 1983-4—1988-9.

| | Million |
|---|---|
| 1983-4 | 4·105 |
| 1984-5 | 4·110 |
| 1985-6 | 4·120 |
| 1986-7 | 4·030 |
| 1987-8 | 4·045 |
| 1988-9 | 2·850 |

War Widows

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services how many war widows are receiving war widows pensions because their husband left the services before 31 March 1973; and what would be the total cost of uprating their pensions to £5,000 per person.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: At 31 March approximately 56,000 pre-1973 war widows were in receipt of a pension under the war pensions scheme. We estimate that the total extra cost of uprating their pensions to £5,000 per person would be about £100 million per annum.

Territorial Army

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the regulations governing the treatment of earnings from the Territorial Army for unemployed males receiving benefit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Unemployed people receiving earnings from the Territorial Army are most likely to be in receipt of unemployment benefit, income support and housing benefit. The main provisions dealing with the treatment of these earnings in each benefit are as follows.

The regulation governing the effect on unemployment benefit of earnings specifically from the Territorial Army is regulation 3(3) of the Social Security (Computation of Earnings) Regulations 1978. Under this regulation no account is taken of annual bounty and payment in respect of attendance at the first 16 authorised drill nights each year. Further payments are subject to regulation 7(1)(g)(i) of the Social Security (Unemployment, Sickness and Invalidity Benefit) Regulations 1983, under which a day is not treated as a day of unemployment if earnings for that day exceed £2.

For unemployed reservists receiving income support or housing benefit, the weekly amount of the earnings and the period for which they are to be taken into account are determined by reference to regulations 29, 31 and 32 of the Income Support (General) Regulations, and regulations 21 and 25 of the Housing Benefit (General) Regulations. Payments made in respect of income tax, class 1 national insurance contributions and half of any sum paid by an employee towards an occupational or personal pension scheme are disregarded under regulation 36(3) of the Income Support (General) Regulations 1987 and regulation 29(3) of the Housing Benefit (General) Regulations 1987. The first £15 of weekly earnings is also disregarded under paragraph 7(1) of schedule 8 to the income support regulations and paragraph 6(1) of schedule 3 to the housing benefit regulations.

The annual bounty paid to reservists is treated as capital under Income Support (General) Regulation 48 and Housing Benefit (General) Regulation 40(1) and does not affect entitlement as long as the total capital held does not exceed £3,000.

For income support only, reservists attending annual training camp are normally treated as being in remunerative work and are not entitled to benefit in accordance with regulation 5 of the Income Support (General) Regulations. Earnings arising from this period are ignored completely on reclaiming benefit under the provision of paragraph 1 of schedule 8 to the regulations.

Community Care Grants

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether in addition to any provision in the Acts and regulations, there is any (a) guidance to all Departments of Social Security offices and (b) internal guidance within the offices covering the Peckham constituency on the amounts to be awarded to people in different categories who are given community care grants.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Guidance has been issued in the social fund manual on suggested maximum amounts which may be awarded to applicants who need a start-up grant, a clothing grant and minor structural repairs to the home. The decision on how much to award in an individual case rests with the social fund officer.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether there is any (a) guidance to all Departments of Social Security offices and (b) internal guidance within the offices covering the Peckham constituency on the priority for community care grants as between homeless women in refuges, people coming out of mental institutions, children leaving care, and others.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Guidance on the national priorities for community care grants has been issued in the social fund manual. Local office managers have issued guidance to social fund officers on local priorities.

Benefits

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what level of state benefit income an unemployed family consisting of mother, father, and two children aged 12 and 5 years received in 1979; and what benefit they would receive today if 1979 benefits had been increased to match inflation if the benefits were paid on the same basis as in 1979.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There is no prescribed procedure for uprating supplementary benefit or housing benefit—different elements of these schemes have been uprated in different ways and by different indices at different times.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing the number of families with children: (a) entitled to and (b) receiving supplementary benefit/income support in each year since 1970, distinguishing between one and two-parent families.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 3 May 1989]: The available information is as follows:

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures showing the estimated number of families (a) entitled to and (b) receiving family income supplement/family credit in each year since 1971, distinguishing between employed, self-employed, one-parent and two-parent families, and including a case-load estimate for its current year.

Grants and Loans

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of (a) budgetary loans and (b) community care grants were awarded to each of the 15 client groups defined by his Department for the midlands region in the financial year 1988-89.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 June 1989]: The table shows the figures for the midlands region for the period 11 April 1988 to 31 march 1989.

Budgeting loans and community care grants for midlands region Percentage by client group—1988-89

HEALTH

NHS Reform

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest figure for the number of hospitals which have expressed interest in becoming self-governing institutions within the National Health Service.

Mr. Mellor: A total of 179 expressions of interest in self-governing status have been received. Some are for non-hospital facilities and others include more than one hospital.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that his proposals for hospitals opting-out of the National Health Service management structure will be supported by the staff responsible for providing all services to hospital patients.

Mr. Mellor: Self-governing hospitals will not opt out, but will remain fully within the NHS. When a unit decides to submit an application for self-government, the relevant regional health authority will seek the views of those with an interest including staff at the hospital. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State will consider any responses alongside the application, although no group will have a veto on any proposals.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the leaflets issued in connection with proposals to reform the National Health Service together with the print runs and costs of production for each leaflet, their main avenues of distribution and their estimated costs of distribution.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 19 June 1989]: The following leaflets have been issued in connection with proposals to reform the National Health Service:

| Leaflet | Print run | Production cost £ | Distribution | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | | | Avenue | Cost £ |
| | Working for Patients: | | | |
| Management summary | 350,000 | 109,250 | RHAs; DHAs; CHCs; FPCs; GPs | 15,500e |

Private Health Care

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from the Health Service unions on the question of private health provision.

Mr. Mellor: None.

Crown Indemnity

Sir Gerald Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he proposes to implement a scheme of Crown indemnity for doctors and dentists working in National Health Service hospitals and community health services, as outlined in the reply to the hon. Member for Newbury (Sir. M. McNair-Wilson), on 7 April, Official Report, column 304; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We are currently considering the responses to the consultation exercise which finished in May. An announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Public Relations

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which public relations firms his Department has employed and at what cost, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Mellor: None. The consistent practice of successive Governments has been to avoid the use of public relations firms or other firms outside government for public relations work.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the waiting list for each district health authority as at 31 March and indicate the rank order of each district in size of its waiting list.

Mr. Mellor: We do not yet have available figures of the number of people waiting for hospital treatment in each district health authority at 31 March 1989.

"Working for Patients"

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state the distribution by National Health Service region, by spending head and by spending head within each National Health Service region of the extra £40 million so far announced for the implementation of the proposals in "Working for Patients".

Mr. Mellor: A total of £32 million of the additional £40 million is for the hospital and community health services and has been distributed as shown in the table. The remainder is to meet the administrative costs incurred by the Department of Health in implementing the review.

Psychiatric Services (Children)

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children under the age of 16 years were seen for assessment of treatment by child and adolescent psychiatric services in 1986-87 and 1987-88; how many of these children were severely or profoundly deaf; what proportion used sign language; and what proportion used spoken language as their main method of communication.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally.

Hospitals (Cleaning)

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the implications of the incidence of occasions, since the award of private cleaning contracts at the Kent and Canterbury hospital, the Thanet district hospital and the Royal Seabathing hospital, upon which payments for specific cleaning areas have been suspended; and what action he proposes to take to deal with such occurrences.

Mr. Freeman: The issues raised are contractual matters between the relevant contractor and the Canterbury and Thanet district health authority. Ultimately both parties have the sanction of terminating the contract if there are continuing and serious breaches of its terms. Usually, however, mutually satisfactory arrangements are achieved without the need for drastic action.

Blood Transfusion Service

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the terms and conditions under which blood is transferred from the blood transfusion service to organisations outside the National Health Service.

Mr. Freeman: Blood from the national blood transfusion service is supplied to non-NHS hospitals in England and Wales according to the terms of health circular HC(89)14 a copy of which is in the Library. A handling charge is made for blood supplied in this way to cover items such as the costs of collection, testing and processing. No charge is made for the freely donated blood itself.

Rotherham Health Authority

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial provision has been made for the Rotherham Health Authority in 1989-90; and what was the comparable provision in the previous two years.

Mr. Freeman: Allocations to individual district health authorities are a matter for the regional health authority concerned. I suggest the hon. Member contacts the chairman of Trent regional health authority for the information he seeks.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the financial provision per capita for the Rotherham health authority in 1989-90; what is the average provision for health authorities on a per capita basis; and what significant progress will be made this year in the resources allocation working party context.

Mr. Freeman: Allocation of resources to district health authorities is a matter for the relevant regional health authority. The national average provision for health authorities in England in 1989-90 is £264 per capita.

The allocations for 1989-90 announced on 21 December 1988 allow every regional health authority to benefit to the maximum extent from the additional resources available. As the White Paper makes clear, the Government now intend to move on from RAWP to a simpler and fairer approach.

Benzodiazepines

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what instructions relating to deprioritising the benzodiazepine issue he has issued to health authorities or other bodies.

Mr. Mellor: None. On the contrary in guidance issued to health and local authorities we continue to give a high priority to the development and expansion of services for drug misusers including those dependent on benzodiazepines. This high priority is emphasised by the allocation by the Department of nearly £15 million in 1989-90 to regional health authorities specifically for the development of these services. The Department will also continue to encourage doctors to prescribe benzodiazepines only in accordance with current guidelines, as contained in the Committee on Safety of Medicines "Current Problems" No. 21 and in the British National Formulary.

Foster Parents (Insurance)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department's boarding out of children regulations require agencies arranging placements to make provision for the insurance of foster parents.

Mr. Mellor: Agencies are required under the Boarding-Out of Children (Foster Placement) Regulations 1989 to inform foster parents of the agency's arrangements for meeting any legal liabilities of a foster parent arising by reason of the placement. We expect that agencies will make effective arrangements: A number of options are suggested in the handbook of guidance issued in association with the regulations.

Dystonia

Sir Michael McNair Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a grant to the Dystonia Society under section 64;

(2) what action his Department is taking to make dystonia better understood by medical professionals, to improve hospital facilities for dystonia sufferers and to enable them to obtain their drugs fee of prescription charge.

Mr. Mellor: The Dystonia Society was included as a candidate for funding from the RPI error money which was announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security on 9 February. They were awarded £10,000 towards the cost of providing a nurse practitioner at the national Hospital for Nervous Diseases to give advice and counselling to sufferers of dystonia. This project, which is scheduled to run for three years, will offer the opportunity to evaluate whether this ensures a better service for dystonia sufferers with a view to introducing it into other NHS hospital neurological departments, if appropriate.

Unfortunately it was not possible to award a section 64 core grant to the society in the current financial year since the number of applications for funding exceeded the level of funds available for grant awards.

Undergraduate and postgraduate medical education is, primarily, a matter for medical schools and postgraduate medical institutions. Measures to increase doctors' knowledge of dystonia and movement disorders is more appropriate for these bodies and the medical profession.

Because of the existing wide-ranging provisions for exemption from prescription charges and particularly those for persons on low incomes, we have no plans to include dystonia in the list of medical conditions which confer exemption from prescription charges.

Prescriptions

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department decided to set up a new discount inquiry for products dispensed under National Health Service prescriptions; when he expects it to come into force; when was the last inquiry; and what kind of discounts are currently available.

Mr. Mellor: We consider the need for discount inquiries annually in consultation with the pharmaceutical services negotiating committee (PSNC). The next discount inquiry will be based on purchases of drugs made during April 1989. The results of the inquiry will be implemented from April 1990 or such earlier date as may be agreed between the Department and the PSNC. The last inquiry was undertaken in respect of April 1986 purchases. The price differences taken into account include discounts for volume and early settlement, special lines, the ordering of supplies by computer, free offers and lower prices for parallel imported and other products.

Abortions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in the Official Report a breakdown of the reasons for abortions performed under ground two of the Abortion Act 1967 for 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 23 June 1989]: The information is shown in the table.

Abortions performed under ground 2[1] (alone) of the 1967 Abortion Act: numbers by principal medical condition, England and Wales 1987-88

| 656 | Other foetal and placental problems affecting management of mother | 4 | 2 |

[1] The continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk of injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman greater than if the pregnancy were terminated.
[2] International Classification of Diseases (ICD) code, 9th revision.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incomplete abortion notification forms were accepted by his Department in 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988 where no medical reason was given for the operation.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 23 June 1989]: The table shows the number of abortions performed in England and Wales during 1984-88 where no medical reason for the operation was given on the notification form. This does not mean, however, that these notification forms were incomplete; on a number of occasions, notifications are received where, quite properly, no existing medical condition has been recorded.

Such notifications refer to situations where there is an implied future risk to the mother were the pregnancy to continue, rather than to an existing medical condition. The Abortion Act 1967 allows an abortion to be performed if two registered medical practitioners are of the opinion formed in good faith that

"the continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk of injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman greater than if the pregnancy were terminated."

Most of the cases without mention of medical condition are terminations performed under this ground.

There are also a small number which are accounted for by those notified on the grounds that

"the continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk or injury to the physical or mental health of any existing child(ren) in the family of the pregnant woman greater than if the pregnancy were terminated"

(Ground 3 of the 1967 Abortion Act).

Legal abortions performed without mention of medical condition, England and Wales, 1984-88

HOME DEPARTMENT

Passports

81. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met representatives of the trade unions; and whether the subject of the issue and renewal of passports was discussed.

Mr. Renton: Officials at the Passport Department last met representatives of the Civil and Public Services Association and the National Union of Civil and Public Servants on 16 June in the course of efforts to resolve the current dispute over staffing levels at the passport offices. An offer was made to increase numbers of permanent staff in return for greater flexibility in working practices and co-operation in a number of management initiatives to improve the efficiency of the Passport Department. We expect this will lead to a return to work by striking staff at the Liverpool office tomorrow and a resumption of normal working at the other passport offices. The first priority will then be to clear the current backlog of applications and to provide an improved service to the public.

Sunday Trading

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary for State for the Home Department whether he has any proposals to increase the fines available to the courts for traders who break the Sunday trading laws.

Mr. Renton: Not at present.

Road Traffic Law Review

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met (a) the Association of Chief Police Officers and (b) the Magistrates Association to discuss some of the recommendations for improving traffic regulation enforcement made by the road traffic law review.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend last met the Association of Chief Police Officers to discuss road traffic matters on 24 October 1988. He has not met the Magistrates Association to discuss this subject. Home Office officials are involved in continuing discussions with representatives of the police service and the magistrates courts about implementation of the proposals set out in the White Paper "The Road User and the Law" (Cm. 576).

United Kingdom Immigrants Advisory Service

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the financial support given to the United Kingdom Immigrants Advisory Service for each year since 1976 in 1989 money.

Mr. Renton: The total Home Office grant-in-aid to the United Kingdom Immigrants' Advisory Service in each of the financial years from 1976-77, expressed at assumed 1989-90 prices by use of the GDP deflator, is given in the table:

| | £ |
|---|---|
| 1976-77 | 755,000 |
| 1977-78 | 692,000 |
| 1978-79 | 909,000 |
| 1979-80 | 850,000 |
| 1980-81 | 891,000 |
| 1981-82 | 993,000 |
| 1982-83 | 1,026,000 |
| 1983-84 | 1,058,000 |
| 1984-85 | 1,038,000 |
| 1985-86 | 1,086,000 |
| 1986-87 | 1,060,000 |
| 1987-88 | 1,087,000 |
| 1988-89 | 1,062,000 |

Political Asylum

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for political asylum in the United Kingdom are currently being received each month; and from what nationalities.

Mr. Renton: Information is not available in the form requested. A provisional breakdown by nationality of all applications made in each quarter is supplied by the United Nations High Commissioners for Refugees, one quarter in arrears. Copies are placed in the Library. Statistics for the first quarter of 1989 will be available at the beginning of July. We know that there has recently been a large increase in the number of Turkish nationals applying for asylum on arrival at ports. There have been over 3,000 such applications since the beginning of May.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many applications for political asylum in the United Kingdom he expects to be granted on the basis of his Department's backlog criteria;

(2) in what circumstances applications for political asylum in the United Kingdom are to be granted in order to reduce the current backlog of such cases and to release staff to deal with new applications.

Mr. Renton: Asylum applications continue to be decided under the criteria of the 1951 convention. There is no question of granting refugee status in cases which do not qualify under the convention in order to reduce the backlog of outstanding applications. Efforts are being made to reduce the backlog and staff are encouraged to identify and resolve more quickly through the grant of exceptional leave cases which do not qualify under the convention but in which outright refusal is likely to be inappropriate or impractical. Cases continue to be resolved on their individual merits and we can make no estimates of the likely outcomes.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for political asylum in the United Kingdom are currently awaiting a decision; and how many of these have been delayed for 12 months or longer.

Mr. Renton: Information on the number of applications for refugee status in the United Kingdom awaiting a decision at the end of the year is published annually in Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Refugee Statistics, United Kingdom". The 1988 volume of this bulletin will be published next month. The latest available volume is for 1987 (Issue 16/88), a copy of which is in the Library. Of the estimate of a total of 8,300 applications recorded as awaiting a decision at the end of 1987, approximately 4,200 were recorded as outstanding for 12 months or more. However, these figures are maxima which overstate the position, because of under recording of decisions made earlier.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many immigration officers are currently dealing with applications for political asylum in the United Kingdom; and what were the comparable figures one, three, five and 10 years previously.

Mr. Renton: The information centrally available does not distinguish the number of immigration officers who, as part of their duties, may currently be dealing with asylum applications, or might in the past have been so engaged. But the arrival of substantial numbers of Turkish asylum applications this year has significantly increased the demands on the resources of the immigration service.

Immigration Appeals

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to the average length of time which immigration appeal cases in Scotland take to be prepared and presented.

Mr. Renton: The information is not available in the form requested. The time that it takes to hear an individual appeal varies greatly from case to case because of both the number of stages involved and the differing lengths of time that each stage can take. I am aware however that the time between the lodging of an appeal and the hearing commonly exceeds one year for cases heard in Scotland.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new measures of support he is taking to help the United Kingdom Immigrants Advisory Service in Scotland to deal with immigration appeals.

Mr. Renton: The Home Office makes an annual grant-in-aid to the United Kingdom Immigrants Advisory Service, under section 23 of the Immigration Act 1971, as the basis for the provision of a nationwide service of advice and assistance to persons who have rights of appeal under the Act. The grant in 1988-89 was £1,007,000 and is reviewed annually. It is for the service to decide how to allocate these moneys to the various aspects of its work.

C3 Division

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed by the C3 Division and at what cost.

Mr. John Patten: Forty-eight people are currently employed in C3 Division of the Home Office at an annual cost of £756,000. Of these, 18 are employed in dealing with work associated with alleged miscarriages of justice and the exercise of the royal prerogative of mercy, at an annual cost of £275,500.

Immigration Rules

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he proposes to hold an inquiry into the leaking of the memorandum from G. N. Stadlen, of B2 division, dated 9 June headed "Immigration Rules Changes and DNA Announcement" including a draft letter to the Lord President for signature by the Home Secretary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: Yes: any suggestion that an unauthorised disclosure of information has occurred is investigated.

Sinn Fein

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what formal representations he has received from the British Broadcasting Corporation about the banning of the appearance of Sinn Fein on television and radio; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: None. When the directions were issued, the BBC and the IBA undertook to implement them, although they requested that the need for them should be kept under close review.

Mr. Ning Hong Shan

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if a decision has been reached regarding the request for asylum by Mr. Ning Hong Shan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tim Renton: The application is under consideration.

Mr. Abbas Karbassian

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why his Department refused leave to remain for Mr. Abbas Karbassian of 14 Bromwich close, Ernesford Grange, Coventry, reference K296103; whether the criteria for the granting of indefinite leave to remain on the basis of length of residence in the United Kingdom have changed since his reply to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) of 17 March 1986, Official Report, column 9; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Mr. Karbassian's application for leave to remain on the basis of his marriage to a British citizen was refused because the couple had subsequently separated. An earlier application to remain as a student was refused because the Secretary of State was not satisfied that Mr. Karbassian intended to leave the United Kingdom at the end of his studies. Mr. Karbassian's application for settlement on the basis of his lengthy residence in the United Kingdom was considered on its merits but it was decided not to exercise discretion in his favour.

The criteria for the grant of indefinite leave to remain on the basis of length of residence were set out more fully in the reply of 5 November 1987 at column 833 to a question from the hon. Member for Norwood (Mr. Fraser). They remain as stated.

Broadcasting Licences

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he is giving to representations against the proposed auction of broadcasting licences to the highest bidder and to calls for the protection of quality of television programmes.

Mr. Renton: The case for allocating television licences by competitive tender and the steps which we propose to preserve quality programming are set out in our White Paper "Broadcasting in the '90s: Competition, Choice and Quality". In the statement my right hon. Friend made to the House on 13 June on the future of commercial television at columns 710-15 he announced further ways in which quality would be safeguarded, notably by strengthening the quality threshold which all applicants for licences would have first to satisfy; by giving the Independent Television Commission power in exceptional circumstances not to accept the highest bid; and by requiring the successful applicant to post a substantial performance bond which would be liable to forfeiture if programme quality requirements are not met. Taken together these proposals represent substantial safeguards for the delivery of quality programmes.

Media Supervision

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any plans to establish an independent body composed of representatives of television producers, journalists, actors, musicians and playwrights to supervise quality control and anti-monopolistic practices in television and the press.

Mr. Renton: No.

Passports (Chinese Nationals)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider his policy towards Chinese students and nationals whose passports may expire in the near future; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Chinese nationals who, for good reason, are unable or unwilling to approach their own authorities for documentation, and who wish to travel may apply to the Home Office, Travel Document Section, Lunar house, Croydon CR9 2BY for a travel document.

Work Permits

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to look sympathetically at applications for work permits from Chinese students who are able to obtain employment towards the payment of their college fees and expenses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We will look sympathetically at any applications from Chinese students who, because of the situation in China, seek permission to take employment to help with their expenses.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

WEU

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will make available reports of plenary debates of the Western European Union in the Library and Vote Office on the day following the debate.

Mr. Wakeham: It is not possible to give this undertaking since the availability of these reports is not a matter under the control of the House. The Library and the Vote Office will make them available to hon. Members as soon as possible after their publication.

THE ARTS

Public Libraries

61. Mrs. Golding: To ask the Minister for the Arts what information he has on the purchasing power of public libraries' expenditure on books over the past 10 years.

Mr. Luce: Information for the last 10 years is not available. In the 10 years from 1977-78 to 1986-87 public libraries expenditure on books fell by 1·7 per cent. in real terms, but it has increased by 14 per cent. between 1981-82 and 1986-87.

66. Mr. Haynes: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many public libraries are open for more than 45 hours a week.

Mr. Luce: In 1987-88, the most recent period for which statistics are available, returns from 98 authorities show that 630 service points in England were open for more than 45 hours per week.

Greater London Arts

62. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he last met the chairman and director of Greater London Arts to discuss the future of arts administration in London.

67. Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he last met the chairman of Greater London Arts to discuss the future funding and administration of the arts in London.

Mr. Luce: I met the director of Greater London Arts at a sponsorship launch on 12 April.

Departmental Funding

63. Mr. Jessel: To ask the Minister for the Arts what have been the increases in the funding of his Department over the last five years, and those announced for future years.

Mr. Luce: This year my Department is spending £439 million, an increase of 63 per cent. over the corresponding cash programme for 1984-85. My plans are for expenditure of £450 million in 1990-91 and £480 million in 1991-92.

Theatres (London)

64. Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Minister for the Arts what information he has as to attendances at theatres in London.

Mr. Luce: According to the PSI publication "Cultural Trends" there were nearly 10 million paid admissions at theatres in London in 1987. This a 6 per cent. increase on 1986.

Disabled People (Access Arrangements)

65. Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Minister for the Arts what steps he is taking to improve access for the disabled to arts venues.

Mr. Luce: On 20 December last year I announced a contribution of £150,000 towards a fund to improve access to arts venues for the disabled, to be set up by the Carnegie trust.

Mappa Mundi

68. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received in the last four weeks as to the future of the Mappa Mundi.

Mr. Luce: I have received no representations as to the future of the Mappa Mundi in recent weeks. However, I wish the Dean and Chapter every success with their appeal to raise funds without resorting to the sale of the map. I understand that the Dean and Chapter have been in touch with the national heritage memorial fund to arrange a meeting to discuss the position.

Trade Balance

69. Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister for the Arts what assessment he has made of the contribution of the arts to Britain's overseas trade balance.

Mr. Luce: An assessment made by the Policy Studies Institute last year, using a broad definition of the arts, put overseas earnings in this field at £4 billion.

National Museums (Maintenance)

70. Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he plans to meet the chairman of the Museums and Galleries Commission to discuss the repairs and maintenance needs of national museums.

Mr. Luce: I meet the chairman of the Museum and Galleries Commission quite frequently and on a wide range of subjects which have included matters raised in the Commission's May 1988 report on the national museums.

Merseyside Arts

71. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he plans to meet the chairman of Merseyside Arts to discuss the future of arts administration on Merseyside.

Mr. Luce: I have no plans to do so.

Independent Museums

72. Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on the development of the independent museum sector.

Mr. Luce: The independent museums sector represents over half of the 2,000 or so museums and galleries in the United Kingdom. Independent museums give great pleasure to the visiting public, and I am delighted to see their continued successful development.

Museums and Historic Properties

73. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Minister for the Arts what information he has as to visits to local museums and historic sites and houses in the most recent year for which he has information, and for the two previous years.

Mr. Luce: The Museums Association estimates that the number of visitors to museums and galleries in the United Kingdom increased from 73 million in 1986 to 80 million in 1988. This figures is expected to rise to 100 million during 1989, which has been designated Museums Year. The English Tourist Authority has estimated the number of visitors to historic properties as 55·5 million in 1986, 57·3 million in 1987 and 59 million in 1988.

Theatre Museum

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Minister for the Arts what discussions he has had with the director of the Victoria and Albert museum about the future of the theatre museum.

Mr. Luce: I have not had discussions with the director of the Victoria and Albert museum about the theatre museum, but I meet the chairman of the board of trustees and the director quite frequently when a wide range of issues is covered.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Census Questions

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations have been made through the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental conference regarding the inclusion of Irish language questions in the 1991 census.

Mr. Tom King: The Irish Government have indicated to us on a number of occasions in the conference that they would welcome the inclusion of a question on knowledge of the Irish language in the 1991 census, in line with the language questions asked elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Insider Dealing

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many prima facie cases of insider dealing have been referred to his Department by the Stock Exchange insider dealing group.

Mr. Maude: About 180 cases of possible insider dealing offences have been referred by the Stock Exchange to my Department since insider dealing became a criminal offence in June 1980. Of those cases 76 have been referred since Royal Assent to the Financial Services Act 1986.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in how many cases of prima facie insider dealing prosecutions have resulted since the passing of the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Maude: Since the Financial Services Act 1986 received Royal Assent in November 1986 six prosecutions for insider dealing offences have been instituted and completed, and proceedings have begun in a further eight cases. Seven out of those 14 prosecutions followed reports from inspectors appointed under section 177 of the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in how many cases of prima facie insider deals the Government have appointed inspectors to investigate using their powers under the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Maude: Inspectors have been appointed under section 177 of the Financial Services Act 1986 to investigate 31 cases of possible insider dealing offences.

China

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the total value of trade between the United Kingdom and China for 1988 and 1989 to the latest available date.

Mr. Alan Clark: United Kingdom trade with China in 1988 was valued at imports £443·7 million and exports £411·6 million.

In the period January to April 1989, the latest for which information is available, imports were £158·3 million and exports £140·7 million.

Iraq

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what changes have taken place in the provision of export credits to Iraq in the past year; what proposals he has to make further changes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The United Kingdom/Iraq joint commission on trade and economic co-operation which was held in Baghdad in November 1988 resulted in a further £340 million of United Kingdom export credit support for Iraq. To date three loan agreements have been signed comprising:

- a £65 million buyer credit to finance a contract for four turbine generators for the Al-Shemal power station
- a £75 million line of credit for pharmaceutical and humanitarian products
- a £100 million line of credit for capital goods and projects

The balance of £100 million has not yet been allocated under any specific facility but will be used to finance United Kingdom capital goods and projects. No drawings have yet been made under the above loans.

There will be a further United Kingdom/Iraq joint commission in London later this year but it is too early to anticipate what further United Kingdom export credit facilities might be made available to Iraq for 1990.

Business Development Consultancy Initiative

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will give the number of applications (a) received and (b) approved for business development consultancy initiatives from 1 April 1988 to the most recent date for which information is available and (c) what was the total amount of expenditure involved in each of the regions of his Department, Scotland and Wales and (d) for assisted areas, urban programme areas and non-assisted areas.

Mr. Newton: In the period from 1 April 1988 to 31 May 1989 24,291 applications were received for the business development consultancy initiatives. In the same period 17,740 applications were approved for assisted consultancy. The Department's contribution to the cost of completed consultancies totalled £16·8 million. It is estimated that those consultancies not completed by 31 May 1989 will cost the Department £26·4 million. I am unable to provide a breakdown of expenditure between assisted areas, urban programme areas and non-assisted areas but 55·5 per cent. of applications approved for consultancy have been from assisted and urban programme areas. A breakdown of numbers and cost of consultancy projects for each DTI region and for Scotland and Wales is as follows:

| DTI Region/Country | (a) Number of applications received | (b) Number of applications approved for assisted consultancy | (c) DTI expenditure on completed consultancies (£ thousand) | (d) Estimated expenditure on outstanding consultancies (£ thousand) |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| North East | 1,194 | 924 | 784 | 1,315 |
| North West | 3,538 | 2,894 | 3,166 | 4,762 |
| Yorkshire and Humberside | 2,293 | 1,698 | 1,880 | 2,711 |
| West Midlands | 2,562 | 1,830 | 1,855 | 3,319 |
| East Midlands | 1,483 | 1,154 | 1,091 | 1,897 |
| South West | 2,335 | 1,434 | 1,069 | 2,112 |
| South East: | | | | |
| Cambridge | 1,893 | 1,097 | 766 | 1,567 |
| London | 2,929 | 2,066 | 1,694 | 2,070 |
| Reading | 1,433 | 1,098 | 823 | 1,220 |
| Reigate | 1,415 | 1,064 | 753 | 1,325 |
| Scotland | 1,789 | 1,475 | 1,908 | 2,463 |
| Wales | 1,427 | 1,006 | 1,106 | 1,613 |
| Total | 24,291 | 17,740 | 16,805 | 26,374 |

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the consultancy firms involved in the business development consultancy initiative for each of the regions of his Department, Scotland and Wales.

Mr. Newton: It is not our practice to detail the consultancy firms used by scheme contractors to undertake enterprise initiative assisted consultancy projects. This is to avoid the risk of such a list being seen as a form of Government approval or endorsement, to the unfair disadvantage of practices no less competent but which for one reason or another are not associated with the scheme; and also to avoid the risk of consultancies being exposed to pressures which could compromise the independence and impartiality of their advice to clients.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will give the estimated expenditure in the business development consultancy initiative in each of the years 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Newton: We estimate that the total amount of expenditure on the business development consultancy initiatives in 1988-89 was £43·1 millions. The Estimates provision for 1989-90 is £91 millions. The level of provision for future years will depend upon public expenditure decisions yet to be taken: however, planned provision is £107 millions in 1990-91 and £109 millions in 1991-92.

Bio-ethics

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representation will attend the first symposium on bio-ethics in December from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Mellor: I have been asked to reply.

The United Kingdom will be invited to the Council of Europe's first symposium on bio-ethics to be held on 5-7 December 1989. No decision has yet been taken on who will attend on behalf of the United Kingdom. Participation is by invitation only.

The Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list in the Official Report all the members of the Council of Europe's ad-hoc committee of experts on bio-ethical issues together with the method by which they were appointed and the research disciplines from which they came.

Mr. David Mellor: I have been asked to reply.

The members of the Council of Europe's ad-hoc committee of experts on bioethics (CAHBI) are currently:

Austria: Dr. Renate Kausek
Belgium: M. Armand Andre (Vice Chairman); Mme. Isabella Hamer
Cyprus: Mrs. Frosso Parrisiadou; M. Jorgen Falck Larsen; Mme. Linda Taudaz
Denmark: Mr. Ulrich Horst Petersen
France: M. Christian Byk; Mme. Colette Moyse
Federal Republic of Germany: Mrs. Helga Seibert
Greece: Mrs. Panagiota Dalla-Vorgia
Ireland: Dr. Niall Tierney
Italy: M. Umberto Bigozzi; M. Salvatore Puglisi
Luxembourg: M. Arsene Betz
Malta: Rev. Prof. Charles G. Vella
Netherlands: Mrs. Johanna H. W. Kits Nieuwenkamp
Norway: Mr. Kare Berg; Mrs. Trine Fernsjo; Mrs. Julie Skjaraasen; Mrs. Grete Gjertsen
Portugal: M. Luis Mendes Graca
Spain: Dr. Octavi Quintana-Trias
Sweden: Ms. Ann-Christin Filipsson
Switzerland: M. Pierre A. Widmer; M. Hansjakob Mueller; M. Franz Furger
Turkey: M. Turgay Yucel
United Kingdom: Dr. Jeremy S. Metters (Chairman); Mr. Edwin Robert Moutrie.

Members are appointed by nomination of the member states of the Council of Europe. The research disciplines of the members are not known to Her Majesty's Government. Detailed inquiries of this nature might more properly be addressed to the Council of Europe via the Parliamentary Assembly.

Ulburghs Report

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the response of the British Government to Resolution A.2-78/88 of the European Parliament on harmonisation of medico-ethical questions, the Ulburghs report.

Mr. Mellor: I have been asked to reply.

Resolution A.2-78/88 was adopted by the European Parliament on 12 September 1988 by the narrow margin of 82 in favour, 79 against and four abstentions. No proposals based upon the report have yet been submitted by the European Commission to the British Government for consideration.

EC Recommendation 1100

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the British Government's response to the Council of Europe Parliamentary Assembly Recommendation 1100.

Mr. Mellor: I have been asked to reply.

Recommendation 1100 of the Parliamentary Assembly is still being considered within the Council of Europe's internal consultative machinery and has not yet been submitted to Her Majesty's Government for their response.

Rothley and Casini Reports

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the response of the British Government to resolution A.2-327/88 of the European Parliament on genetic engineering, Rothley report, and resolution A.2-372/88 on artificial insemination, the Casini report.

Mr. Mellor: I have been asked to reply.

We do not consider that a response to these two resolutions—A.2-237/88 and A.2-372/88—would be appropriate at this juncture. We intend to introduce legislation during this current Parliament on human fertilisation and embryology, and there will be a free vote in Parliament on questions of embryo research.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

South America

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the level of overseas aid to South America in each of the last 15 years.

Mr. Chris Patten: The information is as follows:

Overseas Aid (Charities)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has for an increased role for charities in the provision of overseas aid.

Mr. Chris Patten: The British voluntary agencies working in developing countries are independent charities who determine their own role. I have a high regard for their work; and I have increased the aid funds available for jointly funding their development projects by 43 per cent. to £16 million this year. I have also increased our support for the volunteer sending agencies by 20 per cent. to £13 million this year.

Andean Countries

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the level of overseas aid to the Andean group of countries in each of the last 15 years.

Mr. Chris Patten: The information is as follows:

£ thousand

Cambodia

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from Oxfam in relation to the situation in Cambodia.

Mr. Chris Patten: Over the past 12 months, I have received a number of representations from OXFAM on different aspects of United Kingdom aid policy towards Cambodia. I discussed Cambodia with OXFAM staff most recently on 8 June.

Rain Forest

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what urgent action he proposes to take to protect the rain forests throughout the world; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 21 June, at column 148.

Tibet (Technology)

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will allocate moneys from the Overseas Development Administration for the funding of the appropriate technology for Tibetans.

Mr. Chris Patten: Her Majesty's Government have received no official request for the provision of appropriate technology for Tibetans.

Aid (Iraq)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the total amount of aid provided to Iraq in each of the past two years; and what funds have been disbursed under the aid and trade provision for projects in Iraq since the ending of the Gulf war.

Mr. Chris Patten: No British bilateral aid, including funds from the Aid and Trade Provision, has been provided for Iraq for many years.

EMPLOYMENT

Employment Training Managers

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how his Department monitors the performance of employment training managers in terms of financial viability and efficiency.

Mr. Nicholls: Employment training managers are monitored in terms of financial viability under the financial appraisal and monitoring (FAM) procedures which have their origins in the recommendations of the 1984 Coopers and Lybrand report on financial controls for YTS and the community programme. The arrangements introduced for ET were modelled on those for YTS. The FAM system centres on (a) an annual financial viability assessment of the degree of risk which a provider represents to public money; (b) an appraisal of the providers' administrative and financial systems to ensure the proper handling of public money and the reasonableness of providers' financial claims; and (c) financial monitoring visits linked to the degree of risk.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how his Department initially satisfies itself that a training manager is competent to run employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: Potential training managers are asked by the Department's area office to submit a formal training proposal outlining what experience and capability they have in operating as training providers. These proposals are appraised by the area office staff to ensure, so far as is practicable, that the organisation has the knowledge and professional ability to deliver training of the appropriate quality and has adequate resources including premises and equipment, to deliver it effectively.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of training managers by Training Agency area are receiving subsidies.

Mr. Nicholls: In addition to the basic grant for employment training, training managers, a range of other grants is available to purchase training. No subsidies are offered to ET training managers.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what subsidies are offered to ET training managers above the basic grant per trainee.

Mr. Nicholls: ET training managers do not receive subsidies. Grants are available to purchase training.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what audit procedures the Training Agency undertakes with respect to ET managers.

Mr. Nicholls: Claims for training grants submitted by ET training managers are subject to financial checks both within Training Agency area offices and at the training managers' premises. Training managers' claims are also subject to audit by the Training Agency internal audit branch and the National Audit Office on a sample basis.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training mangers have (a) withdrawn or (b) been withdrawn from employment training; and how many employment training places have been lost as a result.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Council for Social Aid (Manchester)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps have been taken to ensure that confidential information on trainees, formerly with the Council for Social Aid, Manchester, will remain confidential following the transfer of this information to the liquidators.

Mr. Nicholls: Immediately after being notified that the company had ceased trading, the Training Agency took into safe custody the personal files of trainees, including their action plans.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the Training Agency last received audited accounts from the Council for Social Aid, Manchester.

Mr. Nicholls: Audited accounts from the Council for Social Aid were last received by the Training Agency in February 1989. These accounts related to the Council for Social Aid's community programme agency contract which ran from April 1987 to September 1988.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many places the Council for Social Aid, Manchester, originally contracted for, and how many employment training places were filled, by month from September 1988 until its demise in May 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: The Council for Social Aid originally contracted to provide 2,557 employment training places. The following table lists how many places were filled, by month, from September 1988.

| Month (1988-89) | Council for Social Aid Number filled places |
|---|---|
| September | 1,818 |
| October | 1,695 |
| November | 1,792 |
| December | 1,632 |
| January | 1,410 |
| February | 1,223 |
| March | 1,024 |
| April | 1,045 |
| May | 1,011 |

Employment Training

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many filled employment training places there are in the Greater Manchester area; and what percentage this represents of the original departmental projections.

Mr. Nicholls: At 16 June 1989, the latest date for which information is available, there were 9,300 people on employment training. In Greater Manchester this represents 47 per cent. of the total number of places originally contracted.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training managers have reduced their original number of contracted employment training places (a) nationally and (b) by training agency area.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available in the form requested and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

C.V. Carpets, Batley

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has been notified by Coats Viyella of the closure of C. V. Carpets, Greenhill Mills, Batley; if he will estimate the cost to public funds of making the work force redundant; and what representations he has received concerning this closure.

Mr. Nicholls: Notifications of proposed redundancies under section 100 of the Employment Protection Act 1975 are confidential to my Department.

TRANSPORT

Road Traffic Studies

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether traffic studies, funded by public funds, in recent years have revealed evidence linking increased road capacities with increased traffic and worsening traffic congestion; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department is currently undertaking a feasibility study into whether a before and after study of an urban trunk road scheme could detect the size of various changes in travel patterns, such as generation of new trips, changes in destination of journey time, and changes in mode of travel.

We are all asking the independent standing advisory committee on trunk road assessment to review the evidence on these effects. The Department has not recently carried out any traffic studies specifically addressed at identifying the effects of increased road capacity on the level of traffic.

For all new trunk road schemes, the Department monitors actual traffic flow a year after opening, for the purpose of making comparisons with the scheme forecasts. The evidence from this monitoring supports the Department's assumption in traffic forecasting that the general inter-urban road improvements do not generate significant additional traffic. The main effect is on choice of route.

Bridge Street (Hole)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take urgent steps to mend the hole at the north-west corner of the Bridge street/Victoria embankment junction, so as to remove the cause of pedestrians being splashed on emerging from or entering the pedestrian subway at that point.

Mr. Bottomley: These local roads are the responsibility of Westminster city council.

Single Tracking

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the Monopolies and Mergers Commission inquiry into the running of British Rail's provincial services with regard to the issue of single tracking, with particular reference to the Westerton to Milngavie railway lines.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend will in due course present to Parliament British Rail's response to the report, along with the Government's observations. It would not be appropriate to comment on individual aspects of the report in advance of the Government's formal response.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his Department is taking with regard to ScotRail's proposals to single track the railway line from Westerton to Milngavie.

Mr. Portillo: This is an operational matter for British Rail.

Breath Tests

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of respondents favoured the introduction of random breath testing in the last public opinion survey on this subject carried out by his Department's Transport and Road Research Laboratory.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A survey carried out for TRRL in March 1989 asked 750 respondents whether they were in favour of random breath testing being introduced to discourage drinking and driving. The results were:

| | Percentage |
|---|---|
| Strongly in favour | 48 |
| In favour | 29 |
| Undecided | 10 |
| Against | 8 |
| Strongly against | 2 |
| Don't know/No answer | 2 |

This was part of a survey into attitudes to a wide variety of road safety counter-measures. It did not explain the implications of random breath testing. The results reflect the strength of public opinion against drinking and driving.

A summary of the results of this survey will be published later this year.

British Rail (Complaints)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints about the performance of British Rail he has received in the past two years; and how he has responded to the complaints.

Mr. Michael Portillo: The Department does not keep statistics by subject matter of the letters we receive from members of the public about rail services. Unless they raise wider policy issues that are properly a matter for the Government, complaints are usually referred either to the British Railways board, which is responsible for operating the railway, or to local transport users consultative committees, which exist to represent the views of all users and can often help in resolving particular problems.

Motor Cycles

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he intends to bring forward any proposals to control queue jumping by motor cycle riders; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There may be no fully effective way of controlling queue jumping by any class of travellers.

Queue jumping by motor cycle riders when unsafe is covered by the existing offences of careless or reckless driving. We have no proposals to make it a specific offence. Proposals have already been announced to introduce mandatory training of new riders before they are allowed to ride unsupervised. This training will include safe practice when riding on the road. In October a new more arduous driving test for motorcyclists will be introduced. The tester will follow the candidate on another motorcyle and will thus be more able to assess ability to ride safely in traffic.

British Rail (Compensation)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will discuss with the Chairman of British Rail a voluntary scheme for compensating travellers for British Rail's failure to supply an agreed service, along the lines of British Telecom's voluntary scheme;

(2) if he will give consideration to introducing a statutory compensation scheme for cases where British Rail fails to deliver an agreed level of service.

Mr. Portillo: British Rail's conditions of carriage already allow for refunds to be considered in cases where timetabled connections cannot be made or where services have been altered, withdrawn or suspended for any reason. I have no present plans for legislation.

British Rail (Privatisation)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress of discussions by his officials with interested parties on the privatisation of British Rail.

Mr. Portillo: The work which is currently being undertaken on the possible privatisation of British Rail has been discussed fully with British Rail. In addition a small number of representations has so far been received from interested organisations. My right hon. Friend expects to consult widely in due course if a decision is made to privatise.

Crash Barriers

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made on installing crash barriers on central reservations of dual carriageways; and what plans he has for such barriers on future dualling works.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Substantial progress is being made.

It is the Department's policy to install central reserve safety fencing on all new dual carriageway schemes as part of the construction works.

HGVs (Exhaust Emissions)

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has further to curb exhaust emissions from heavy goods vehicles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are urging the European Commission to bring forward the most stringent standards that are technically and economically feasible. A further strengthening of these standards and the addition of a particulate standard is now being discussed in Europe.

Regulations are being prepared to enforce, from 1 October 1990, Community standards on the emissions of carbon monoxide, oxides of nitrogen and hydrocarbons from new vehicles over 3·5 tonnes gross vehicle weight.

Buses Monopolies

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to prevent the formation of buses monopolies in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Portillo: The Office of Fair Trading has the appropriate powers to investigate the formation of monopolies in the bus industry. I have made clear that, in giving consent to the sale of public transport companies, one of our main objectives is to promote fair and sustained competition in the bus industry. Local authorities have been advised to consult the Department of Transport at an early stage where a sale seems likely to result in one company gaining a dominant and substantially unchallenged position in the local market.

Traffic Lights

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has carried out any assessment of the efficiency of the French traffic light system of having additional lights at car driver level, with a view to implementing such a system in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department discusses issues relating to the safety and efficiency of traffic signals with its French counterpart. The operation of the United Kingdom system of traffic lights provides drivers with the same information as that of the French system. No assessment of the kind referred to has therefore been made.

China (Contacts)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has any plans to visit China; and whether any of his officials are involved in or planning contacts with, or visits to, China.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: All ministerial visits to and from China have been suspended. No visits to China by my officials are planned.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information his Department has about current contacts or contracts with China in the transport field.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: These are commercial matters for the companies involved.

Civil Aviation (Privatisation)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice or direction he has given to the Civil Aviation Authority and National Air Traffic Services on competitive tendering and privatisation within their organisations.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The authority is subject to the same guidelines and rules on procurement that apply to all nationalised industries. Some years ago the authority considered, at the Government's request, privatising its Highlands and Islands airports, but this did not prove to be feasible.

ENVIRONMENT

Football Membership Scheme

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply, Official Report, 25 May, column 673, whether he will seek to amend the Football Supporters Bill so that police, security services, Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise cannot obtain personal data from the football membership scheme for purposes unconnected with the operation of the scheme.

Mr. Moynihan: No. The Data Protection Registrar has advised that section 28(3) of the Data Protection Act 1984 provides for the disclosure of information where the data user concerned is satisfied that this is necessary for crime prevention or tax collection purposes. As I explained to the hon. Member on 25 May at column 673, I cannot envisage circumstances in which the Football Membership Authority—as the data user—would be asked to disclose information about members of the national membership scheme for purposes unconnected with the scheme. I do not therefore see a case for amending the Football Spectators Bill as the hon. Member suggests.

World Student Games

Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give financial aid to the arena in Sheffield required for the world student games in 1991; and if he will reconsider the decision on the funding of Hyde park flats, Sheffield, to be used as student accommodation for the games.

Mr. Trippier: I have from the outset made it clear to Sheffield that the Government cannot provide any special additional funding for the world student games. I have said, however, that we are prepared to consider assisting though existing programmes any schemes which meet the normal programme criteria and provide good value for money.

We have been in close discussion with the promoters of the arena project in the lower Don valley and I am very hopeful that we shall be able to give the necessary support for the project to get under way. I have also recently agreed to consider a scheme for estate action funding of work on the Hyde park flats as part of a joint development programme involving the Housing Corporation and a private developer.

I am sure that both schemes would be a major boost to development in Sheffield and, as a by-product, would assist the city council's efforts in preparing for the world student games.

Rating Reform

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will tabulate what a single person living in the London borough of Waltham Forest would pay (a) in community charge and (b) in a system of capital value rates plus local income tax paid in proportions of 80 to 20, respectively, if the person earned (a) £10,000, (b) £15,000, (c) £20,000, (d) £25,000 and (e) £30,000 and lived in (i) rented accommodation, (ii) property owned by that person worth £60,000, and (iii) property owned by that person worth £90,000, making the same assumptions as in his reply to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Sir H. Rossi) on 22 March Official Report, column 626.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is provided in the table.

Illustrative annual liability in Waltham Forest under a system of capital value rates combined with local income tax, 1988-89

| Single persons earnings £ | (i) + (ii) Property Value £60,000 £ | (iii) Property Value £90,000 £ |
|---|---|---|
| (a) 10,000 | 665 | 945 |
| (b) 15,000 | 740 | 1,020 |
| (c) 20,000 | 810 | 1,090 |
| (d) 25,000 | 880 | 1,160 |
| (e) 30,000 | 950 | 1,230 |

The liability of a person in rented accommodation would be the same as for a person living in property owned by that person of the same value. The figures are based on the illustrative tax rates placed in the Library on 23 June 1988 and are for 1988-89. It is assumed that the person lives alone and has no entitlement to rebates. Taxable income is taken as earnings less £2,605, the single person's allowance, in each case. The illustrative 1988-89 community charge in Waltham Forest is £269.

Land Register (Sites)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes he estimates could be built on the 7,900 sites currently on the Land Register.

Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes he estimates could be built on the 7,900 sites currently on the Land Register.

Mr. Trippier: It is not possible to estimate the number of homes that could in practice be built on such sites. At 31 May 1989, approximately 2,100 sites on the register had a planning indication for residential use.

Lindane

Mr. Graham Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce controls on the use of Lindane.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Food and Environment Protection Act and the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 provide comprehensive controls over the sale, supply, storage, advertisement and use of pesticides, including wood preservatives. Products containing Lindane are currently permitted for agricultural and wood preservative use. It is an offence to use them in any way other than that stated on the label. The uses of Lindane are currently under review by the Advisory Committee on Pesticides.

Lindane is also present in some veterinary medicines used to control ectoparasites on animals. These are currently being reviewed as part of the overall review of veterinary medicines by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in accordance with the requirements of the European Community.

Local Authorities (Sports Facilities)

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to lay the orders relating to the contracting out of local authority sports facilities.

Mr. Moynihan: Soon.

National Parks (Planning Appeals)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the number of planning appeal decisions which were (a) allowed, (b) dismissed, (c) withdrawn and (d) undetermined in each of the English national parks in 1974, 1979 and 1984; and if he will express the numbers allowed and dismissed as a percentage of those determined.

Mr. Chope: The information available is given in the following table.

Year: 1 April 1984—31 March 1985

| National Park | Allowed Number | Per cent. | Dismissed Number | Per cent. | Withdrawn |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Peak District | 6 | 26·1 | 17 | 73·9 | 3 |
| Exmoor | 4 | 57·1 | 3 | 42·9 | 0 |
| Northumberland | 0 | — | 2 | 100·0 | 0 |
| Dartmoor | 6 | 18·8 | 26 | 81·2 | 2 |
| Lake District | 6 | 35·3 | 11 | 64·7 | 1 |
| Yorkshire Dales | 7 | 31·8 | 15 | 68·2 | 2 |
| North Yorkshire Moors | 8 | 28·6 | 20 | 71·4 | 3 |

Planning Applications

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to allow potential developers to buy out potential objectors' rights to object in advance of a disputed planning application.

Mr. Chope: No. There are no proposals to change the fundamental basis of United Kingdom land-use planning under which planning applications must be determined on their merits having regard to all material considerations.

Grappenhall Heys and Appleton Thorn

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether, in his consideration of the 7(1) development submissions for Grappenhall Heys and Appleton Thorn, he will take into account the importance of maintaining an adequate casement for the Shell pipeline traversing the area;

(2) whether, in his consideration of the 7(1) development submissions for Grappenhall Heys and Appleton Thorn, he will take into account the preservation of overflight paths for civilian light aircraft.

Mr. Trippier: In reaching a decision on these submissions I will take into account all material considerations.

North Sea Pollution

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of pollution in the North sea comes from Britain.

Mr. Ridley: Rivers are the most important source of contaminant substances in the sea and United Kingdom rivers generally account for only about 20 per cent. of contaminents in the North sea.

London Assessment Studies

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice or information has been supplied to his Department to those undertaking the London assessment studies.

Mr. Ridley: My Department has been kept in touch with the progress of the studies since their inception. Recent discussions with the Department of Transport have covered the inter-relationship between the studies and strategic planning guidance for London.

Tyneside Enterprise Zone (Rates)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been paid to (a) Newcastle and (b) Gateshead Council in respect of rates otherwise payable to them in respect of properties within the Tyneside enterprise zone in each year since the enterprise zone's declaration; and if he will distinguish between classes of property in each case.

Mr. Trippier: The amounts paid to Newcastle city council and Gateshead metropolitan borough council in respect of rate revenue forgone in each year are given in the following table. The payments cannot be broken down by class of property.

Rate revenue foregone in Tyneside enterprise zone

| | Gateshead £ million | Newcastle £ million |
|---|---|---|
| 1981-82 | 0·9 | 0·5 |
| 1982-83 | 1·8 | 1·1 |
| 1983-84 | 2·0 | 1·0 |
| 1984-85 | 2·1 | 1·1 |
| 1985-86 | 2·6 | 1·4 |
| 1986-87 | 5·5 | 1·4 |
| 1987-88 | 7·8 | 1·3 |
| 1988-89 | 9·1 | 1·4 |

Water Meters

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Davyhulme of 6 March, what is his best estimate of (a) the average cost per household and (b) the overall cost of installing individual water meters in each dwelling in England and Wales.

Mr. Howard: The programme of installing meters in the large-scale metering trials on the Isle of Wight is not expected to be completed until the end of March 1990. So it is still too early to draw any reliable conclusions on the cost of installing meters on a wide scale in England and Wales which will depend on a number of factors including the number of joint supplies and the siting of meters.

Water Charges

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration has been given to the imposition of a standard per capita charge in respect of domestic water supplies, analogous to the community charge.

Mr. Howard: It will be for each of the new water services companies to decide what method of charging to adopt as a replacement for rateable value-based charges. Metering and a flat rate charge, possibly with extra charges for hose pipes and sprinklers, are the main options currently being considered by the industry.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the cost of water to the average domestic consumer in England and Wales in the current year, assuming that water undertakings had already been privatised and metering of individual households had been introduced.

Mr. Howard: None. It remains to be seen what efficiency savings the privatised companies can achieve over time and it is too early to assess the cost and long-term benefits of large-scale metering.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce rebates following water privatisation to assist low-income families with their water bills; and what estimate he has made of this as a charge on public funds.

Mr. Howard: There are no plans to introduce water charge rebates. Water undertakers operate budget payment plans to help customers pay their bills and the proposed conditions of appointment for the new companies will give additional encouragement to this practice. Income support is the appropriate way of helping those on low incomes to meet their outgoings, including water charges.

Environment-friendly Products

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes to introduce a green label scheme for products which are friendly to the environment; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which such a scheme would encourage consumers to buy such products and organically grown food.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have no present plans to introduce a national scheme of environmental labelling, although we are keeping the idea under review in the light of views expressed by consumers, retailers and producers. We welcome efforts by producers and retailers to give consumers information about the environmental effect of products. The impact of any national scheme on consumers' purchasing decisions would depend, among other things, on its scope. A system of environmental labelling—the Blue Angel scheme—has operated in the Federal Republic of Germany since 1978, but food products are excluded from its scope. As for organically grown food, the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards, set up at the instigation of my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, announced on 2 May national standards and a national symbol relating to the production of organic foods.

Rent Arrears

Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he proposes for the financial management by local authorities of their arrears of rents and other income; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Local Government and Housing Bill provides that from 1 April 1990 local authorities will be able to cover their arrears of rents and other income by borrowing for six months after the end of the year in which the arrears arose. Having carefully considered the representations of the local authority associations, my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Secretary of State for Wales now propose to extend this period to 12 months, but thereafter authorities must make provision in their budgets for any arrears remaining outstanding. We also propose that housing rent arrears will fall within the ring-fenced housing revenue account, and hence if not collected within the 12-month period will have to be paid for by the other tenants.

For the transition we propose that housing rent arrears outstanding at 31 March 1990 should be dealt with outside the ring-fenced HRA and hence if uncollected will be a charge on community chargepayers. We recognise that if these arrangements were immediately applied in full to those few authorities which have irresponsibly allowed their arrears to escalate to very high levels, this could put very great burdens on their chargepayers. Accordingly, we are also proposing that an authority with high outstanding arrears at 31 March 1990 may apply to my right hon. Friends to enable them to spread over three to five years any budgetary provision for writing off these arrears.

We intend to bring forward in another place appropriate amendments to the Local Government and Housing Bill to give effect to these proposals.

It is each authority's responsibility to collect efficiently the sums due to it. We believe that our proposals, including the transitional arrangements, are fair to housing tenants and chargepayers, and will mean that in future authorities in both England and Wales have greater incentives for efficient collection of their income.

Housing Management

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department has, during the last five years, including the current financial year, ever awarded less than a full year's funding, excluding start-up costs, under its grant-making powers contained in section 16 of the Housing and Planning Act 1986 and section 73 of the Housing Act 1985.

Mr. Trippier: Yes. In 1987-88, the first year in which grants under section 16 were available, they were awarded for the latter part of that year. In 1988-89, some section 16 grants were for less than a full year. In the period in question, with the exception of the current year, grants under section 73 have all been for a full year.

Empty Council Properties

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many local authority properties have been vacant for (a) less than six months and (b) more than six months in (i) Greater Manchester metropolitan county, (ii) Westminster, (iii) Suffolk, Coastal and (iv) the Isles of Scilly;

(2) if he will list the numbers of local authority properties which have been empty (a) for up to a year and (b) for more than a year in (i) Greater Manchester metropolitan county, (ii) Westminster, (iii) Suffolk, Coastal and (iv) the Isles of Scilly.

Mr. David Trippier [holding answer 19 June 1989]: Based on the information provided by the authorities in their housing investment programme returns, HIP1 for April 1988 the figures are as follows:

Local authority empty dwellings at April 1988

| | Number of dwellings empty for: | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Six months or less | More than six months | All empty dwellings | A year or less | More than a year | All empty dwellings |
| Greater Manchester metropolitan council[1] | 8,716 | 3,547 | 12,263 | 10,471 | 1,792 | 12,263 |
| Westminster | 332 | 561 | 893 | 535 | 358 | 893 |
| Suffolk Coastal | 70 | 12 | 82 | 81 | 1 | 82 |
| Isles of Scilly | 1 | 0 | 1 | 1 | 0 | 1 |

[1] Comprises the 10 metropolitan districts of Bolton, Bury, Manchester, Oldham, Rochdale, Salford, Stockport, Tameside, Trafford and Wigan.

Aldrin and Dialdrin

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he is now giving about the continuing use of aldrin and dialdrin.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 20 June 1989]: Aldrin and Dialdrin can no longer be legally supplied or used.

Property Revaluation

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to (a) announce the special provisions for non-domestic rating from 1990 onwards, following his consultation paper on the effects of revaluation of non-domestic property, and (b) inform individual non-domestic ratepayers of the new rateable values of their properties from 1 April 1990 following the revaluation of non-domestic property; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 21 June 1989]: I shall announce the Government's final proposals for phasing in the effect of the uniform business rate and the non-domestic revaluation as soon as we have completed our consideration of the responses to the consultation paper.

The Valuation Office will deposit with charging authorities draft lists showing new rateable values by 31 December 1989.

Public Works Contracts

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek to amend section 17 of the Local Government Act 1988 to co-ordinate procedures for the award of public works contracts as set out in the European Community draft directive on public works contracts (COM(89)141); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 22 June 1989]: The implications of the agreement reached in the internal market council on 14 June on a directive to amend the EC public works directive are currently being examined, but it would not appear at this stage that an amendment to section 17 of the Local Government Act 1988 is required.

Community Charge

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the level of community charge for spending at needs assessment which would apply in 1989-90 if the proposed local government finance system were in operation; and what assumptions are made to arrive at that answer.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 22 June 1989]: The estimate is £240 per adult. This figure is calculated by deducting rate support grant, and the assumed yield of non-domestic rates from total grant-related expenditure, leaving the amount to be raised by the community charge. This figure underlay the information placed in the Library on 1 March.

Water and Sewerage

Mr. Tim Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish a Model Instrument of Appointment under the Water Bill for the water and sewerage undertakers.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 20 December 1988, c. 195]: I am today placing copies of the latest draft of the model instrument of appointment for water and sewerage undertakers in the Library of both Houses, together with copies of a note of the main changes since the December model, also in the Library, and an explanatory note on interim determination of K, condition B, part IV.

ENERGY

Greenhouse Effect

7. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has made of the effect of the price of carbon fuels on the production of greenhouse gases and the implications for Government policy.

Mr. Parkinson: Discussion of the problem of global warming is proceeding at international level. The effect of changes in the price of carbon fuels depends on the particular fuel considered, the way in which it is used and the availability of alternatives.

44. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his estimate of the quantities of greenhouse gases which would be released into the atmosphere if all the United Kingdom's current nuclear electricity generation was replaced by coal-fired stations.

Mr. Michael Spicer: If the electricity that was generated by nuclear power in the United Kingdom in 1987 had been generated by fossil fuel power stations an estimated additional 45 million tonnes of carbon dioxide would have been released into the atmosphere.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what potential he has identified for the reduction of the generation of greenhouse gases via improved energy efficiency.

Mr. Peter Morrison: In addition to the continuing work of the Energy Efficiency Office to identify and bring to the attention of users cost-effective energy efficiency measures, my Department is making an assessment of the potential for further reduction of greenhouse gases via improved energy efficiency in the context of the work of the intergovernmental panel on climate change and of the European Community's energy programme. Energy efficiency is likely to be only one element of any response to the threat of climate change; it will require a combination of technologies and other measures to meet the challenge posed by $CO_2$ and other greenhouse gases.

Exploration Drilling

15. Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the level of exploration drilling for 1989, and what were the comparable figures in the two previous years.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Fifty-two exploration wells, of which eight are onshore, had been started by mid-June this year. This figure is already greater than that for the first halves of 1988 and 1987 when 40 and 36 wells were drilled respectively.

Central Electricity Generating Board

16. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he next expects to meet the chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board; and what matters he expects to discuss.

Mr. Parkinson: I meet the chairman of the Central Electricity Generating Board whenever that is necessary to discuss matters of common interest.

Energy Efficiency

18. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what incentives are made available through his Department for energy efficiency schemes.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The programmes and initiatives of the Energy Efficiency Office are all designed to draw to the attention of energy users the financial and other benefits of cost-effective energy efficiency measures.

Energy Efficiency

28. Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has proposals to devote more time and resources to promoting energy efficiency and conservation.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Energy Efficiency Office will continue to promote energy efficiency vigorously. Furthermore, the Government's proposals for electricity privatisation will break new ground in promoting efficiency both within the industry and with consumers. Arrangements have also been agreed for close co-operation between the EEO and the Office of Electricity Regulation.

29. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what plans he has to encourage the use of energy-efficient electric appliances.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Manufacturers and consumer associations already publish energy consumption data for electrical appliances. My Energy Efficiency Office is considering how best to publish further information in order to draw attention to the energy consumption of appliances and thereby promote the selection of the most efficient.

42. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether his Department has assessed the effectiveness of domestic and commercial electrical appliance efficiency standards such as those recently introduced in the United States of America.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Energy Efficiency Office will be assessing the applicability of standards as part of a general survey of the energy efficiency of electrical appliances in the United Kingdom and elsewhere.

Electricity (Carbon Dioxide Emissions)

19. Mr. Root: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has any plans to bring forward amendments to the Electricity Bill, strengthening the obligation to promote energy efficiency in the supply and use of electricity, as a contribution to the reduction of $CO_2$ release.

Mr. Parkinson: The Government are fully committed to energy efficiency. The Electricity Bill breaks new ground in promoting energy efficiency both within the industry and by those who use electricity.

North Sea Oil

20. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many jobs are supported by the North sea oil industry; and what number are based in (a) Scotland and (b) the north-east.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Department of Employment estimated that 25,400 persons were directly employed in the oil and gas industry in June 1989. There are no official figures on the much larger total number of jobs supported by the North sea oil industry.

AGR Fuel Rods

21. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what evidence he has that corroded AGR fuel rods stored at nuclear sites are not creating a public safety hazard.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The storage of AGR fuel rods at power stations is subject to stringent safety checks by the nuclear installations inspectorate which is satisfied that these arrangements are fully adequate.

31. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has received any proposals for investment for the construction of any dry storage bunkers for spent nuclear fuel rods.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I am aware of the electricity industry's interest in constructing a dry buffer store for spent AGR fuel at Heysham. I understand that the industry is currently carrying out site investigations and has yet to submit a planning application for the dry store.

Coal Privatisation

22. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to complete the privatisation of the coal industry.

Mr. Parkinson: We intend to privatise the coal industry as soon as possible after the next general election. The precise timing will depend on the decisions reached on the future structure of the industry and the terms under which operators will be able to mine coal.

British Coal (Electricity Purchases)

23. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his latest estimate of the tonnage level of purchases from British Coal by (a) National Power and (b) Power Gen in the calendar year 1990.

Mr. Parkinson: My Department makes no such estimates. This is a matter for negotiation between British Coal and the generators.

Hinkley Point C Inquiry

24. Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the total cost to public funds, to the latest available date, of the Hinkley C inquiry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: There is no net cost to public funds of running the Hinkley Point C public inquiry, because all such costs are either met directly by the CEGB or recovered from it.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if his Department was consulted by the Central Electricity Generating Board in the preparation of the reply by Mr. R. J. Tivey to the Hinkley C inquiry secretariat on plutonium accounting dated 25 April 1989, inquiry code number S 3481 part 2.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Officials in my Department were aware of the terms of Mr. Tivey's letter.

Power Plant Construction

25. Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on the power plant construction projects planned by the private sector.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My Department is aware of some 20 proposed private generation projects with a total capacity of around 7 GW. Details of individual projects are commercially confidential until companies announce them.

Nuclear Power Stations (Decommissioning)

26. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what would be (a) the total cost and (b) the effect on jobs of decommissioning all United Kingdom nuclear power stations by the year 2000.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No estimate has been made of the total cost or the effect on jobs of decommissioning all United Kingdom nuclear power stations by the year 2000. Although some existing nuclear power stations will be taken out of service by the year 2000, many will continue to operate well into the next century, as will those now under construction or planned. After the existing nuclear power stations are taken out of service the power station operators propose to delay the final stage of decommissioning for a period of the order of 100 years to take the benefit of the process of radioactive decay in the reactor core.

Vector Fuel (Sellafield)

27. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the backlog of spent advanced gas-cooled vector fuel at Sellafield, the corrosion problems being encountered and the implications for electricity supplies in the 1990s.

Mr. Michael Spicer: British Nuclear Fuels plc has ample pond space at Sellafield to receive the projected quantities of deliveries of spent AGR fuel from the home generating boards and their successors. BNFL's extensive research into the storage of AGR fuel under water suggests that, for fuel maintained in the correct water chemistry, no significant corrosion will occur for at least 10 years, and possibly longer.

Office of Electricity Regulation

30. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what guidance he has given to the director general-designate of the Office of Electricity Regulation on the best means of defending the interest of consumers.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Electricity Bill sets out the Director General of Electricity Supply's duties in relation to the protection of consumers' interests. It will create many new rights for the consumer, including an improved right to an electricity supply, protection for consumers who get their electricity from a landlord, protection for the elderly and disabled, help for those having difficulty paying bills and a new system of guaranteed standards of performance with automatic compensation for failures to meet these standards. The director general will have a statutory duty to protect the interests of the consumer and the new regional consumers committees will provide him with lay advice on consumer issues.

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what guidance he has given to the director general-designate of the Office of Electricity Regulation on the regulator's independence from political interference.

Mr. Parkinson: The director general's powers and duties are set out clearly in the Electricity Bill. The Government believe that Professor Littlechild will be a strong, effective and independent regulator.

Pressurised Water Reactors

32. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his latest estimate of the number of pressurised water reactor nuclear power stations in the small family which the Central Electricity Generating Board intends to build.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I understand that it is the CEGB's wish that the small family should consist of Sizewell B, which is currently under construction, and Hinkley Point C, Wylfa B and Sizewell C, in respect of which they have made applications for my right hon. Friend's consent.

36. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the number of pressurised water reactors which he expects to be in operation in the United Kingdom by 2010.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Decisions to apply for consent to construct new power stations are a matter for the electricity supply industry. So far my right hon. Friend has received applications for his consent to the construction of a further three PWR nuclear power stations which are similar in design to that being constructed at Sizewell B.

Combined Heat and Power

33. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, when he expects the first full-scale combined heat and power project to be commissioned in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Full-scale combined heat and power plants have been operated successfully by United Kingdom industry for many years.

My Department has been active in promoting novel applications of CHP industry and commerce through its energy efficiency demonstration scheme where 25 projects have been supported. The Government have also encouraged the economic development of urban combined heat and power/district heating schemes under its lead city programme and contributed towards studies in Belfast, Edinburgh and Leicester. Other work to examine the feasibility of major CHP/DH schemes and to develop proposals has been taken forward without Government support. In addition to the lead city studies and subsequent development of the Leicester scheme, my Department is aware of work being done by groups in Newcastle, Sheffield and south-east London. The commissioning date of new schemes is, however, a commercial matter for the promoters.

The Government are also taking measures under the provisions of the Electricity Bill to enable CHP operators to compete with the established utilities. In this regard we are giving licensed CHP operators power to break streets to lay cables and heat mains.

British Coal

34. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of British Coal; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of British Coal regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Electricity Privatisation

35. Mr Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the total cost incurred to date by his Department on advice on financial aspects of the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

52. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will state the total cost incurred to date by his Department on advice on legal aspects of the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The total cost to my Department of all advisers working on electricity privatisation amounted to £0·8 million in 1987-88 and £5·5 million in 1988-89. In addition, a provision of £26·5 million has been sought to cover relevant expenses in 1989-90. More detailed expenditure surrounding contracts of advisers working on electricity privatisation is commercially confidential.

45. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his latest estimate of the advertising costs of privatising the electricity supply industry in (a) the current and (b) next financial year.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cynon Valley (Mrs. Clwyd) earlier today.

48. Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has made of the expected level of competition following the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The new structure for the electricity industry will introduce competition into generation and supply and will provide an environment in which more will develop.

For example, the generation market will include National Power, Power Gen, supplies from Scotland and France, and existing and potential independent generators. We are currently aware of about 20 proposed independent generation projects. The substantial requirement for new generation capacity in the next 10 years will provide further opportunities for competition.

53. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has reassessed his view of 6 March 1988 that the Government's plans for electricity will cut electricity bills.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Nothing has changed my view that privatisation will mean that prices will be lower than if electricity remains nationalised.

Spent Nuclear Fuel (Sellafield)

37. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the most recent assessment made by the nuclear installations inspectorate of storage facilities for spent fuel at Sellafield.

Mr. Michael Spicer: All the storage facilities for spent fuel at Sellafield are subject to constant review and assessment by the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate as part of the routine inspections which it carries out.

Gas-powered Turbines

38. Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many projects his Department is aware of involving electricity generation from gas-powered turbines.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Almost all the major independent projects known to my Department are proposing to use gas-powered turbines. In addition, the National Power and Power Gen divisions of the CEGB has each recently applied for my consent to construct two gas-fired stations.

Fossil Fuel Combustion Tax

39. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent discussions he has had on proposals to levy a fossil fuel combustion tax.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government have no proposals for a tax on the use of fossil fuel.

National Power (Contracts)

40. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what provision he is making for National Power to renegotiate contracts signed with British Nuclear Fuels plc before electricity privatisation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The CEGB is currently in discussion with BNFL concerning contracts for fuel services which will continue post privatisation and will take account of the powers that the Government are seeking under clause 93 of the Electricity Bill. The Government's aim is that these contracts should be fair as between BNFL and the electricity supply industry.

Coal Production

41. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is British Coal's record of productivity in coal production since 1985; and what information he has on comparable figures for other major international coal producers.

Mr. Michael Spicer: British Coal's productivity rose by over 30 per cent. from 2·72 tonnes per manshift in 1985-86 to 3·62 tonnes in 1987-88. In Australia productivity rose from 12·32 tonnes in 1984-85 to 13·96 tonnes in 1986-87 (the latest period for which figures are available), a rise of 13 per cent., and in the United States of America productivity (measured in short tons) rose from 14·69 to 18·18 tons between the calendar years 1985 to 1987, a rise of 23 per cent. Since then, British Coal's productivity has increased further to 4·14 tonnes per manshift in 1988-89; I understand that there have also been substantial productivity gains in Australia and the United States of America since 1987.

Nuclear Agencies (Memorandum of Understanding)

43. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the joint memorandum of understanding signed by the World Association of Nuclear Operators and the International Atomic Energy Agency on 6 June.

Mr. Michael Spicer: A joint memorandum of understanding between the World Association of Nuclear Operators (WANO), and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) was signed at the agency's headquarters in Vienna on 6 June. The agreement was signed by Lord Marshall of Goring, who is chairman of WANO's governing board, and Dr. Hans Blix, Director General of the IAEA. The memorandum provides for the open exchange of information covering technical reports and reviews of operational experience, as well as extending to participation in meetings of mutual benefit to both organisations.

Longannet (Output)

46. Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the current state of negotiations between British Coal and the South of Scotland electricity board relating to output from the Longannet complex.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government have made it quite clear that they regard the negotiations between British Coal and the South of Scotland electricity board as a commercial matter for the two parties, but we see no reason why a mutually satisfactory settlement cannot be reached. In the meantime, I understand that the SSEB is taking supplies from British Coal at a rate of 2 million tonnes a year.

Sellafield (Storage Ponds)

47. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proposals for the development of storage ponds at Sellafield he has received from British Nuclear Fuels plc.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have received no such proposals. British Nuclear Fuels plc has ample storage capacity at Sellafield.

Coal-fired Electricity Generation

49. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what level of thermal efficiency is currently being achieved in coal-fired electricity generation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I am advised that the thermal efficiency of the CEGB's coal-fired power stations for 1988-89 was 35·52 per cent.

Plutonium

50. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his policy for the continuation of civilian reprocessing capability and the extraction of plutonium in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Reprocessing is a proven and safe technology for which there is a continuing demand. It is for the owners of the spent fuel to decide on safety, technical and economic grounds whether to reprocess spent fuel.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what evidence his Department has that plutonium created in Central Electricity Generating Board Magnox nuclear reactors up to 31 March 1969, and subsequently, put into the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority military stockpile has not been used in nuclear warhead production subsequently.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Plutonium created in the CEGB Magnox reactors and purchased by the UKAEA prior to 31 March 1969, was consigned to the United States before 1971 under the mutual defence agreement. The United States authorities have said that none of this plutonium has been used in weapons and that this continues to be their policy. For the civil uses to which this plutonium has been put in the United States, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, Central (Mr. Moore) to my hon. Friend the Member for Erewash (Mr. Rost) on 27 July 1982 at column 438.

Petrol Prices

51. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent representations he has received regarding the price of petrol.

Mr. Peter Morrison: We have received a number of letters from the public, and from Members on behalf of their constituents, expressing concern at increases in the prices of petrol. I have had no further representations since prices fell more recently.

Druridge Bay

54. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his latest assessment of the likelihood that the Druridge bay site will be used for a nuclear power station in the foreseeable future.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The CEGB plan to build four PWRs between now and the year 2000. Druridge bay has not been nominated by the CEGB as one of the sites for these reactors.

Spent Fuel Rods

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many spent Magnox fuel rods await reprocessing (a) in storage tanks at Sellafield and (b) in cooling ponds at Britain's nuclear power stations.

Mr. Michael Spicer: At 31 March 1989, some 940 tonnes uranium (u) of spent Magnox fuel were held at Sellafield awaiting reprocessing and some 350 tonnes u held by the generating boards at power stations. On average there are 100 fuel rods per tonne.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the total storage capacity for spent advanced gas-cooled reactor fuel rods at Sellafield and at nuclear power stations for each year from 1989 to 2000.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Space for storage of a minimum of some 2,700 tonnes uranium (u) of AGR fuel (some 60,000 AGR fuel assemblies) has been allocated in ponds on the Sellafield site. This will be more than sufficient to meet operational requirements for the THORP project. The total pond capacity at the AGR stations operated by the generating boards is some 390 tonnes u (some 9,400 assemblies).

Severn Barrage

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will report on progress with and make a statement on current Severn barrage proposals.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No new information on Severn barrage studies has become available since I replied to my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, North-West (Mr. Stern) on 12 June (at column 267) on this subject. I refer my hon. Friend to that answer.

Nuclear Reprocessing Industry

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if, following the decision to withdraw major funding for the fast reactor programme at Dounreay, the Government will reconsider their continuing support for the nuclear reprocessing industry;

(2) if, following the recent announcement by the West German Government that they are to abandon their projected nuclear reprocessing facility at Wackersdorf for financial and environmental reasons, the Government will reconsider their continued support for the nuclear reprocessing industry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Reprocessing is a proven and safe technology for which there is a continuing demand. BNFL has contracts with overseas customers for reprocessing in THORP worth some £2·77 billion in total. Additional contracts worth some £1·6 billion are being negotiated with utilities in the Federal Republic of Germany. It is for the owners of the spent fuel to decide on safety, technical and economic grounds whether to reprocess spent fuel.

Low-level Radioactive Waste

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received about the proposed Nirex recommendations to store low-level radioactive waste at Sellafield and Dounreay.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment announced on 21 March that the Government had accepted Nirex's recommendation that further investigatory work should be carried out to assess the potential of Sellafield and Dounreay as possible sites for a deep repository for radioactive waste. Since that time I have received two representations expressing concern about these proposals.

Transfers (Approval)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy which countries have been the destination of transfers of nuclear technology, reprocessing and waste management which have been subject to Government approval since June 1988; and if he will provide details of all such transfers.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No new transfer of technology has been approved since June 1988.

Non-fossil Fuel Levy

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his current estimate of the non-fossil fuel levy for the year 1989-90 under his privatisation plans.

Mr. Parkinson: The initial rate of the fossil fuel levy will depend on the outcome of contract negotiations for fossil and non-fossil generating capacity which are currently under way. The rate will be announced towards the end of this year.

Oil and Gas Reserves

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received about reserves of oil and gas in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Department's latest estimates of oil and gas reserves were given in my right hon. Friend's report on the development of the oil and gas resources of the United Kingdom ("The Brown Book") published in April. I have received no representations about the estimates, other than views expressed by the companies concerned in the course of their preparation.

Radioactive Material

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he has had during the last six months with the Central Electricity Generating Board and with British Nuclear Fuels plc in regard to the storage and reprocessing of radioactive material.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend and I regularly meet both chairmen to discuss a range of matters.

Oil Exploration

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) how many civil servants currently employed in his Department are involved with exploration, development and extraction of oil from the North sea;

(2) if he has had any discussions with any of the oil companies involved in the North sea concerning the possible relocation of the Department's civil servants responsible for exploration, development and extraction of the North sea outside London;

(3) what consideration has been given to relocating those civil servants responsible for exploration, development and extraction of oil within the Department of Energy away from London;

(4) what impact the decision of Conoco to concentrate its exploration operations division at Aberdeen and Shell and BP's increased emphasis on exploration and operations in Scotland has had on his policy in relation to the location of the Department's operations;

(5) what saving would be made by relocation of all the Department of Energy's civil servants dealing with exploration, development and extraction of oil from the North sea, from London to Glasgow;

(6) what saving would be made by the relocation of all the Department of Energy's civil servants dealing with exploration, development and extraction of oil from the North sea, from London to Aberdeen;

(7) what saving would be made by the relocation of all the Department of Energy's civil servants dealing with exploration, development and extraction of oil from the North sea, from London to Edinburgh.

Mr. Peter Morrison: There are 174 staff currently employed in my Department's petroleum engineering division, which is responsible for ensuring as far as possible the maximum economic and safe recovery of the United Kingdom's petroleum resources. Of these 16 staff, concerned with offshore safety, are already located in Aberdeen. Following a review in 1987 it was decided that a move of the division as a whole outside London was not feasible. It was estimated that no financial savings would arise from such a move. Moreover the division is very much involved in providing advice to Ministers and has day-to-day discussions with the headquarters of the companies in the oil and gas industry, most of whom remain located in London. If further consideration is given in the future to the relocation of staff in the division, the location of the companies' operations will be a relevant factor, though only one of a number of factors. No specific discussions have been held with the companies on this issue. Moreover of the 90 or so staff in the Department's Offshore Supplies Office, which is responsible for the promotion of the United Kingdom offshore supplies industry on the United Kingdom continental shelf and worldwide, some 80 are based in Scotland.

Redundant Mineworkers (Pensions)

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the number of ex-mineworkers who are currently receiving payments under the redundant mineworkers pension scheme for the years 1978-79, 1979-80, 1980-81, 1981-82, 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85, 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The number of ex-mineworkers who are currently receiving payments under the redundant mineworkers payments schemes by year of redundancy is as follows:

| Year of redundancy | Beneficiaries as at 1 April 1989 |
|---|---|
| 1979-80 | 8 |
| 1980-81 | 149 |
| 1981-82 | 1,268 |
| 1982-83 | 2,183 |
| 1983-84 | 13,332 |
| 1984-85 | 5,457 |
| 1985-86 | 21,036 |
| 1986-87 | 16,758 |
| Total payees | 60,191 |

Power Stations (Desulphurisation)

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what progress has been made to date in the desulphurisation of power stations.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Work on retrofitting flue gas desulphurisation equipment to Drax power station is proceeding well. I expect to receive an application for the next retrofit during the course of this year.

Continental Shelf

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what progress has been made in explorations on the United Kingdom continental shelf so far in the current year.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Up to mid-June, 43 exploration wells had been started on the United Kingdom continental shelf since the beginning of the year.

Nine significant discoveries have been announced.

Depleted Uranium Exports

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what depleted uranium from (a) British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. stockpiles and (b) United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority stockpiles has been exported from the United Kingdom and used in anti-tank shells, tank protective armour and other non-nuclear military uses; when and to which countries.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 13 June 1989]: Since 1979, one such export has been authorised for the specific purposes mentioned. Details are commercially confidential.

Orimulsion

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what information he has on the sulphur content of orimulsion;

(2) how many tonnes of orimulsion were imported into Britain in the current calendar year; and whether there are any plans to introduce a policy to encourage the conversion of power stations to orimulsion.

Mr. Parkinson: The sulphur content of orimulsion varies between 2·2 per cent. and 2·8 per cent. by weight. Twenty six thousand tonnes have been imported so far this year. Decisions on the conversion of power stations to this fuel are a matter for the commercial judgment of the CEGB.

Fuel Reprocessing

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has on the consideration given by the Central Electricity Generating Board to cancellation of contracts with British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. for reprocessing spent AGR fuel at Sellafield.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have no such information.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy for how long spent fuel rods can safely be stored before thermal oxide reprocessing.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) on 20 June 1989 at columns 90-91.

Electricity Supply (Computer Systems)

Mr. Tony Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the cost of installing the new computer systems to be introduced into the electricity supply industry as a result of privatisation.

Mr. Parkinson: This is a matter for the electricity supply industry. I have asked the chairman of the Electricity Council to write to the hon. Member.

Energy Conservation

Mr. David Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received about the conservation of energy; and whether he proposes to act on any of those representations.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I have received a number of representations regarding energy conservation and energy efficiency all of which have been taken into account in reviewing the programmes of the Energy Efficiency Office as well as the Government's proposals for the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

CEGB (Disabled Staff)

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information he has as to what percentage of the work force employed by the Central Electricity Generating Board are registered as disabled.

Mr. Parkinson: This is a matter for the Central Electricity Generating Board. I shall ask the chairman of the CEGB to write to the hon. Member.

DEFENCE

BNFL (Open Day)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if any Ministers or officials in his Department attended the thirtieth anniversary open day celebration of the opening of British Nuclear Fuels plutonium and tritium production reactors at Chapelcross in Annan on 13 May.

Mr. Sainsbury: Yes.

Tornado (Accidents)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Royal Air Force Tornado major accidents have been caused by teething problems with the introduction of the aircraft;

(2) if he will list all major accidents to Royal Air Force Tornado aircraft since its entry into service, specifying the cause of each accident.

Mr. Neubert: The information requested is given in the following table:

Major accidents to RAF Tornados

| Date | Accident | Location | Category | Cause |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 12 May 1982 | Accident on landing | RAF Conningsby | 4 | Not positively identified |
| 27 September 1983 | Accident on descent | Wolferton | 5 | Technical fault |
| 28 October 1983 | Accident on descent | Off North Norfolk Coast | 5 | Not positively identified |
| 14 November 1983 | Heavy landing | RAF Honington | 4 | Air crew error |
| 6 February 1984 | After Lightning strike, unnecessary ejection | Federal Republic of Germany | 5 | Air crew error |
| 12 July 1984 | Mid air collision | Off Sheringham (Norfolk coast) | 5 | Air crew error |
| 18 July 1984 | Flap failure | Goose Bay, Canada | 5 | Technical fault |
| 8 November 1984 | Unnecessary command ejection | Federal Republic of Germany | 5 | Air crew error |
| 12 December 1985 | Flew into Sea | Flamborough Head | 5 | Not positively determined |
| 2 December 1986 | Damage to electrical systems | Near Diss | 5 | Not positively determined |
| 10 December 1986 | Mid air collision (2 Tornados) | Near Thorney | 54 | Air crew error |
| 30 March 1987 | Failure of locking mechanism | Federal Republic of Germany | 5 | Technical fault |
| 3 June 1987 | Failure of mechanical and electrical systems | Manby, 5 nm East of Louth | 5 | Technical fault |
| 17 June 1987 | Mid-air collison | 3 nm South East Keswick | 5 | Operational |
| 27 July 1987 | Hydraulic system failure | Fadmoor, Near Pickering | 5 | Technical fault |
| 30 March 1988 | Accident on exercise | Nevada Desert | 5 | Air crew error |
| 10 May 1988 | Flew into ground | Federal Republic of Germany | 5 | Air crew error |
| 9 August 1988 | Mid-air collision (2 Tornados) | Appleby, Cumbria | 55 | Still under investigation |
| 13 January 1989 | Mid-air collision | Federal Republic of Germany | 5 | Still under investigation |

Notes:
1. Category 4 Damage not repairable on site.
2. Category 5 Aircraft is damaged beyond repair or is missing.

The accidents on 27 September 1983, 18 July 1984 and 2 December 1986 were attributed to teething problems with the aircraft.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what figures he can provide for the rate of major accidents per 10,000 flying hours for Tornado aircraft in Italian air Force service, excluding the Tornado tri-national training establishment;

(2) what figures he can provide for the rate of major accidents per 10,000 flying hours for Tornado aircraft in German air force service and German navy service excluding the Tornado tri-national training establishment.

Mr. Neubert: The public release of national aircraft accident statistics is a matter for the respective Government.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the overall rate of major accidents per 10,000 hours for Royal Air Force Tornado GR1 aircraft, excluding those assigned to the Tornado tri-national training establishment; and if he will provide a breakdown of this figure into annual major accident rates for each year since 1981.

Mr. Neubert: It is not our policy to publish such information.

Anti-tank Weapons and Artillery

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all changes in the definitions used to calculate the numbers of North Atlantic Treaty Organisation and Warsaw pact (a) anti-tank weapons and (b) artillery, between those used to compile the tables in chapter six of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988", and those used to compile the tables in chapter six of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Until 1988, United Kingdom definitions were used to calculate these figures, but in the interests of consistency within the Alliance figures 8 and 9 in chapter 6 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989", Cm. 675-I, were compiled according to the definitions and counting rules used by NATO. The changes involved the transfer of anti-tank guns from the artillery to the anti-tank weapons category; the exclusion of armoured infantry fighting vehicles and helicopters equipped with anti-tank guided missiles from the anti-tank weapons category; and the inclusion of mortars with a calibre size equal to or exceeding 100 mm in the artillery category.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the reasons for the change in his Department's assessment of the numbers of anti-tank guided weapons deployed by the Warsaw pact in the central region, portrayed in figure 15 on page 61 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988" and figure 9 on page 47 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988", Cm. 344-I, the figure for the number of anti-tank guided weapons deployed by the Warsaw pact in the central region was based on the United Kingdom definition and counting rules. In the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989", Cm. 675-I, NATO definitions and counting rules are used, in the interests of consistency within the Alliance.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide figures for the number of anti-tank weapons held by the Warsaw pact in the central region in late 1988, counting crew-served systems and helicopter or vehicle-mounted systems, but excluding those that may be fired through the gun barrel of Soviet tanks.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The overall number of anti-tank weapons held by the Warsaw pact in the central region in late 1988, excluding those that may be fired through the gun barrel of tanks, is assessed to be 13,700.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list those Warsaw pact countries which were formerly producing chemical warfare agents but which have now ceased production;

(2) which Warsaw pact countries are currently manufacturing chemical warfare agents.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Soviet Union is the only member of the Warsaw pact to have admitted producing chemical warfare agents, and it has also claimed that such production has ceased. The other Warsaw pact countries have stated that they do not produce such agents, but none has provided any evidence to support its claims.

All the non-soviet Warsaw pact countries have chemical industries with the capability to produce chemical warfare agents and we believe that some have produced chemical weapons. The details of our assessments of individual countries' programmes are classified.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what year the Soviet Union first deployed chemical weapons in any non-Soviet Warsaw pact country; and whether (a) Soviet chemical warfare agents, (b) Soviet chemical weapons and (c) unfilled Soviet chemical munitions are currently deployed in any Warsaw pact country other than the Soviet Union.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In spite of Soviet claims, we have good reason to believe that the Soviet Union has stationed chemical weapons in Eastern Europe. I am not prepared to comment in detail for security reasons, but there is an obvious need for the Soviet Union to make available much more information about its chemical warfare capabilities.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the supply of (a) chemical warfare agents and (b) precursors for chemical warfare agents by Warsaw pact countries to non-Warsaw pact countries.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have no evidence that in recent years any Warsaw pact country has supplied chemical warfare agents to any non-Warsaw pact country.

The Warsaw pact countries have very large chemical industries whose products are exported worldwide. Many of the precursors for chemical warfare agents are common chemicals which have a variety of legitimate uses. These are traded widely by many countries, including those of the Warsaw pact. The Warsaw pact countries have stated that they impose export controls on a number of the immediate precursors to chemical warfare agents, and we have no evidence that controls are being contravened.

Warsaw Pact (Aircraft)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the portrayal of information in current and past editions of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates" on the numbers of embarked and shore-based aircraft assigned for naval operations in the Warsaw pact's (a) northern fleet, (b) Baltic fleet and (c) Black sea fleet; and if he will publish figures showing the numbers of aircraft in these categories in each fleet for each year since 1979.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Revised figures for embarked and shore-based aircraft, fixed-wing and helicopters, assigned for naval operations in the Warsaw pact's Northern, Baltic and Black sea fleets from 1979 to 1989 are approximately as follows:

| | Northern Fleet | Baltic Fleet | Black Sea Fleet |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1979 | 350 | 270 | 260 |
| 1980 | 360 | 290 | 270 |
| 1981 | 370 | 270 | 300 |
| 1982 | 400 | 280 | 300 |
| 1983 | 400 | 280 | 320 |
| 1984 | 420 | 280 | 330 |
| 1985 | 400 | 270 | 300 |
| 1986 | 450 | 300 | 300 |
| 1987 | 425 | 270 | 300 |
| 1988 | 425 | 270 | 300 |
| 1989 | 425 | 270 | 280 |

Since 1985, the definitions of the type of aircraft included have altered and, as is the case with all estimates, the figures published in previous Statements on the Defence Estimates are subject to revision as new material becomes available.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the figures for Warsaw pact aircraft deployed west of the Urals on page 51 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989" include aircraft from front-line units which are undergoing maintenance and modification in addition to mission-ready aircraft.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The aircraft figures quoted reflect the complete strength of the unit, which includes those undergoing maintenance and modification.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the reasons for the decline between late 1986 and late 1987 in the numbers of Warsaw pact SRINF aircraft deployed west of the Urals, as depicted in figure 16 on page 68 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1987" and figure 19 on page 67 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The change in deployment numbers is the result of the reorganisation of the Soviet air and air defence forces. A number of air regiments were transferred from tactical aviation forces, which have a nuclear role, to the strategic air defence force which does not have a nuclear attack role.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the reasons for the differences between the figures for Warsaw pact SRINF aircraft as at the end of 1988 provided in (a) the reply from the hon. Member for Romford (Mr. Neubert) to the right hon. Member for Bethnal Green and Stepney (Mr. Shore) of 2 March, Official Report, column 254, and (b) figure 12 on page 51 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989", volume 1.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The figures given in the answer on 2 March 1989 by my hon. Friend the Member for Romford (Mr. Neubert) at column 254 did not include the Frogfoot aircraft. This type of aircraft was included in figure 12 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989", Cm. 675-I, following a further assessment of its possible roles.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the reasons for the change in the numbers of Warsaw pact long-range INF aircraft between the end of 1987 and the end of 1988, as depicted in figure 18 on page 66 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988" and figure 12 on page 51 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The reduction in the numerical strength of Warsaw pact LRINF medium bombers between 1987 and 1988 is due to the modernisation programme that has been undertaken by the Warsaw pact, with the continuing introduction of the Backfire supersonic dual-capable bomber. With the deployment of this superior weapon system, the Warsaw pact has been able to retire an increasing proportion of their ageing and obsolescent Badger medium bombers. Therefore, although the overall size of the aircraft component of the LRINF is gradually being reduced, its overall operational capability is being improved.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the number of (a) Badger, (b) Blinder and (c) Backfire aircraft deployed by the Warsaw pact west of the Urals at the end of each year since 1979, excluding those with a primary maritime role.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The approximate numbers were as follows:

| | Badger | Blinder | Backfire | Totals |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1979 | 420 | 160 | 40 | 620 |
| 1980 | 450 | 160 | 70 | 680 |
| 1981 | 450 | 160 | 70 | 680 |
| 1982 | 450 | 160 | 80 | 690 |
| 1983 | 420 | 160 | 100 | 680 |
| 1984 | 410 | 160 | 100 | 670 |
| 1985 | 410 | 160 | 120 | 690 |
| 1986 | 350 | 160 | 130 | 640 |
| 1987 | 290 | 160 | 150 | 600 |
| 1988 | 290 | 150 | 160 | 600 |
| 1989 | 210 | 150 | 180 | 540 |

HMS Chatham and HMS Norfolk

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the portrayal of the operational status of the Royal Navy vessels HMS Chatham and HMS Norfolk in annex A of volume 1 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: HMS Chatham and HMS Norfolk are due to be accepted into service later this year, as is made clear at paragraph 324 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989, Cm 675-I. As such, they should have been marked by an asterisk in annex A. Unfortunately they were not, due to a printing error.

Warsaw Pact (Weapons)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report a table updating the information contained in the table entitled "Weapons Production for Warsaw Pact Forces" on page 62 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988;" and if he will include in the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation figures the production of weapons by France and Spain.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Estimated total production between 1979 and 1988 is as follows:

| | Soviet Union | Non-Soviet Warsaw Pact | Total Warsaw Pact | Total NATO |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Main Battle Tanks | 26,000 | 5,400 | 31,400 | 11,000 |
| Other Armoured Vehicles | 48,000 | 6,300 | 54,300 | 20,800 |
| Field Artillery, Mortars and Rocket Launchers | 25,000 | 6,500 | 31,500 | 5,800 |
| Tactical Combat and Interceptor Aircraft | 7,300 | 1,200 | 8,500 | 6,400 |

| | Soviet Union | Non-Soviet Warsaw Pact | Total Warsaw Pact | Total NATO |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Major Surface Warships | 83 | 23 | 106 | 175 |
| Attack Submarines | 64 | 2 | 66 | 59 |

Note:
The above table is taken from the United States Secretary of Defence's Annual Report to Congress for Fiscal Year 1990. French and Spanish production is not included.

Backfire Bombers

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the figures for the numbers of Backfire bombers in his answer to the right hon. Member for Bethnal Green and Stepney (Mr. Shore) of 2 March, Official Report, column 255, included maritime-assigned Backfires; and if he will provide figures showing the numbers of Backfire aircraft deployed in operational units in each year since 1985, excluding those with a maritime role.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The figures given in the answer on 2 March by my hon. Friend the Member for Romford (Mr. Neubert) at column 255 include maritime-assigned aircraft. The number of Backfire aircraft deployed in operational units in each year since 1985, excluding those with a maritime role, are approximately as follows:

| | Numbers |
|---|---|
| 1985 | 120 |
| 1986 | 130 |
| 1987 | 150 |
| 1988 | 160 |

LRINF Aircraft

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the numbers of North Atlantic Treaty Organisation LRINF aircraft listed in military balance tables in successive editions of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates" since 1984 include all aircraft deployed in Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The number of aircraft presented in the Statement on the Defence Estimates covers all NATO's operational LRINF aircraft permanently based in Europe. As the tables show, these consist entirely of F-111 aircraft. There are also a further 12 EF-111 based in Europe, which would operate only in the electronic warfare role. Similarly, the figure presented for Warsaw pact LRINF aircraft does not include around 100 aircraft of the same types which it is believed would operate in non-nuclear, supporting roles. The final two sentences of paragraph 618 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989, Cm. 675-I, apply only to SRINF aircraft.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what trends have been observed in the numbers of long-range INF aircraft deployed by the Warsaw pact since the end of 1988.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Warsaw pact continues to modernise its long-range INF air forces, as it replaces the obsolescent Badger medium bomber with the modern variable-geometry supersonic Backfire. The overall number of medium bombers has decreased, and will continue to do so as the Badger is withdrawn from service. However, within the next five years the aircraft component of the Warsaw pact's long-range INF force will consist of an all-supersonic force of Backfire and Blinder aircraft.

Frogfoot

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what year the Su-25 Frogfoot entered service with the Warsaw pact.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Production of the Su-25 Frogfoot began in 1980. We assess that the first units became operational in the conventional role in the USSR in 1981. Subsequently, the aircraft was used operationally in Afghanistan.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what year the Su-25 Frogfoot is assessed to have acquired a nuclear capability.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All Soviet ground-attack aircraft have a potential nuclear delivery capability. The Su-25 Frogfoot entered operational service in 1981 in the conventional role, but was not assessed by NATO to have acquired a nuclear capability until 1988.

Flanker

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what year the Su-27 Flanker entered service with the Warsaw pact.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Su-27 Flanker entered service with the Soviet strategic air defence force in 1985.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what year the Su-27 Flanker is assessed to have acquired a nuclear capability.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Some Su-27 Flanker aircraft have the primary mission of air superiority in the central region. In fulfilling this role, the aircraft is equally likely to attack targets in the air or on the ground. The Flanker is capable of both nuclear and conventional ground-attack operations, and is assessed to have been so since 1987.

Conventional Forces (Balance)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration is being given to the diversion of military personnel to non-military tasks such as public works and environmental restoration in the event of achievement of a conventional force balance in Europe at force levels lower than those currently maintained by the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: NATO is committed to seeking an agreement on conventional forces in Europe which will lead to a stable and secure balance at lower levels, but at this stage it would be premature to speculate on which military units might be affected. It is unlikely that the Ministry of Defence would be responsible for redeploying service personnel to non-military tasks.

Warsaw Pact (Arms Production)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what independent British national capability exists for assessment and calculation of Warsaw pact arms production levels.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This capability is provided by the defence intelligence staff, whose responsibilities include the assessment of Warsaw pact arms production levels.

Ammunition Propellant

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation ammunition propellant is manufactured in Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Logistics matters, including the procurement of ammunition propellant, are a national responsibility. I am not aware of any instance where propellant manufactured in Czechoslovakia has been used in Ministry of Defence ammunition.

Soviet Naval Activity

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what trends have been observed in Soviet naval activity in the eastern Atlantic since the publication of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since the publication of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988, Soviet naval activity in the eastern Atlantic has remained virtually constant at the reduced level observed in 1987.

Soviet Defence Spending

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what will be the implications for British defence policy of the announced halving of Soviet defence spending by 1995.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We welcome the recent announcement by the Soviet Prime Minister of plans to reduce the proportion of national income devoted to defence, but the implications for the future Soviet defence programme are far from clear, and we await further details with interest. In the meantime, the Soviet Union and its allies in the Warsaw pact continue to have a massive superiority in many types of conventional armaments in Europe. Our commitment to the mutual defence provided by NATO, and to NATO's policy of strength in defence combined with readiness for dialogue and co-operation with the East, will remain the foundation of our defence policy.

Departmental Property

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many properties are leased by his Department from the local authority in (a) Greater Manchester metropolitan county, (b) Westminster, (c) Suffolk Coastal and (d) Isles of Scilly.

Mr. Neubert: The answers are as follows: (a) Six (three office properties and three separate areas of land on which MOD have subsequently had built a total of 37 residential properties); (b) None; (c) None; (d) One, a small fuel store of approximately 22 sq m.

Ptarmigan

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to increase the number of Ptarmigan mobile trunk modes currently in service with the British Army.

Mr. Sainsbury: No decision has yet been taken on further orders for trunk modes for the Ptarmigan system.

Buccaneer

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to replacing the Buccaneer maritime strike aircraft.

Mr. Sainsbury: We are now carefully studying the need to replace the Buccaneeer in due course.

IUKADGE Command and Control System

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration was given to using one common computer software language for the improved United Kingdom air defence ground environment command and control system when its specifications were originally determined.

Mr. Sainsbury: During the nationally funded project definition stage of the IUKADGE CCS in 1977-78, consideration was given to the use of a single preferred software language, CORAL 66, and the codes of software practice extant at that time. However, a subsequent decision to seek maximum return from the NATO common infrastructure budget resulted in the United Kingdom having to abide by the rules of NATO international competitive bidding, ICB, existing at the time, which precluded the specification of a single software language. In addition, the NATO financial authorities directed that existing NATO Air Defence Ground Environment, NADGE software was to be re-used to the greatest extent possible.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the current estimate of the date on which the improved United Kingdom air defence ground environment command and control system will be declared fully operational;

(2) when the improved United Kingdom air defence ground environment command and control system was intended to be fully operational when it was first ordered.

Mr. Sainsbury: The improved United Kingdom air defence ground environment, IUKADGE, is being progressively introduced over a number of years, in accordance with a plan that takes account of the need to maintain a continuous operational capability as the transition from the old to the new is accomplished. Some elements of the system are already in service use. The element known as the IUKADGE command and control system has been delayed and, with the agreement of the prime contractor, UKADGE Systems Ltd., is currently subject to an independent audit and review. It would be premature to comment further before the outcome of that audit has been assessed.

NFR 90

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the project definition phase for the NFR 90 programme will be completed.

Mr. Sainsbury: The contract for the project definition study is due to complete early in 1991.

There will then follow a period in which the results will be assessed and decisions taken with the other Governments involved.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which British companies have been consulted as part of the project definition phase for the NFR 90 programme.

Mr. Sainsbury: Regular contact is maintained with British industry through several mediums including the Defence Contracts Bulletin, the Defence Industries Council, the NFR United Kingdom Industrial Advisory Panel, made up of the principal defence trade associations and interested companies, and with the nine member companies of Supermarine Consortium Ltd., the United Kingdom shareholder in the international joint venture company undertaking the project definition study.

EH 101 Helicopter

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the project definition phase for the tactical support variant of the EH 101 helicopter will be completed.

Mr. Sainsbury: The formal project definition phase is being undertaken in two stages, the first of which will run for one year from April this year, although the essential analysis of alternatives will be available at the end of December this year. No timetable has been set for the second stage of project definition.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether design work on the next generation of nuclear-powered submarines has been completed.

Mr. Sainsbury: Design work on SSN 20, the first of class of the next generation of nuclear-powered fleet submarines, is at an early stage.

Z-berths

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the present state of negotiations between local authorities and his Department on the proposed Z-berths at Swansea.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: After our initial discussions with local authorities, a feasibility study was carried out, and this is now under consideration within the Ministry of Defence. If the results prove favourable, further discussions will take place.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the present state of negotiations between local authorities and his Department on the proposed Z-berth at Tilbury.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Bow and Poplar (Ms. Gordon) on 5 May at column 277.

Housing (Dunoon-Sandbank)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many additional houses for United States navy personnel are planned in the Dunoon-Sandbank area; what is the estimated cost of their construction; and what military functions will be performed by the occupants of the additional housing.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 22 June]: I understand that the United States navy is in the process of leasing up to 50 buildings in the Dunoon-Sandbank areas to house United States naval and civilian personnel involved in maintaining support for the ships and facilities in Holy loch. Some work will be required to bring the buildings up to the required standard and to facilitate use of United States domestic appliances. The United States navy also intends to investigate the possibility of leasing a further 44 houses. The details and costs of this programme are a matter for the United States Government.

44. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many boys, the sons of service personnel, have attended Crookham Court School on Ministry of Defence grants since 1974.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [pursuant to his reply, 19 June 1989, c. 59, and the reply, 12 June 1989, c. 321]: There are presently six children of service parents at Crookham Court school.

CIVIL SERVICE

Mr. Bernard Ingham

80. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will arrange for Mr. Bernard Ingham to give a lecture at the Civil Service college.

Mr. Luce: In February this year, Mr. Ingham gave an informal talk to senior civil servants on a top management course, run by the Office of the Minister for the Civil Service, held at the college in Sunningdale.

WALES

National Museum of Wales

55. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to visit the national museum of Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: I hope to visit the national museum of Wales later this year.

Water Pollution

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many inspections of waste outfalls from factories were carried out on the Ely and Glyn rivers in Mid Glamorgan by Welsh water authority inspectors or bailiffs over the past 12 months.

Mr. Grist: This is a matter for the Welsh water authority.

Rivers (Fish Loss)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the causes of the recent loss of stocked fish in the rivers Ely and Glyn in Mid Glamorgan.

Mr. Grist: This is a matter for the Welsh water authority.

European Parliament

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next proposes to visit the European Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have no immediate plans to do so.

Epilepsy Association

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much assistance his Department intends to give to the Wales Epilepsy Association for 1989-90; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 26 May 1989 at column 762.

Valleys Initiative

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the projects and their costs funded by his Department as part of the Valleys initiative.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the projects and their costs funded by his Department as part of the Valleys programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: A full list of the very many projects taking place in the Valleys could only be provided at a disproportionate cost. I shall be making a progress statement on the Valleys programme shortly.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the starting date of the Valleys initiative.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the starting date of the Valleys programme of his Department, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Valleys programme was formally launched on 14 June 1988.

NHS Reform

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations will be held with (a) the staff and (b) the local authority representing the catchment area of any general hospitals that apply for self-governing status; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what consultations will be held with local communities in the catchment area of any general hospitals in Wales that apply for self-governing status; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Any application for self-governing status will be the subject of consultation with interested parties, including in particular health authorities concerned, staff at the hospital, general practitioners, community health councils and the local community. My right hon. Friend will consider any responses alongside the application.

TRANSPORT

Road Safety

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contribution he expects the proposals in "Road Users and the Law" to make towards his target for reducing casualties in his policy document, "Road Safety: The Next Steps."

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In 1987 we set the target of reducing casualties by one third by the year 2000. That means a reduction of some 100,000 deaths and injuries. Our priority must be the deaths and serious injuries.

In 1988 we made good progress towards this. Deaths decreased by 2 per cent. compared with 1987, and were 10 per cent. down compared to the baseline of our target. Serious injuries were down by 1 per cent. compared with 1987, −15 per cent. compared with the target baseline. This represents good progress, particularly as traffic volumes continue to rise.

Publication of the North report, and the White Paper "The Road User and the Law", (Cm. 576) has helped considerably to increase the awareness of the need for action to cut road casualties, and to give such action much higher priority. The proposals in the White Paper are an important part of the Government's overall package of measures which, by changing public attitudes, improving enforcement and adopting improved road engineering techniques are together designed to achieve the target.

Road Traffic Law

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on any progress made in implementing some of the non-legislative recommendations of the road traffic law review which he accepted.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The White Paper "The Road User and the Law" sets out the Government's proposals for taking forward the non-legislative recommendations accepted from the road traffic law review.

We have received many positive and helpful comments from interested organisations. We will now be discussing with them how best to take forward, jointly, the non-legislative aspects of the White Paper. We shall also be adding a number of projects to our research programme to follow up those aspects of the North report which require further research.

Rail Freight (Barnes Bridge)

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the average weekly amount of rail freight transported over Barnes bridge and its average journey length; and what assessment has been made of the equivalent number of average road freight vehicle miles this represents.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This information is not known to the Department.

Roads (Liverpool)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department has given for road building and improvement in Liverpool; and if he will list the Liverpool city council plans it was allocated for, for each of the last five years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are no trunk roads in Liverpool. We support expenditure on the city council's more important roads through the transport supplementary grant system. The information requested is:

| Year | Amount of TSG given (£ million) (including minor works) |
|---|---|
| 1985-86 | [1]2·083 |
| 1986-87 | 2·702 |
| 1987-88 | 2·267 |
| 1988-89 | 1·235 |
| 1989-90 | 1·762 |

[1] (to Merseyside County Council).

| Major Schemes accepted for TSG 1985-1990 | Years TSG allocated |
|---|---|
| Liverpool Inner Ring Road | 1985-86, 1986-87, 1987-88 |
| Garston Bypass | 1985-86, 1986-87, 1987-88 |
| Access to Lime Street Station | 1985-86, 1986-87, 1987-88 |
| Great George Street | 1985-86, 1986-87, 1987-88 |
| Everton Valley Improvement | 1985-86, 1986-87, 1987-88, 1988-89 |

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about road building and upgrading plans in Liverpool; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have recently received representations about the Park road relief road from the chairman of the Merseyside development corporation and the hon. Member. My right hon. Friend the Member for Wallasey (Mrs. Chalker) wrote to me about motorway communications on Merseyside and in Liverpool.

NATIONAL FINANCE

EAGGF (Commitment Appropriations)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement explaining the procedures under which one quarter of all EAGGF commitment appropriations were made available to the Commission in January of recent years when provisional twelfths applied.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 19 June 1989]: In 1980, 1985, 1987 and 1988, when provisional twelfths have applied, one quarter of all EAGGF commitment appropriations have been made available to the Commission, on its request, in accordance with article 204 of the Rome treaty and article 8 of the financial regulation. The Commission has used these commitments to meet EAGGF payments, which tend to fall disproportionately in the early part of the year.

THE ARTS

Disabled People

Mr. Janner: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many and what percentage of persons employed in his Department are registered as disabled.

Mr. Luce: None.

ENVIRONMENT

Greenhouse Effect

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the carbon dioxide emissions recorded for 1987 and 1988 related to public sector energy use, broken down into (a) central Government offices, by individual Departments of State, (b) local government, (c) health authorities and (d) other public sector bodies.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Estimates of carbon dioxide emissions in the United Kingdom have been published in the "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics, Number 11", copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House. Emissions due to fossil fuel use in the public sector are included in the source category "Commercial/Public Service": in 1987 these amounted to 32 million tonnes of $CO_2$, which was 5 per cent. of the total United Kingdom annual emissions. Data for 1988 are currently being prepared. It would involve disproportionate cost to provide emission estimates in the categories requested.

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what specific proposals his Department has put forward for consideration and enactment, in order to reduce greenhouse gas emissions such as carbon dioxide and methane, since the seminar on the greenhouse effect held by the Prime Minister on 26 April.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 26 June 1989]: At the first meeting of parties to the Montreal protocol, held in Helsinki in May, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave the full support of the United Kingdom to the European Community's call for a reduction in the production and consumption of chlorofluorocarbons by 85 per cent. as soon as possible with a view to phasing them out by the end of the century.

At the Council of EC Environment Ministers, held in Luxembourg 9-10 June, my noble Friend the Minister of State for Housing, the Environment and Countryside, successfully pressed for the Commission to report back to Council on measures that can be taken to combat carbon dioxide emission from cars.

Ivory

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration has been given to the payment of compensation for firms whose business will be destroyed by a ban on trade in new ivory.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is not normal practice to pay compensation to firms whose trade is adversely affected by import restrictions imposed for the purposes of conserving endangered species.

Community Charge

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance has been issued to community charge registration officers concerning the obtaining of addresses from telecommunications operators.

Mr. Gummer: Community charge practice note No. 3, published in August last year, gave guidance to registration officers on those bodies from whom they have power to require information. These do not include telecommunications operators.

River Pollution

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if any rivers in South Yorkshire are known to be polluted by the use of tributyl tin by boat owners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The main freshwater rivers affected have been those carrying large numbers of pleasure craft, which were treated with tributyl tin antifouling paints before the Government banned their sale and supply in 1987. The rivers of South Yorkshire do not fall into this category and so have not been monitored.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many companies have deemed consent to discharge into the River Mersey.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 26 June 1989]: I understand from the North West water authority that 27 companies currently have deemed consents under the terms of part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 to discharge effluent into the River Mersey.

The number of extant deemed consents is being progressively reduced as they are reviewed by the North West water authority and either revoked or replaced by a positively determined consent. Following privatisation, the National Rivers Authority will take responsibility for this work.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will name the establishment on Merseyside that is exempt from the Control of Pollution Act 1974.

Mr. Howard [Holding answer 26 June 1987]: There are no establishments exempt from the provision of part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 other than those which are subject to Crown immunity. In such cases, it is the general policy of the Government that the standards of pollution control applied should, wherever possible, be no lower than that for other establishments.

Rainfall

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the most recent figures and those for five and 10 years ago on the levels of acidification in rainfall (a) in Doncaster, (b) the three counties of Yorkshire and Humberside and (c) nationally.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The data requested are provided only for 1988 in the table. Prior to 1986 no data are available for the region and there are insufficient to calculate a representative United Kingdom average. The Doncaster value has been interpolated from nearby rural stations which may not be representative of an urban area.

Annual mean precipitation weighted acidity in rainfall in u eq H+/litre

| Data region | u eq H+/litre | pH |
|---|---|---|
| United Kingdom | 25 | 4·6 |
| Yorkshire and Humberside | 58 | 4·2 |
| Doncaster | 73 | 4·1 |

Grants (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what grants have been, or are due to be made by the Rural Development Commission, for the county of South Yorkshire during 1989-90; and if he will list them.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Under the 1989 rural development programme for South Yorkshire the Rural Development Commission has agreed in principle to support six projects:

Rural Development Area Project Officer
Sports hall extension
Church Street/Bridge Street infrastructure link
Resource centre
Market extension
Workspace

Bids for other specific projects will also be considered as they arise. Formal approval and timing of projects will depend on the availability of resources and consideration of detailed applications. The commission also offers grants within the rural development area for the conversion of redundant buildings.

Public Relations

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which public relations firms his Department has employed and at what cost, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Ridley: Apart from the special circumstances of privatisation work, the consistent practice of successive Governments has been to avoid the use of public relations firms or other firms outside Government for public relations work.

Since July 1988 my Department, jointly with the Water Authorities Association, has employed Dewe Rogerson Ltd. as marketing and public relations advisers in connection with the forthcoming privatisation of the water authorities. I am unable to reveal the costs of its work for reasons of commercial confidentiality.

Dioxin

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the findings of an investigation commissioned by his Department into the extent and effects of dioxin contamination.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 22 June to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) [at columns 202-3], when I announced publication of pollution paper No. 27, entitled "Dioxins in the Environment". A copy is in the Library.

Housing Co-operatives

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to publish the report of his Department's working party on housing co-operatives.

Mr. Trippier: I welcome the report of the committee which has carried out the review of housing co-operatives in England and which has been published today. The committee has responded positively to its terms of reference and confirmed that co-ops and other tenant control arrangements are popular with tenants, are effective, and are able to justify the grant support which has already been provided for them.

The committee recommends several important measures to increase the involvement of tenants in the management of their homes, and extra support for tenants' groups to help them form housing co-operatives and the other types of tenant control considered in the review.

I am delighted to accept the committee's recommendations and to endorse its view that an expansion of co-operatives and other tenant-led initiatives is now needed. This mirrors the Government's belief that real choices must be available for tenants.

This expansion must be accompanied by further work, linked to research recently carried out and soon to be published by the Department, to refine our understanding of the value for money that tenant-led management can offer and to monitor progress. In the meantime, I am happy to announce that:

we will provide a significant build-up for additional support for the promotion and development of new housing co-operatives and alternative forms of tenant control in the local authority stock;

my Department will urgently discuss with interested bodies training opportunities for both tenants and development workers and ways of improving them;

we will make £2 million available in 1990/91 to provide start-up support for new tenant initiatives and the promotion of new co-operatives in the housing association stock;

a new promotional unit will be set up at the Housing Corporation to increase opportunities for participation among housing association tenants;

we will ensure effective monitoring arrangements are established to ensure progress is made with tenant involvement using these newly increased resources;

we will discuss with interested parties possible ways of improving the coverage of sources of advice and assistance for tenants by secondary co-operatives and other local organisations;

we will invite local authorities to discuss proposals for the decentralisation of a major part of whole of their stock to local management organisations. We intend to develop a small number of pilot projects to test cost-effectiveness and service delivery.

Copies of the report have today been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Domestic Property (Compensation)

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to publish regulations to deal with the basis of compensation payable under part 2 of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954.

Mr. Trippier: It is hoped that consultations with the relevant bodies will take place towards the end of the year and that proposals will be laid before Parliament thereafter.

Brodsworth Hall, Doncaster

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the future of Brodsworth hall, near Doncaster; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave his agreement on 5 April to English Heritage opening negotiations with the National Heritage Memorial Fund and with the owners of Brodsworth hall on the acquisition of the hall and its contents. No representations have been received since then.

Bradford West End Scheme

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the occasions when his officials had discussions with the developer for the Bradford "west end" scheme for a city grant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Members of the Department's team of professional appraisers and other officials have had a number of discussions on the proposals for "west end". For reasons of commercial confidentiality it is not our practice to comment on individual city grant proposals.

Water Supplies

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of private drinking water supplies in England and Wales and the number of people served by those supplies.

Mr. Howard: Local authorities collect and hold information on private supplies in their respective areas. Precise information is not held centrally. However, we estimate that there are 80,000 to 100,000 private supplies in the country serving approximately 1 per cent. of the population.

North West Water Authority (Contracts)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on (i) the length and nature of the contracts given by North West water authority to (a) Mr. Archie Ramsay and (b) Miss Dora McCabe and (ii) their current responsibilities.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 23 June 1989]: Mr. Ramsay has been appointed by the Secretary of State as an executive member of North West water authority on terms similar to those in his original contract with the authority. His present salary is £65,000. Miss McCabe's appointment as an officer remains a matter for the authority. They continue to fill the posts of financial director and corporate affairs manager respectively.

Set-aside Land

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications for development on set-aside land have been subnitted since the scheme was launched.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 23 June 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 20 June, at column 68-9.

Blood Sports

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice has been given by his Department to the Nature Conservancy Council regarding the pursuance of blood sports on land purchased by conservancy bodies with grant-aid.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 26 June 1989]: Traditional country rights and uses should be interfered with only where they are in conflict with conservation interests.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

"A Few Scientific Statements on Racial Difference"

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has received about the British Voice publication, "A Few Scientific Statements on Racial Difference," which has been circulated through the post to residents of south-east London, urging prosecution of those responsible for its distribution under section 5a of the Public Order Act; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: The Attorney-General has received representations from Greenwich borough council about the publication. The Director of Public Prosecutions has been asked to request the police to make inquiries concerning its publication and distribution. Section 5a of the Public Order Act 1936 has been repealed and replaced by part 3 of the Public Order Act 1986.

SCOTLAND

NHS Reform

72. Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement on his proposals for the reform of the Health Service.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Following publication of the White Paper (Cm. 555) and our working papers a large number of responses have been received. These responses, which include a number of generally positive and constructive comments, will be considered before final decisions are taken on the implementation of our proposals for improving the NHS in Scotland.

Management Consultants

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was spent in 1988-89 and in the first quarter of 1989-90 on management consultants brought in from outside the National Health Service.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: £192,336 was spent centrally in 1988-89 and £36,595 in the first quarter of 1989-90.

Consultancy Fees

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each health board the amount spent on consultancy fees in the year 1988-89 and the first quarter of 1989-90.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information available from the annual accounts of health boards relates to the total of fees paid to management consultants, to legal firms (other than for legal expenses connected with compensation claims) and to work study consultants. The amounts for each health board for 1988-89 are shown in the table.

| Health Board | 1988-89 £ |
|---|---|
| Argyll and Clyde | 68,429 |
| Ayrshire and Arran | 32,084 |
| Borders | 15,562 |

| Health Board | 1988-89 £ |
|---|---|
| Dumfries and Galloway | 61,258 |
| Fife | 61,810 |
| Forth Valley | 67,789 |
| Grampian | 42,576 |
| Greater Glasgow | 257,258 |
| Highland | 106,072 |
| Lanarkshire | 26,570 |
| Lothian | 172,797 |
| Orkney | 17,499 |
| Shetland | 5,405 |
| Tayside | 14,738 |
| Western Isles | 28,534 |
| Total | 978,381 |

Information relating to the current financial year is not yet available centrally.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each year since 1980 the number of emergency call-outs by the Scottish ambulance service both in absolute terms and as a percentage of the 1980 figure.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is as follows:

| Year | Number of emergency calls | Percentage of 1980 total |
|---|---|---|
| 1980 | 129,201 | 100·0 |
| 1981 | 131,219 | 101·6 |
| 1982 | 132,672 | 102·7 |
| 1983 | 138,229 | 107·0 |
| 1984 | 146,302 | 113·2 |
| 1985 | 145,383 | 112·5 |
| 1986 | 154,018 | 119·2 |
| 1987 | 161,822 | 125·2 |
| 1988 | 165,956 | 128·4 |

WALES

Sewage

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish details of Welsh Water's proposals for investment in sewage treatment works in Rhymney valley necessary to ensure compliance with the relevant European directive; and if he will indicate in respect of each works the projected time scale for completion.

Mr. Grist: There is no European directive concerning the performance of sewage treatment works. However, Welsh Water is engaged upon a programme of improvements to provide for full compliance with discharge consent conditions at poorly performing works.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the precise location of each of the applications for derogation of sewage discharges in Wales advertised by his Department on 21 June; and if he will also list all other derogations currently in force in a similar way.

Mr. Grist: No applications for derogation of sewage discharges in Wales have been advertised by the Department.

Details of the Welsh Water applications for time-limited variations of consent conditions, including the national grid reference of the location of discharge, were advertised by the authority in the London Gazette and Western Mail on 21 June. A copy of the applications may be inspected at the regional rivers division of Welsh Water, St. Mellons, Cardiff.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state for each sewage discharge derogation site currently approved in Wales or currently under consideration by his Department (a) whether he has approved a programme of works to improve the effluent at each specific site, (b) when each programme of work is due to start and finish and (c) to what level each programme of works is designed to improve the effluent at that point of discharge.

Mr. Grist: All Welsh Water sewage treatment works for which applications for time-limited consents have been received are included in a programme of capital improvements designed to ensure future compliance. Details of the consent parameters applied for are included in the detailed applications which are available for inspection at the regional rivers division of Welsh Water at St. Mellons, Cardiff.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what justification for a request for derogation in respect of a sewage discharge has been given to him by Welsh Water in each case where a derogation is in force in Wales or is currently under consideration by his Department.

Mr. Grist: In making an application for a time-limited variation to an existing discharge consent, Welsh Water must satisfactorily define its plans for investment to improve the performance of the works.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what monitoring arrangements he has made in respect of each of the derogations of sewage in force in Wales; and what arrangements he will make for each of those currently under consideration by his Department.

Mr. Grist: There are no derogations of sewage treatment works consent conditions currently in force in the Principality. The water authority is currently responsible for monitoring all its own discharges; subject to enactment of the Water Bill, the National Rivers Authority will assume this duty.

River Pollution

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Pontypridd of 21 June, if he will list the nature and results in terms of judgments and fines, of prosecutions brought against polluters of south Wales rivers over the past 10 years;

(2) pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Pontypridd of 21 June, if he will list the recorded incidents of pollution of the rivers and streams of south Wales over the past 10 years, on a year-by-year basis, including specific dates, locations, effects and, where known, polluters.

Mr. Grist: This is a matter for the Welsh water authority.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Pontypridd of 21 June, how the Government intend to enable the National Rivers Authority to prosecute polluters of Welsh rivers, including those companies which release raw sewage into those rivers, after the privatisation of the water authorities.

Mr. Grist: Under the provisions of the Water Bill the National Rivers Authority will have the power to institute criminal proceedings. How it uses that power will be a matter for the authority.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Pontypridd of 21 June, whether the Government intend to allow the Welsh water authority to continue to discharge raw sewage into Welsh rivers after the privatisation of that company.

Mr. Grist: The consenting of Welsh Water discharges after privatisation will be matter for the National Rivers Authority, subject to enactment of the Water Bill.

Water Supplies

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he has made for monitoring by his Department or on behalf of his Department of derogations of water supplies granted by him under article 9 of the EC drinking water directives 80/778/EEC.

Mr. Grist: Monitoring of the quality of all drinking water supplies within Welsh Water's area is carried out by that authority and regular reports are submitted to the Department.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if there has been any modernisation of Britain's nuclear depth bomb capability since 1980; and if there are any plans in existence or under consideration to modernise this capability.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There has been no modernisation of Britain's nuclear depth bomb capability since 1980. As part of the studies related to modernising United Kingdom tactical nuclear weapons capability, consideration is being given to the replacement of the full spectrum of United Kingdom tactical nuclear weapons, including sea-based systems. However, no decisions have yet been taken.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there has been any increase or decrease in Britain's stockpile of nuclear depth charges since 1980; and whether there is any current consideration of increasing the numbers held.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: For security reasons it is not our policy to comment on the size of the nuclear stockpile. However, it is the policy of the British Government to maintain the stockpile at the minimum level possible to provide a credible, effective deterrent.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there has been any modernisation of Royal Navy helicopters capable of delivering nuclear depth bombs since 1980; and whether there is any current consideration of modernisation of these helicopters.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Nuclear depth bombs would be deployed from Royal Navy ASW helicopters. These helicopters have been modernised in various ways since 1980, and will continue to be modernised as required. Work carried out to date has not been directly related to the helicopters' nuclear weapon delivery capabilities.

Trident Programme

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will publish in the Official Report a list of those parliamentary constituencies which will benefit from contracts as a result of the Trident programme, detailing for each constituency the name of the contractor and the value and general nature of the contract.

Mr. Sainsbury: The information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Royal Ordnance Factory plc

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he makes of the value which would have been put on the Royal Ordnance factory, Blackburn, when the Royal Ordnance Factory plc was sold to British Aerospace if full account had been taken of the factors listed in the recent report by the Comptroller and Auditor General.

Mr. Sainsbury: Our surveyors took full account of all the significant factors relevant to the existing use and alternative use valuations of each site as at the date of the valuation. There are no additional factors mentioned in the Comptroller and Auditor General's report which would have affected the valuations made.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what value was put on the Royal Ordnance factory, Blackburn, when the Royal Ordnance Factory plc was sold to British Aerospace.

Mr. Sainsbury: As with all the sites owned by Royal Ordnance plc, ROF Blackburn was valued on both an existing use and an alternative use basis, as at 31 December 1985. These valuations were £4,400,000 and £400,000 respectively. Only the higher, existing use, valuations were made available to prospective purchasers of Royal Ordnance.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) the potential development value of the site of the Royal Ordnance factory Blackburn, and (b) the proximity of the site to the extension of the M65 motorway to the M6 were included in the value placed upon the factory when Royal Ordnance Factory plc was sold to British Aerospace.

Mr. Sainsbury: All the significant circumstances relevant to the alternative use valuation of ROF Blackburn as at the date of the valuation were taken into account.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Rain Forests

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any new proposals to assist preservation of the Brazilian rain forests.

Mr. Chris Patten: An Overseas Development Administration environmental mission, led by my chief forestry officer and including the director of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, visited Brazil last month to identify proposals for a new programme of environmental assistance to the Brazilian Government, particularly in rain forest conservation. This mission was very successful and has come back with a number of specific proposals for technical co-operation projects in sustainable forest management, genetic resource exploration and conservation, and environmental monitoring which we hope can be finalised within the next few months. I shall make the details available as soon as they are settled. During my own visit to Brazil next week I hope to be able to sign a memorandum of understanding with the Brazilian Government to establish the framework for this new environmental programme. I also hope to visit Amazonia and talk to some of the Brazilian bodies actively involved in trying to protect the rain forest.

ENERGY

Uranium

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what quantities of depleted uranium owned by (a) British Nuclear Fuels Ltd, (b) United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority, and (c) foreign customers are currently stored at Sellafield, Chapelcross and Dounreay sites, respectively.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Stocks of civil depleted uranium held under safeguards and resulting from the reprocessing of civil magnox fuel or the operation of enrichment plants by British Nuclear Fuels plc are held at a number of sites. The total quantities are:

| | Uranium tonnes |
|---|---|
| Sellafield | 100 |
| Chapelcross | 5,000 |
| Dounreay | 50 |

A further 18,400 tonnes u of such material are held at Capenhurst and 6,200 tonnes u at Springfields.

Some 20 per cent. of the stocks held at BNFL sites are owned by BNFL and some 5 per cent. by its overseas customers. The BNFL stocks include some 50 tonnes u owned by the authority. Almost all the material held at Dounreay is owned by the UKAEA.

Electricity Disconnections

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give the number of domestic customer disconnections in 1979 and for the latest date in (a) Wales and (b) each electricity board in England and Wales, and the percentage change in each case.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) on 9 December 1988, at column 377, setting out the total figures for disconnections in each of the years 1979-1980 to 1987-88. The number of disconnections in England and Wales in 1988-89 was 75,230.

Detailed figures for disconnections in each area board are a matter for the electricity supply industry and I have asked the chairman of the Electricity Council to write to the hon. Member with the requested information.

Berkeley Nuclear Power Station

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether, following the removal of fuel at Berkeley nuclear power station, the cores will be vented by atmospheric air throughout the period before final dismantling; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is an operational matter for the Central Electricity Generating Board. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Efficiency Campaign

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what targets he has set for the initial 12 months of his public sector energy efficiency campaign launched in January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Details of the campaign are still under consideration.

Office of Electricity Regulation

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether the office of electricity regulation staff is to be restricted entirely to personnel from the Department of Energy, and the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No.

Hinkley C (Inquiry)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when a witness from his Department is next expected to appear at the Hinkley C nuclear public inquiry; how many support officials will accompany the witness; on what topic he will give evidence; and whether the witness will be permitted to answer questions on the merits of Government policy.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Department's official witness will return to the inquiry, at the inspector's request, on 20 July to give further evidence on the progress of the Electricity Bill and any other developments in Government policy relevant to the inquiry since the date of his previous appearance. He will be supported by other officials from the Department as necessary. As I told the hon. Member on 27 October 1988, at column 318, it is not customary for an official representative of a Government Department to answer questions as to the merits of Government policy and I continue to see no reason for the Department's witness to do so.

Public Relations

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy which public relations firms his Department has employed and at what cost, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Parkinson: Apart from the special circumstances of privatisation work, the consistent practice of successive Governments has been to avoid the use of public relations firms or other companies outside Government for public relations work.

My Department has used the following companies in connection with privatisation:

Charles Barker in 1982 for Britoil
Streets Financial in 1983 for Enterprise Oil

Dewe Rogerson in 1985 for British Gas.

In addition, I appointed Lowe Bell Communications in 1988, jointly with the area boards, and Valin Pollen International in 1989, jointly with the CEGB, to draw up marketing strategies for the offers for sale of the electricity distribution companies and generating companies respectively.

The amounts paid are commercially confidential.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cambodia

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress of the United Kingdom's participation in efforts to secure a peaceful and democratic future for Cambodia.

Mr. Eggar: Both through bilateral contacts and through multilateral action in the United Nations' Security Council, and in the run-up to the Paris international conference in August, we are playing our full part in the search for a peaceful and durable settlement to the conflict in Cambodia.

China

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date he has had discussions with the ambassador of the People's Republic of China, with regard to the recent troubles in China and their implications for United Kingdom students in China; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Christchurch (Mr. Adley) on 16 June, at column 560.

Turks and Caicos Government

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Ministers in the Turks and Caicos Government have been convicted of drug offences or corruption since 1984.

Mr. Eggar: Three Turks and Caicos Ministers were convicted on drugs charges in the United States of America in 1985.

There have been no further convictions since we suspended ministerial government in the Turks and Caicos Islands in 1986. A new constitution came into effect with the return of ministerial government in March 1988.

Western European Union

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he is satisfied with the availability of Western European Union documents to hon. Members in view of the process of reactivation.

Mr. Waldegrave: Given the limitations imposed by the fact that most documents produced by the Council of the Western European Union are classified, I am satisfied with their availability to hon. Members. Documents produced by the Assembly of the Western European Union are distributed to all Members of the British delegation to the Assembly, who have not so far asked that they be made more widely available.

Antarctic Treaty

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his latest discussions with the United Kingdom's co-signatories to the Antarctic treaty.

Mr. Eggar: The Antarctic treaty consultative parties met in Paris in May in preparation for the XV Antarctic treaty consultative meeting in October. A full agenda for the ATCM was provisionally adopted. Items for discussion will include comprehensive measures for the protection of the Antarctic environment, marine pollution, promotion of international scientific co-operation, Antarctic tourism, charting of Antarctic waters, and air safety.

Rain Forests

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his discussions with Sir Peter Walters, chairman of BP about their mining operation in the Brazilian rain forest.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) of 26 June, at column 287. My officials are in contact with BP on this issue.

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Government are taking to stop (a) BP and (b) other British companies contributing to the destruction of rain forests around the world.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development will be visiting Brazil including the Amazon region from 4-9 July. During his visit he will be discussing with Brazilian Ministers and officials our efforts to identify effective ways of helping them with a wide range of environmental problems including rainforest conservation. He will also be meeting representatives of British companies operating in Brazil with whom he hopes to discuss their role in environmental protection.

The hon. Member will be aware of recent media reports alleging involvement by United Kingdom companies in rain forest destruction. We are studying these, but I understand that the companies, including BP, claim that these press reports contain important errors of fact, and that they themselves operate significant environmental protection programmes in their projects in Brazil.

More generally, Britain is a leading supporter of the tropical forestry action plan and the International Tropical Timber Organisation which aim to help countries conserve their forests and manage them sustainably.

Universal Postal Union

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of his officials will attend the congress of the Universal Postal Union in Washington DC in the current year; and what percentage of these would normally be employed in Her Britannic Majesty's embassy at Washington DC.

Mr. Eggar: The British delegation will consist largely of officials from the Department of Trade and Industry and the Post Office. It is anticipated that there will be one representative from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London. As this is a major international conference taking place in Washington, we expect that there will be some involvement on the part of embassy staff, depending on requirements as they arise.

Human Rights

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights and the use of torture in the last five years in China.

Mr. Eggar: We have made a number of representations about human rights to the Chinese authorities over the last five years, but the precise information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights and the use of torture in the last five years in Brazil.

Mr. Eggar: In November 1988 I discussed allegations in Amnesty International's report entitled "Brazil, Authorized Violence in Rural Areas" with the then Brazilian Justice Minister. I refer to the answer given on this subject by my hon. Friend the Minister of State to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent North (Ms. Walley) on 21 April 1989, at column 313-14.

We have not otherwise made any representations to the Brazilians on human rights since democracy was restored in 1985.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights and the use of torture in the last five years in the United States of America.

Mr. Eggar: None.

EC Directives

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement setting out the powers which are available to member states if they consider that the Commission has presented directives which are outside the competence of the Commission and the Community, or if the directive is presented on the basis of majority voting without good reasons; and if he will list the occasions on which Her Majesty's Government have made use of these powers.

Mr. Eggar: Proposals requiring unanimity may be defeated by a single vote against. Those requiring a qualified majority may be defeated by a blocking minority of 23 votes, or amended by unanimity. In addition, member states may challenge measures, after adoption, in the European Court of Justice. The United Kingdom has challenged the Council in the court over treaty base issues for hormone growth producers in animals (1986); minimum standards for battery hens (1986); youth training (1988) and COMETT II (1989).

EC Social Charter

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether it is the United Kingdoms Government's intention to accept in the future any of the articles of the Council of Europe's social charter which currently rejects articles 2(1), 4(3), 7(1), 7(4), 7(7), 8(2), 12(2), 12(3) and 12(4).

Mr. Cope: I have been asked to reply.

At the present time the Government have no plans to accept articles 2(1), 4(3), 7(1), 7(4), 7(7), 8(2), 12(2), 12(3) and 12(4) of the Council of Europe's European social charter. However, the situation is kept under review.

Programmes and Schemes (Finance)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in the Official Report all those programmes or schemes for research, development, co-operation or exchange of information on associated activity for which financial provision is made within the current budget of the European Economic Community, listed under the relevant Department of the United Kingdom Government with official title, or where allocated, an acronym, and showing for each project the date of its inception, the authorisation and amounts of funding and the principal participants or beneficiaries within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 6 June 1989]: I have been asked to reply.

The Community's 1987-91 framework programme for research and development covers several areas of R and D. The Cabinet Office is responsible for overall co-ordination of the United Kingdom's interests in the framework programme, while individual Departments are responsible for United Kingdom interest in specific sub-programmes. I represent Her Majesty's Government at meetings of the Community Council of Ministers (Research) at which the implementation of the framework programme is agreed. A wide range of research co-operation, exchanges of information and associated activity also takes place outside the framework programme. The information requested is therefore not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

A breakdown of R and D programmes within the framework programme is as follows. Of the programmes listed, seven (radiation protection, FLAIR, MAST, DOSES, MONITOR, VALUE and an extension to EUROTRA) were adopted at the most recent Research Council on 20 June. The Council also adopted common positions on a further four programmes (which will probably be formally adopted before the end of the year):

—STEP (science and technology for environmental protection) and EPOCH (European programme on climatology and natural hazards) are two programmes intended to improve the scientific base of environmental policy. Over a period of four years STEP will receive funding of 75 million ecu (£50 million) and EPOCH 40 million ecu (£27 million).

—BRIDGE (biotechnology research for innovation, development and growth in Europe) will receive Community funding of 100 million ecu (£67 million) over four years

—The research and technological development programme in the field of raw materials and recycling will receive Community funding of 45 million ecu (£30 million) over three years.

The Research Council also adopted a resolution reaffirming its support for the COST framework for European collaboration in R and D involving both EC and non-EC countries, and held a preliminary policy debate on the mid-term review of the 1987-91 framework programme.

| Name of Programme | United Kingdom lead Department | Duration of programme | Authorisation | Community Funding |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Medical and Health Research | Department of Health | 1987-1991 | Council Decision 17 November 1987 | 65 million ecu (£43 million) |
| Radiation Protection | Department of Health | 1990-1991 | Council Decision 20 June 1989 | 21·2 million ecu (£14 million) |
| ESPRIT II (European Strategic Programme for Research and Development in Information Technologies) | Department of Trade and Industry | 1987-1992 | Council Decision 11 April 1988 | 1,600 million ecu (£1,067 million) |
| RACE (Research and Development in Advanced Communications technologies in Europe) | Department of Trade and Industry | 1987-1992 | Council Decision 14 December 1987 | 550 million ecu (£367 million) |
| DELTA (Development of European Learning through Technological Advance) | Department of Employment | 1988-1990 | Council Decision 29 June 1988 | 20 million ecu (£13 million) |
| DRIVE (Dedicated Road Infrastructure for Vehicle safety in Europe) | Department of Transport | 1988-1991 | Council Decision 29 June 1988 | 60 million ecu (£40 Million) |
| AIM (Advanced Informatics in Medicine in Europe) | Department of Health | 1988-1990 | Council Decision 4 November 1988 | 20 million ecu (£13 million) |
| BRITE/EURAM (Basic Research in Industrial Technology/Advanced Materials) | Department of Trade and Industry | 1989-1992 | Council Decision 15 December 1988 | 499 million ecu (£333 million) |
| BCR (Community Bureau of Reference) | Department of Trade and Industry | 1988-1992 | Council Decision 29 June 1988 | 59·2 million ecu (£39·5 million) |
| ECLAIR (European Collaborative Linkage of Agriculture and Industry through Research) | Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food | 1988-1993 | Council Decision 23 February 1989 | 80 million ecu (£53 million) |
| FLAIR (Food linked agro-industrial research) | Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food | 1989-1993 | Council Decision 20 June 1989 | 25 million ecu (£17 Million) |
| Controlled Thermonuclear fusion —JET and general programme | Department of Energy | 1988-1992 | Council Decision 25 July 1988 | 735 million ecu (£490 million) |
| Joint Research Centre's programme of activities for 1988-1991 (covering Quality of Life, modernisation of industrial sectors and energy) | Cabinet Office | 1988-1991 | Council Decisions 29 October 1988 | 700 million ecu (£467 million) |
| JOULE (Joint Opportunities for Unconventional or Long-Term Energy supply) | Department of Energy | 1989-1992 | Council Decision 15 December 1987 | 122 million ecu (£81 million) |
| Science and Technology for Development | Overseas Development Administration | 1987-1991 | Council Decision 14 December 1987 | 80 million ecu (£53 million) |
| Fisheries programme | Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food | 1988-1992 | Council Decision 19 December 1987 | 30 million ecu (£20 million) |
| SCIENCE (Co-operation and exchanges between scientists and laboratories) | Department of Education and Science | 1988-1992 | Council Decision 29 June 1988 | 167 million ecu (£111 million) |
| SPES (Stimulation Plan for Economic Science) | Department of Education and Science | 1989-1992 | Council Decision 17 November 1988 | 6 million ecu (£4 million) |
| Large Scale Scientific Facilities (Community support plan to facilitate access to large-scale scientific facilities of European interest) | Department of Education and Science | 1988-1992 | Council Decision 14 March 1989 | 30 million ecu (£20 million) |
| MONITOR (strategic analysis, forcasting and evaluation in science and technology) | Department of Trade and Industry | 1988-1992 | Council Decision 20 June 1989 | 22 million ecu (£15 million) |
| Extension to EUROTRA (machine translation system) | Department of Trade and Industry | 1989-1990 | Council Decision 20 June 1989 | 7 million ecu (£4·6 million) |
| DOSES (Development of Statistical Expert systems) | Department of Trade and Industry | 1989-1992 | Council Decision 20 June 1989 | 4 million ecu (£2·6 million) |
| VALUE (dissemination and utilisation of S & T results) | Department of Trade and Industry | 1989-1992 | Council Decision 20 June 1989 | 38 million ecu (£25 million) |

HOME DEPARTMENT

Road Traffic Law Review

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research projects have been initiated by his Department in line with the recommendations in the road traffic law review which he accepted.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Home Office is undertaking a study of how traffic policing resources are organised and targeted. We hope to undertake a research project on the level of driving while disqualified later this year or early next year.

Public Relations

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which public relations firms his Department has employed and at what cost, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None.

"The Satanic Verses"

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is satisfied that members of the Iranian embassy are not involved in financing or assisting in any way organised violence connected with the campaign centred on the book "The Satanic Verses"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: Iran closed its embassy in London and withdrew all its diplomats on 28 February 1989 at the Government's request, following the threats issued by the Iranian leadership to the lives of Mr. Salmon Rushdie and his publishers. The Government have made it plain that the promotion of organised violence in the United Kingdom will not be tolerated, and all necessary measures will continue to be taken against it.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask for a report from the chief constable of West Yorkshire police on the rioting during and following a meeting organised by the Council of Mosques in Bradford on Saturday 17 June, and in particular whether any Iranian students were involved on an organised basis in the disruption, and the level of policing available from the start of the meeting at 11 am, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand from the chief constable of West Yorkshire police that around 3,000 Moslems, including, it is believed, a small number of Iranian students, took part in the demonstration. The organisers and stewards co-operated fully with the police and the meeting itself was conducted in an orderly manner. After the meeting some 200 youths ran through the centre of Bradford jostling bystanders and causing some damage to cars and other property. A small number of police officers and members of the public were hurt. At the meeting there were initially six officers present with larger numbers in reserve nearby. During the disturbances lasting around 90 minutes some 200 police officers were deployed.

Blasphemy

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now introduce legislation to repeal the law relating to blasphemy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: We have no plans to change the law on blasphemy.

Cocaine

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many samples of freebase cocaine or crack have been submitted to the forensic science laboratories and the laboratory of the Government chemist in each of the last three years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In 1986, 1987 and 1988 there were zero, five and 15 samples confirmed as crack submitted to these laboratories. A further 12 samples have been confirmed as crack in the first five months of this year. In addition over the same three-year period five, seven and 13 samples had features of crack with a further 10 identified this year.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what in each of the last three years for which figures are available, have been the number of deaths in which cocaine in any form has been a cause or contributory factor.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Home Office collects information on the deaths by overdose of drug misusers. The number of such deaths in which cocaine in any form was recorded as a cause or contributory factor in the three years to 31 December 1987, the latest for which figures are available, is given in the following table:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 1985 | 1 |
| 1986 | 7 |
| 1987 | 9 |

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will place a document in the Library listing by name all the medical and scientific authorities on whom he relies for his statements about the harmful effects of crack, the smokeable, base-form of cocaine.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: "Drug Misuse—a basic briefing" prepared by the Institute for the Study of Drug Dependency includes, among the harmful effects of cocaine, the following: misusers may develop a strong psychological dependence; misuse can lead to an extreme state of agitation, anxiety, paranoia and perhaps hallucination; continued misuse may cause a state of mind similar to paranoid psychosis; although rare, excessive doses can cause death from respiratory or heart failure. It also states that smoking cocaine is a more potent method of administration than "snorting" and that the effects are felt more immediately. I am placing a copy of the booklet in the Library.

Cocaine smoked in the form of crack is a recent phenomenon, but experience from the United States suggests that because crack acts more rapidly it poses a much greater risk of addiction. The ministerial group on the misuse of drugs has instituted a review of the available medical and scientific literature on the effects of crack.

EC Social Charter

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek to establish from the European Commission whether the directive on the harmonisation of conditions of residence, as proposed in the Community "Charter for Fundamental Social Rights" Com. 89-248-final, will fall to be presented to the Council on the basis of majority voting.

Mr. Renton: The voting arrangements for a particular proposal depend on the substance of the proposal and on the specific article(s) of the treaty of Rome, as amended by the Single European Act, appropriate to this. Until a draft proposal is agreed by the Commission it is not possible to know on which article the Commission will be basing its proposals.

Police Complaints Authority

Mr. Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has reached his decisions on the recommendations contained in the report of the Police Complaints Authority "Triennial Review 1985-1988.

Mr. Hurd: Yes. I announced on 14 November 1988 that a consultation document on the recommendations was being sent to the police representative bodies, the local authority associations, the Director of Public Prosecutions and the Police Complaints Authority. The document was also being made available to anyone else on request. I have given further consideration to the recommendations in the light of the comments received.

I have decided to accept 11 of the authority's recommendations in whole or in part.

Of these 11 recommendations, three have been or will be dealt with by administrative action by my Department as follows:

I intend that recommendation (4) should be met by making available to the authority information which chief officers currently supply to Her Majesty's chief inspectorate of constabulary.

I have accepted the following recommendations which will be implemented by amendments to regulations. I have asked my officials to bring forward the necessary amendments as quickly as possible.

(3) that "complaint . . . about the conduct" should be enlarged to embrace all such matters arising out of or in the course of the incident complained of as the authority may determine by investigation or otherwise (paragraph 1.8);

(4) that chief officers be under an obligation to provide us with such information on the informal resolution procedure as we may reasonably require to enable us to fulfil the mandate of section 97(4) (paragraph 1.14);

(7) that the police authority be required to deal with complaints against senior officers through a small disciplinary sub-committee, enjoined to a proper judicial approach to the task (paragraph 1.26).

(5) That the words "or informally resolved" should be added to those conditions necessary for dispensation under regulation 3 on the ground that the complaint is repetitious (paragraph 1.17);

(15) that the authority be given an equivalent discretionary power and propose that it be done by way of amendment of the Police (Anonymous, Repetitious Etc. Complaints) Regulations 1985, to include words such as "or vexatious, oppressive, or an abuse of the complaints system" in the description of complaints for which we can grant a dispensation from investigation (paragraph 2.29);

(16) that there should be a time limit of 12 months from the date of the incident, or the latest incident, giving rise to the complaint within which to bring it to notice. There should be the usual safeguard to enable us to exercise discretion to extend the time limit where good reason for delay is shown and no injustice is likely to be caused (paragraph 2.30).

It will not be possible to give direct effect to the third of these recommendations by regulation. But I intend to bring forward amendments to regulations which will achieve the purpose sought by the authority.

I have also accepted five recommendations for action at the next legislative opportunity.

(9) That the language of sections 90 and 92 be amended to make it clear beyond doubt what is intended (paragraph 1.41);

(10) that the Act be amended to enable the authority to give its reasons for preferring charges at the stage of recommendations, when the chief officer must be consulted (paragraph 1.42);

(11) that an alternative composition of a disciplinary tribunal should be considered (paragraph 1.45);

(13a) that section 98 be restructured so as to provide: that the authority has discretion to publish such information as is reasonably necessary to inform the public of the outcome of investigations, without derogation from the principle of confidentiality between the authority, complainants and those who provide information (paragraph 2.11);

(17) that the authority be granted a discretion to dispense with supervision in cases where it is satisfied on proper evidence that the injury sustained is minor, notwithstanding the definition in section 87(4), whether this is apparent from the start or becomes so only in the course of the investigation (paragraph 2.31).

The purpose of the first two of these recommendations will be achieved by administrative action pending legislation.

I propose to review the case for the following two recommendations when next contemplating legislation on the complaints procedures.

(1) That there should be a definition of complaint in the Act which distinguishes between categories of complaint (paragraph 1.5);

(6) that the authority should be able to satisfy itself in suitable cases that a complaint has been withdrawn by an entirely voluntary and well-informed consent (paragraph 1.17).

I have asked my officials to hold further discussions with the Police Complaints Authority and the police on two recommendations before I come to a final decision:

(12) That steps be taken, perhaps by regulation, to lay down a time scale within which the various procedures necessary to bring about a disciplinary hearing are to be completed (paragraph 1.47);

(13b) that section 98 be restructured so as to provide: that chief officers be restricted in the use of their copy of a report of a supervised investigation, to the purpose for which they receive their copy under the Act and that they publish no part of it (paragraph 2.11).

I have decided not to accept four of the authority's recommendations:

(2) That the last word about recording or de-recording a complaint should be with the independent authority rather than with the police (paragraph 1.6)

(8) that the powers described in section 88 of the Act should be extended to the authority in those cases where it appears to them that by reason of their gravity or exceptional circumstances the investigations should be supervised even if there is no complaint (paragraph 1.34);

(14) that we ought to have the right to exercise the power to require the production of documents in our own name, which right is at present in doubt (paragraph 2.15);

(18) that all incidents in the course of which a firearm is discharged, whether accidentally or deliberately, should be mandatorily referable to us. This would enable there to be an independent presence at the examination of the circumstances surrounding those incidents which understandably give rise to public anxiety (paragraph 2.33).

Finally, I have noted the authority's comment that the question of a lower level of summary disciplinary hearings is worthy of further discussion (paragraph 3.20).

I have been heartened by the positive response to the consultation document on the authority's recommendations and I am satisfied that the action I have outlined above will further enhance the operation of the procedures for dealing with complaints against the police.

Summer Time

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the consultation document on summer time arrangements is to be published.

Mr. Hurd: A Green Paper entitled 'Summer Time—A Consultation Document', Cm. 722, is published by HMSO today. The document seeks views on three options for future summer time arrangements with a closing date for responses of 29 September 1989.

Fixed Penalties

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to review the operation of the extended fixed penalty system introduced on 1 October 1986 under the provisions of part III of the Transport Act 1982, now part III of the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: A working group comprising representatives of the Home Office, Department of Transport, the police service and the courts was formed early in 1988 to review the operation of the extended penalty system. I have received its report, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

The report concludes that the new procedures are broadly meeting their objectives which were:

(i) to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of road traffic law enforcement;
(ii) to improve police-public relations in road traffic encounters;
(iii) to reduce the burden of prosecution for the police, the Crown prosecution service and the courts; and
(iv) to improve the level of compliance as compared with the previous fixed penalty system.

The working group has, however, identified a number of areas where some "fine tuning" is required.

While the extension of the fixed penalty system to a far wider range of less serious road traffic offences has produced a substantial drop in the number of court proceedings, there has been a significant increase in the numbers of fixed penalty notices issued. This has placed a considerable burden on the courts and the police in registering and enforcing unpaid fixed penalties.

The new arrangements whereby unpaid fixed penalties are enhanced by 50 per cent. and registered and enforced as fines has led to some improvement in early payment rates, particularly in London where, under the previous system, the problem of unpaid fixed penalties was most acute. However, there is still scope for improvement and the working group has identified a number of administrative measures to reduce the number of cases reaching the fine enforcement stage and, for those which do, to ensure that fine recovery is achieved as effectively and efficiently as possible.

The working group recommends that the fixed penalty levels should be increased. The levels were set in 1986 at £12 for non-endorsable offences and £24 for endorsable offences. The report recommends that these should be increased to £15 and £30 respectively with effect from 1 January 1990. As required by section 88 of the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988, I shall be consulting representative organisations about these proposed increases. I shall also be seeking views about those of the working group's other recommendations which would involve primary legislation.

War Crimes

Mr. Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has yet received the report of the war crimes inquiry; and whether he intends to publish it.

Mr. Hurd: I have received the inquiry's report. I am examining it, first with a view to publication subject to the need to avoid prejudicing the position of individuals or any proceedings which might take place.

EMPLOYMENT

Jobcentres and Benefit Offices

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the progress of pilot schemes for integration between jobcentres and unemployment benefit offices.

Mr. Lee: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 10 May, at column 441.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the changes in the planned figures for his Department's expenditure for 1989-90 and subsequent years in Cm. 607 from the plans for those years in Cm. 288; and for what reasons.

Mr. Cope: The plans for the years 1989-90 and 1990-91 in Cm. 607 show a decrease of £232 million and £340 million respectively from the plans in Cm. 288. This was mainly because the rapid growth in the economy and fall in unemployment allowed a decrease in planned expenditure on employment and training programmes.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the reasons for any differences between the 1988-89 public expenditure plans for his Department published in Cm. 288 and the latest 1988-89 estimated outturn; and how much of any increase is attributable to use of the Reserve.

Mr. Cope: The estimated outturn for 1988-89 is 22 per cent. lower than the 1988-89 public expenditure plans published in Cm. 288. This is due mainly to training volumes being lower than planned for adult and youth training because of the rapid growth of the economy and decrease in unemployment.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what new commitments have been undertaken which will involve spending by his Department after 1991-92 since the publication of Cm. 288.

Mr. Cope: Since the publication of Cm. 288 the Department has entered into the following new commitments which will involve spending in the years after 1991-92: Employment training, business growth training, training and enterprise councils, compacts, enterprise in higher education and Seville expo 92. In addition, as announced in the Official Report, 27 October 1988, column 318, from 1 April 1990 the Health and Safety Commission will take over the Department of Energy's responsibility for contracting research programmes related to the safety of established thermal nuclear power stations.

Social Fund

Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the guidelines for programmes under the European social fund for the next three years will be available to local authorities.

Mr. Cope: The European Commission published its guidelines concerning European social fund intervention in respect of action against long-term unemployment and occupational integration of young people in the Official Journal of the European Communities on 24 February 1989. My Department circulated these guidelines, the new European social fund regulations and its own guidance to all past fund applicants and representatives of the local authority associations on 11 April 1989. My Department also circulated to them on 21 June 1989 its own guidance on how to complete the European Commission's form for operational programmes, "Application For Assistance From The European Social Fund".

Labour Statistics

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number of unfilled vacancies and the unemployment figure in Doncaster and Mexborough, for April of each year from 1979 to 1989.

Mr. Lee: The following is the available information, which is also in the Library. The table shows the number of unfilled vacancies at jobcentres covering the area most closely corresponding to the Doncaster travel-to-work area, together with the number of unemployed claimants in the Doncaster travel-to-work area, for April of each year from 1984 to 1989. Unemployment figures are affected by changes in the coverage of the count. Corresponding figures for 1979 to 1983 are not available.

Unemployment and unfilled vacancies in Doncaster travel-to-work area for April 1984 to 1989

| | Number of unemployed claimants | Number of unfilled vacancies |
|---|---|---|
| 1984 | 18,555 | [1]156 |
| 1985 | 19,575 | [1]128 |
| 1986 | 21,897 | 178 |
| 1987 | 20,692 | 352 |
| 1988 | 17,491 | 382 |
| 1989 | 13,327 | 462 |

[1] Number of unfilled vacancies given are for the month of March as April data are not available.

Training

Mr. Leadbitter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the training schemes sponsored by his Department, the total numbers targeted for those schemes, the actual numbers attending, the costs, and the payments made to trainees in each of the last five years.

Mr. Lee: Figures for total numbers targeted and payments made to trainees can be calculated only at disproportionate cost.

The following table shows the numbers of people in Great Britain who started on an adult or youth training scheme, sponsored by the Training Agency (formerly Training Commission, formerly Manpower Services Commission), for each year from 1984-85 to 1988-89 and the cost.

| F[Y ended March | Adult Training (000's) | Cost £ million | YTS (000's) | Cost £ million |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1985 | 183 | 265·2 | 397 | 780·7 |
| 1986 | 328 | 261·9 | 406 | 809·8 |
| 1987 | 534 | 302·8 | 420 | 861·0 |
| 1988 | 619 | 341·5 | 398 | 991·0 |
| [1]1989 | 640 | 626·3 | 397 | 993·8 |

[1] Starts for 1988-89 are subject to revision and costs figures have not been audited.

Skilled Labour

Mr. Leadbitter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what response he has made to the Confederation of British Industry industrial trends survey suggesting a shortage of skilled labour;

(2) what response he has made to the survey published by the Institute of Directors suggesting nearly half the companies questioned said it had become more difficult to recruit skilled employees.

Mr. Cope: I am aware of the results of these surveys. The Government are continuing to encourage employers to define and tackle their own skill needs particularly through the introduction of training and enterprise councils and business growth training. The Government are also helping young people and the unemployed to learn new skills through YTS and employment training.

EC Social Charter

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will seek to establish from the European Commission whether the directives on a minimum wage, on trade union rights, on employee participation and on holiday entitlement and rest period for part time workers as proposed in the "Community charter for fundamental social rights" Com. 89-248-final, will fall to be presented to the Council on the basis of majority voting.

Mr. Cope: The voting arrangements for a particular proposal depend on the substance of the proposal and on the specific article(s) of the Treaty of Rome, as amended by the Single European Act, appropriate to this. Until a draft proposal is agreed by the Commission it is not possible to know on which article the Commission will be basing its proposals.

Council for Social Aid, Manchester

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much public money from the Training Agency has been given to the Council for Social Aid, Manchester, and on what dates.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 26 June 1989]: Money advanced by the Training Agency to the Council for Social Aid was in accordance with the terms of the council's contract with the Training Agency. The precise terms of this contract are confidential to the parties involved.

Health and Safety (Sunderland)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the companies in Sunderland recently served with enforcement notices by the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 26 June 1989]: Information on enforcement notices is not published except in the minority of cases where notices have implications for the safety of the public and details of these are available at the Health and Safety Executive's local area offices.

PRIME MINISTER

Disabled People

Q16. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Prime Minister when she expects to meet Mencap and other organisations representing the disabled to discuss the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 and its implementation; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has no plans to do so. the implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

Heavy Commercial Vehicles

Q18. Mr. Alexander: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the use of heavy commercial vehicles.

Q144. Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the use of heavy commercial vehicles.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has received about a dozen such representations this year. They have concerned a variety of subjects, such as general environmental and safety issues, accidents involving dangerous goods, improved facilities for lorry drivers, and the possibility of transferring freight from road on to rail.

Hong Kong

Q24. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the people of Hong Kong.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has received many representations about Hong Kong following the recent appalling events in China. My right hon. Friend met Dame Lydia Dunn, Senior Member of the Executive Council and Mr. Allan Lee, Senior Member of the Legislative Council on 23 June. She listend to their concerns and reaffirmed the Government's determination to work for a secure and prosperous future for Hong Kong, as provided for in the Sino-British joint declaration.

Whales

Q28. Dr. Godman: To ask the Prime Minister if, in the light of the recommendations made at the 41st annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission which took place in San Diego, California, from 12 June to 16 June 1989, Her Majesty's Government will recommend to the European Commission that concerted action be taken against those nations which continue to slaughter whales and which claim that they need to acquire dead whales for research purposes.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

The European Community does not have any competence on whaling matters. Those member states with an interest in whaling are already members of the International Whaling Commission and we consult them in that relevant forum. At its recent annual meeting the IWC adopted resolutions which were jointly sponsored by the United Kingdom, calling upon Japan, Norway and Iceland to reconsider their whaling research plans.

Economic and Monetary Union

Q41. Mr. Cash: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the disadvantage of economic and monetary union in the European Economic Community.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has received a number of representations on this subject.

Malpas, Newport

Q65. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if she is planning to visit the Malpas area of Newport, Gwent.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has at present no plans to do so.

British Medical Association

Q103. Mr. Favell: To ask the Prime Minister if she has had any recent representations from the British Medical Association.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has received a copy of a letter which I understand has been sent to all right hon. and hon. Members.

Higher Education

Q138. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding higher education.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister receives many representations on education matters, including the Government's policies for higher education, which have helped secure a 27 per cent. increase in student numbers over the last decade.

Unleaded Petrol

Q140. Mr. Page: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding unleaded petrol.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

Yes, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has received many representations about unleaded petrol.

The Government have taken many steps to promote unleaded petrol. We played a major role in securing agreement in 1985 for the future introduction of unleaded petrol within the European Community. The unleaded petrol directive requires that member states should ensure the availability and balanced distribution of the fuel by October of this year. Regulations have been adopted which will require all new cars on sale in the United Kingdom to run on the fuel by October of next year.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has progressively increased the duty differential in favour of unleaded petrol over a three-year period and this has resulted in the fuel being now on sale about 10p a gallon cheaper at the pumps than 4-star leaded petrol. A successful Government-funded advertising campaign was shown on television during April to motivate motorists to have their cars adjusted and to use the fuel. Numerous other initiatives have been implemented with considerable assistance offered by the private sector. The Motability lead-free campaign has been very successful in obtaining support from major companies to promote the fuel.

The success of these measures can now be seen in the rapid uptake of the fuel, which is now accounting for over 19 per cent. of the market. Unleaded petrol is readily available; at least 50 per cent. of petrol stations now stock it.

Mr. Lech Walesa

Q119. Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister if, in view of the election results in Poland on 4 June, she will now extend an official invitation to visit the United Kingdom to Mr. Lech Walesa.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

Mr. Walesa already has an official invitation to visit the United Kingdom. We hope he will take it up as soon as possible. Meanwhile, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister saw another Solidarity leader, Professor Geremek, when he was in London last week at our invitation.

Postal Services

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Prime Minister whether, pursuant to her reply to the hon. Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall), Official Report, 6 June, column 15, she will make a further statement on the postal monopoly and competition.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

I have nothing to add to the reply that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) on 6 June, at column 15.

Rain Forests

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Prime Minister what action will she take in order to stop the destruction of the rain forests in the Brazilian national park by BP; and if she will take steps to oblige BP to reforest the 250,000 acres it has destroyed.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development will be visiting Brazil, including the Amazon, from 4-9 July. During his visit he will be discussing with Brazilian Ministers and officials our efforts to identify effective ways of helping them with a wide range of environmental problems including rain forest conservation. He will also be meeting representatives of British companies operating in Brazil, with whom he hopes to discuss their role in environmental protection.

The hon. Member will be aware of recent media reports alleging involvement by United Kingdom companies in rain forest destruction. We are studying these, but I understand that the companies, including BP, claim that these press reports contain important errors of fact.

More generally, Britain is a leading supporter of the tropical forestry action plan and the International Tropical Timber Organisation, which aim to help countries conserve their forests and manage them sustainably.

EC Social Charter

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she intends to sign the Community "Charter for Fundamental Social Rights", Com. 89-248-final, at the Madrid meeting of the European Council.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister will make a statement in due course.

Engagements

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 27 June.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 27 June.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 27 June.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 27 June.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 27 June.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 27 June.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 27 June.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 27 June.

Mr. Wakeham: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister is attending the European Council in Madrid.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Public Relations

Mr. Blair: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which public relations firms his Department has employed, and at what cost, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Forth: Apart from the special circumstances of privatisation work, the consistent practice of successive Governments has been to avoid the use of public relations or other firms for public relations work. The following firms were retained to advise on privatisations:

Charles Barker Lyons, 1981
Dewe Rogerson, 1984 and 1988
Streets Financial, 1985
Valin Pollen, 1986

Details of such contracts, including their cost, are commercially confidential.

Television Advertising

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the total cost of the television advertising campaign on the enterprise initiative; and what is the cost expressed in terms of expenditure for each successful application received.

Mr. Forth: Expenditure on television advertising for the Enterprise Initiative since January 1988 has been about £13 million. Up to 2 June 1989, over 26,500 firms had successfully applied for assisted EI consultancies. It is not appropriate, however, to express one in terms of the other since the advertising has been concerned with the Enterprise Initiative as a whole and not just the six EI consultancy initiatives.

Steel Industry

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what is the total employment in the steel industry for every year since 1959 in the United Kingdom;

(2) what is the total steel production in million tonnes for every year since 1959 in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Atkins: The information is as follows:

Steel Production and Employment in the United Kingdom

| Year | Crude steel (million tonnes) | Employment (thousands, end year) |
|---|---|---|
| 1959 | 20·5 | n.a. |
| 1960 | 24·7 | n.a. |
| 1961 | 22·4 | n.a. |
| 1962 | 20·8 | n.a. |
| 1963 | 22·9 | n.a. |
| 1964 | 26·6 | n.a. |
| 1965 | 27·4 | n.a. |
| 1966 | 24·7 | n.a. |
| 1967 | 24·3 | n.a. |
| 1968 | 26·3 | n.a. |
| 1969 | 26·8 | n.a. |
| 1970 | 28·3 | n.a. |
| 1971 | 24·2 | n.a. |
| 1972 | 25·3 | n.a. |
| 1973 | 26·6 | 198·5 |
| 1974 | 22·3 | 196·9 |
| 1975 | 20·1 | 184·4 |
| 1976 | 22·3 | 182·3 |
| 1977 | 20·4 | 178·9 |
| 1978 | 20·3 | 165·4 |
| 1979 | 21·5 | 156·6 |
| 1980 | 11·3 | 112·1 |
| 1981 | 15·6 | 88·2 |
| 1982 | 13·7 | 74·5 |
| 1983 | 15·0 | 63·7 |
| 1984 | 15·1 | 61·9 |
| 1985 | 15·7 | 59·0 |
| 1986 | 14·7 | 55·9 |
| 1987 | 17·4 | 54·9 |
| 1988 | 19·0 | 55·1 |

Postal Services

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he has received a copy of the Post Office's reply to the couriers' complaint to the European Commission about anti-competitive postal practices; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will discuss with the European Commission the complaint by the courier services about remail;

(3) what discussions his Department has had with the European Commission about the formal complaint made by private courier services about anti-competitive practices by postal administrations; and if he will raise the matter in future discussions.

Mr. Forth: The question of the couriers' complaint is a matter between the European Commission and the postal administrations concerned, in our case the Post Office. I have not received a copy.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has received the CEPT working party's proposal for a European postal monopoly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: No. As far as I am aware, no such proposal exists although many postal administrations have argued that they need some form of monopoly to support the cost of their social obligations.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list in the Official Report (a) all overseas visits made in 1988 and 1989 by officials in his Department in connection with the ITU, CEPT and UPU, (b) the cost of each visit, (c) the length of each visit, (d) the purpose of each visit and (e) the number and duration of visits which are planned in the current financial year.

Mr. Forth: This information is not readily available and could be assembled only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will refer the Post Office letter post service to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Forth: No.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what discussions he has had with officials in New Zealand regarding their intention to liberalise the postal monopoly.

(2) what discussions he has had with postal officials in Gibraltar regarding their intention to integrate the private sector into public postal services.

(3) what discussions he has had with the European Commission about European postal services from 1993.

Mr. Forth: None.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has received from Post Office Counters Ltd. for future private investment.

Mr. Forth: Details of such plans would be commercially confidential.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has received from Post Office Parcels Ltd. for private investment in the parcels network.

Mr. Forth: Details of such plans would be commercially confidential.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he will take to ensure freepost election communications are not delayed by industrial action.

Mr. Forth: Post Office industrial relations are the responsibility of the board. However, I understand that the Post Office discusses arrangements for the delivery of election communications both nationally and locally in advance, to minimise the possibility of disputes when such deliveries are pending.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the cost to the British Overseas Trade Board of the recent report it commissioned from the Institute of Logistics and Distribution Management; and what were its terms of reference.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Department agreed to pay for the cost of preparation of this report up to £54,000.

The terms of reference were for a study of the United Kingdom express goods services markets for destinations in mainland Europe, North America and the far east.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he will discuss the options for change in the letter monopoly with the Association of International Courier and Express Services.

Mr. Forth: I have no plans for such a meeting.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when his Department will meet interested parties to discuss the report prepared for the British Overseas Trade Board on the market for express goods services between the United Kingdom and Europe, North America and the far east.

Mr. Alan Clark: My Department has discussed the report with the Association of International Courier and Express Services, and is ready to meet other interested parties who may wish to present views.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when his Department will next meet the Institute of Logistics and Distribution Management, and what issues he expects to discuss.

Mr. Alan Clark: My Department is keeping in contact with the institute on how it is seeking to encourage United Kingdom industry to respond further to the growing opportunities in the express freight market demonstrated in the recent report on the subject prepared by the institute.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether all non-monopoly services are wholly independent of the Post Office's letter service.

Mr. Forth: While the Post Office businesses are financially independent, they are not operationally independent but charge at commercial rates for services to each other. Letters costing over £1, and so outside the monopoly limit, are not carried separately from letters below £1.

Post Office Board

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what increase in remuneration was awarded to each member of the Post Office board on 1 April.

Mr. Forth: Information about board members' remuneration is published in the Post Office's annual accounts for the year in question.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools have now opted for grant-maintained status; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has so far approved proposals for grant-maintained status from 19 schools. A further 24 have published proposals, or voted to do so, and he will determine these on their merits in due course.

Special Educational Provision

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what initiatives are planned by his Department to improve special educational provision in secondary schools.

Mr. Butcher: Special educational provision in secondary schools is primarily a responsibility of LEAs. The introduction of the national curriculum is a major initiative which will enable LEAs and schools to improve educational provision for all children, not least those who require special educational provision. The in-service training of teachers in ordinary schools with a designated responsibility for pupils with special educational needs is a national priority area in the Department's local education authority training grants scheme.

Postgraduate Students

Sir William Shelton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the number of United Kingdom students enrolled in postgraduate studies in the United Kingdom in each year since 1979.

Mr. Jackson: The numbers of home students enrolled in postgraduate studies in United Kingdom public institutions are as follows (thousands).

| | Number (Thousands) |
|---|---|
| 1979-80 | 81·5 |
| 1980-81 | 84·8 |
| 1981-82 | 85·0 |
| 1982-83 | 84·6 |
| 1983-84 | 87·1 |
| 1984-85 | 91·0 |
| 1985-86 | 90·7 |
| 1986-87 | 100·2 |
| 1987-88 | 103·7 |

These figures exclude the Open University (1,300 in 1986-87).

School Governors

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what evidence he has of the extent to which places for parents' representatives on school governing bodies are being filled by parents who are teachers employed at other schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Government have commissioned the National Foundation for Educational Research to conduct a survey of a sample of school governing bodies, and their membership. One of the questions concerns the occupational background of governors.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to ensure that appropriate training is available to school governors in the light of their increased responsibilities under local management schemes.

Mrs. Rumbold: Local education authorities have a duty to make any necessary training available to school governors. The Government are paying education support grant on nearly £5 million of local authority expenditure on school governor training in England this year. Government funds have supported the production of national training materials on the local management of schools. We are discussing with LEAs and others the scope for further national initiatives.

First Aid and Fire Safety

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to establish the existence of effective fire safety and first aid arrangements in schools and colleges; and with what result.

Mr. Butcher: Responsibility for fire safety and first aid arrangements in maintained schools and colleges rests with the local education authorities.

Guidance on fire safety is contained in the Department's "Building Bulletin No. 7", and in September 1987 the Department issued a note of guidance on arrangements for first aid provision in schools and colleges to all authorities.

University Staff (Pay)

Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the recent pay agreement between the management and staff sides in the universities.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Government have today accepted proposals put forward by the university employers and staff sides for salary increases for non-clinical academic staff in 1989-90. I am pleased that these provide for greater flexibility and differentiation in the salaries of lecturers and professors to take account of merit and market conditions. The Government have agreed that an extra £37 million should be made available for university staff pay this year, with corresponding sums in future years.

The universities have also provided evidence of satisfactory progress with the appraisal of their staff. I have accordingly authorised the Universities Funding Council to release to universities the £67 million which was conditional on the production of that evidence.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers (Re-entrants)

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Crosby 13 April, Official Report, columns 629-30, he will publish a similar table for the year ended March 1987 showing (a) re-entrants to maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools by sector, (b) re-entrants to maintained secondary schools by graduate status and degree subjects and (c) re-entrants to maintained secondary schools by sex and age.

Mr. Kenneth Baker [holding answer 13 June 1989]: Figures for the year ending March, 1987 (and also revised figures for 1986) of qualified teachers re-entering full-time service in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in England are as follows:

| | Year ending 1986 | 1987 |
|---|---|---|
| Re-entrants to maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools by sector | | |
| Re-entrants to nursery and primary schools | | |

| 50 or over | 300 | 320 |

Teachers

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how many full-time teachers in maintained secondary schools in England left full-time service in the maintained sector at or beyond normal retirement age in the year to March 1987;

(2) if, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Crosby of 27 April, Official Report, columns 619-20, he will publish a similar table for the year ended March 1987 showing an analysis by age and sex of leavers below normal retirement age;

(3) if, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Crosby, 13 April, Official Report, columns 630-32, he will publish a similar table for the year ended March 1987 showing full-time teachers in maintained secondary schools leaving full-time service before normal retirement age; and if he will estimate the number of teachers retiring early in that year.

Mr. Kenneth Baker [holding answer 13 June 1989]: Figures for the year ending March 1987 (and also revised and corrected figures for 1984-86) of full-time teachers in maintained secondary schools in England leaving full-time service in the maintained sector are as follows:

| | Year ending March | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 1984 | 1985 | 1986 | 1987 |
| All leavers aged 60 or over | 1,900 | 1,800 | 1,630 | 1,310 |
| All leavers aged under 60 | 13,750 | 15,070 | 15,750 | 14,490 |
| Men leavers under 60 | 4,810 | 5,520 | 6,080 | 5,550 |
| of which, number aged: | | | | |

| Non-graduate leavers under 60 | 5,710 | 6,020 | 6,140 | 5,370 |

The figures for leavers under 60 in the years ending March 1986 and 1987 include about 3,800 and 3,100 early retirements respectively.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Credit

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many families in receipt of family credit also receive a local authority rent rebate and a rate rebate;

(2) how many families in receipt of family credit also receive a local authority rate rebate.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Provisional information suggests that in May 1988, 62,000 families receiving some form of housing benefit were also receiving family credit. Further information is not available.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the families receiving family credit are estimated to be entitled to (a) a rent rebate and (b) a rate rebate.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information from the 1985-86 family expenditure survey (FES), updated to 1988-89, suggests that of the families receiving family credit 7·4 per cent. would be entitled to a rent rebate or rent allowance only; 17·6 per cent. to a rate rebate only; and 5 per cent. to both a rent rebate-allowance and rate rebate.

Departmental Agencies

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how his Department's agencies will improve service to the public.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how the Department of Social Security agencies will improve service to his social security customers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The establishment of agency status for Social Security operations will enable us to carry forward and strengthen our existing strategy for improving service to the public.

In particular agencies will ensure:

delegation of decision-making to the lowest possible level giving a quicker, more sensitive response to local needs;

clear objectives for the quality of service to be achieved, expressed as performance targets, and;

effective performance measurement to ensure that those targets are met.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to undertake a full review of the regulations concerning the payment of mobility allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We shall look at mobility allowance, in common with other benefits for people with disabilities, in the light of the findings of the OPCS surveys of disability.

Children

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children in the Don Valley constituency are dependent upon (a) income support and (b) family income supplement or family credit for the latest year he has figures (i) in total, and (ii) as a percentage of all children in South Yorkshire.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that this information is not available.

Availability for Work

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list (a) the number of claimants of all supplementary benefits, (b) the number of claimants of supplementary pensions, (c) the number of claimants of supplementary allowances and (d) the numbers of claimants of supplementary benefits required to be available for work, in respect of his Department's local offices in Doncaster, and the Mexborough area, for April of each year from 1979 to 1989;

(2) if he will list (a) the total number of claimants receiving income support, (b) claimants of income support receiving pensioner premiums and (c) the number of claimants of income support required to be available for work, in respect of his Department's local offices in Doncaster, and the Mexborough area, for April of each year from 1979 to 1989;

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is as follows:

Number of claimants receiving supplementary benefit income support by statistical category

Late Claims

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give (a) the number of claims for income support where entitlement has been recognised but the claim has been disallowed on the grounds of late submission, (b) the total value of these claims, (c) the number of such claims appealed against with the number successful and (e) the cost of dealing with these claims and appeals.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Benefits

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total number of recipients of supplementary benefit or supplementary pension or income support for each year from 1969 to the present.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is as follows:

| Supplementary Benefit | All claimants | Supplementary pensioners[1] | Other claimants |
|---|---|---|---|
| November 1969 | 2,688,000 | 1,875,000 | 813,000 |

EC Social Charter

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will seek to establish from the European Commission whether the directives on a Euro-pension for the elderly and for a minimum entitlement for unemployment benefit, as proposed in the Community "Charter for Fundamental Social Rights" 89-248-final, will fall to be presented to the Council on the basis of majority voting.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The voting procedure for Commission proposals depends on the articles of the treaty of Rome on which they are based. The articles which cover social security require unanimity.

HEALTH

Cochlear Implants

15. Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he proposes to take to ensure that cochlear implants are readily provided by the National Health Service for those profoundly deaf patients who could benefit from them.

Mr. Mellor: Provision of cochlear implants is a matter for health authorities in the light of their assessment of local needs and priorities. This is an important new development and I have asked officials to review the position to see whether some form of additional help from the centre would be possible. Given the complexity of the funding issues involved, no early decision will be possible.

NHS Reform

17. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future provision of resources for teaching and training of doctors under the proposals in the White Paper, "Working for Patients."

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: In the White Paper we emphasised the Government's continuing commitment to maintaining the quality of medical education. We recognised that hospitals in which teaching and research take place incur higher costs as a result, and said that we had decided to accept that the service increment for teaching—(SIFT)—should be enhanced. More recently, I announced in a written reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Staffordshire, Moorlands (Mr. Knox) on 6 June that we have agreed to improve means for the distribution of SIFT. We have also stressed the importance we continue to attach to the postgraduate training of doctors, and our intention is that hospitals should not be placed at an unfair disadvantage or advantage in the distribution of resources by undertaking such training.

18. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the intended effects of the increased capitation element in the new general practitioners' contract for patient care.

Mr. Mellor: By increasing the proportion of general practitioners' income which comes from capitation payments we will be encouraging greater competition in the family doctor service. This will ensure a better service for patients by giving GPs a greater incentive to provide the best possible range and quality of service to all patients.

20. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how patient care will be affected by the proposals to allow large general practitioner practices to hold their own budgets.

32. Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the implications for patient care of the proposals for general practitioners' practices to operate their own budgets.

Mr. Mellor: The introduction of practice budgets, in common with our other proposals for the National Health Service, will lead to even higher standards of service and better quality of care for patients. General practitioners who choose to have budgets will for the first time hold the purse-strings to finance the treatment of their patients which falls within the scope of the budget. This will mean that hospitals will become more responsive to the needs of GPs and their patients. Practice budget holders will also be able to transfer funds between the different elements of the budget which will provide them with greater flexibility in meeting the individual needs of their patients. Greater freedom in managing their own budgets will enhance the clinical freedom of the doctors involved.

22. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the proposals in the White Paper "Working for Patients" on medical audit will affect patient care.

Mr. Mellor: The objectives of developing a comprehensive system of medical audit as proposed in the White Paper is to enhance the overall quality of care given to patients in the National Health Service.

23. Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the intended effects of the change in composition of the family practitioner committees proposed in the White Paper "Working for Patients".

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Gillingham (Mr. Couchman) on 23 May 1989, at columns 482-83.

25. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many requests for information he has now received from hospitals inquiring about the possibility of obtaining self-governing status.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: People or groups interested in self-governing status have been advised to direct inquiries in the first instance to their regional health authority. RHAs have so far notified my Department of a total of 179 expressions of interest, including a number of units which feature more than one hospital.

27. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the proposals to allow hospitals to become self-governing National Health Service hospitals will affect patient care.

70. Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will explain the effects of the proposals to allow hospitals to become self-governing.

Mr. Mellor: Self-governing hospitals will remain firmly within the NHS and there will be safeguards to ensure that essential local services continue to be provided locally. But they will have far more freedom to take their own decisions on the matters which affect them most without detailed supervision from above. This will give patients more choice, produce a better quality service and encourage other hospitals to do even better in order to compete.

29. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what will be the benefits for patient care of the indicative drug budgets proposed in the National Health Service White Paper.

48. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much account has been taken under the proposals for prescribing budgets of the needs of patients in receipt of drugs on a long-term basis.

66. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how patient care will be affected by the proposals in the White Paper "Working for Patients", for indicative drug budgets.

Mr. Mellor: Indicative prescribing budgets will provide a further incentive to general practitioners to examine their prescribing patterns critically and in particular to avoid excessive and unnecessary prescribing. This is very much in the best interests of patients and more economical prescribing will release money for other forms of patient care in the NHS,. We have made it clear that the amount allocated to a practice for its indicative prescribing budget will take into account the presence on the practice's list of patients, such as the elderly or chronically sick, who need drugs on a longer-term basis. All patients will always get the drugs they need.

30. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of consultants' contract hours he expects to be devoted to administrative work as a result of the proposals in the White Paper on the National Health Service.

Mr. Mellor: We are not making any estimate of the time consultants will spend in administrative work, but we expect—and would wish to see—consultants taking an increasing management role, as "Working for Patients" makes clear, through the devolution of managerial responsibility, the extension of resource management, and the establishment of self-governing hospitals.

36. Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning the proposals contained in the White Paper "Working for Patients", relating to medical audits.

Mr. Mellor: The proposal to develop a comprehensive system of medical audit in the NHS has been widely welcomed and the medical profession supports the concept of audit and consider it a central part of the doctor's obligation to his patient.

38. Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has received any expressions of interest from general practitioners' practices about operating their own practice budgets.

Mr. Mellor: Although we have not yet asked GPs to register formally their interest in becoming budget holders, we are encouraged by the level of interest from eligible practices.

39. Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what effect the proposals in the National Health Service White Paper will have on the distance that patients will have to travel for treatment.

Mr. Mellor: Surveys suggest that many people are willing to travel for better and quicker treatment. In setting contracts for services district health authorities will take full account of the wishes of patients and there will be no question of patients being expected to travel unreasonable distances.

43. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the conditions which have to be fulfilled before the authorities in a National Health Service hospital apply to be self governing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The main criteria were set out in the White Paper "Working for Patients" and working paper (1) "Self-governing Hospitals". Further details are given in the document "Self Governing Hospitals: An Initial Guide" published last week and copies are available in the Library.

44. Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the additional £40 million to assist with the implementation of the National Health Service reforms will be allocated.

49. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give further details of the recently announced extra £40 million for the implementation of the health service reforms.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friends to my reply to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) on 26 June, at columns 315-16.

46. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost to the latest date of the promotion and information relating to his White Paper "Working for Patients".

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I am introducing into the NHS a system of regular direct communications with the staff which I believe is necessary for any large organisation and certainly for one which employs over 1 million people. It is misleading to compare this with public advertising or political promotion campaigns of the kind being conducted by the BMA and other interest groups. The cost of the communications exercise to inform the staff and management of the NHS about the White Paper proposals is approximately £1·25 million.

Estimated expenditure on the next stage of information for NHS staff about self-governing hospitals will be some £750,000.

The only expenditure on material aimed at the public included in these sums is the cost of:

(a) a leaflet for the public on the White Paper proposals, costing £117,000;

(b) a further leaflet to be made available to the general public on request in the local areas of units which have expressed an interest in becoming self governing, costing £13,000.

47. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to privatise self-governing hospitals.

Mr. Mellor: No.

50. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how patients' choice will be affected by the proposals in the White Paper "Working for Patients".

56. Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a further statement on the implications for patient choice of the proposals in the White Paper "Working for Patients."

Mr. Mellor: A fundamental aim of the White Paper proposals is to make the Health Service more responsive to the needs of patients. We will stimulate better services to patients by encouraging suitable hospitals to apply for self-governing status, by delegating responsibility to local level and by allowing money for patients' treatment to cross administrative borders. GPs will be able to improve the service they offer their patients by applying for their own budgets. Patients will be able to choose their GPs on the basis of the services they offer. We intend to raise the performance of all hospitals and GPs to that of the best. The reformed Health Service will offer a better quality of service and better value for money.

52. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further representations he has received in respect of his proposals to cash-limit general practitioners' budgets.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Oxford, East (Mr. Smith).

53. Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will make a statement on the outcome of his consultations to date on the White Paper "Working for Patients".

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Consultations are continuing and have been useful. In particular, I have held many meetings with members of the medical profession and have established that, despite some remaining important disagreements, there is a substantial area of agreement.

There is almost universal agreement with the aims of the White Paper to produce a better NHS for patients giving medical treatment free at the point of delivery regardless of means and financed largely as now out of general taxation.

I also judge that the great majority of doctors accept the need for a framework of quality control, in the form of medical audit; the distribution of resources in a way which ensures that "money follows the patient"; and improved systems of financial management using modern information technology. The BMA has told me in meetings that it accepts these three proposals but it has fundamental disagreements with the details of our proposed reforms to implement them. Unfortunately, it and the great majority of doctors have no alternative proposals of their own. The BMA has been discouraging its members from putting constructive alternative proposals to me.

58. Mr. Carttiss: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the proposals in the White Paper "Working for Patients" will affect general practitioners' freedom to refer patients for treatment.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The new arrangements will enable general practitioners to play a more direct part in deciding which hospitals will provide services for their patients. GP practice budget holders will be able to refer patients to hospitals which provide the best care and shortest waiting times irrespective of administrative boundaries. Those practitioners who do not hold budgets will be consulted extensively before DHAs place contracts with hospitals based on GPs' wishes and there will be provision for GPs to make extra-contractual referrals.

61. Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how patients will be affected by the proposals in the White Paper," Working for Patients"; and if he will make a further statement.

68. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the intended effects on patient care of the proposals in the White Paper, "Working for Patients".

Mr. Mellor: Our proposals will produce a better quality of care for all NHS patients, including elderly and chronically sick people. We intend to bring all services up to the standard of the very best and to make certain that taxpayers' money is used to best effect from the patient's point of view. The proposals reflect our strong commitment to the principles on which the NHS was founded and will ensure that it is more than ready to face the rapidly changing and rising demands upon it as medical science progresses and the average age of the population rises.

65. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to (a) sponsor adequate research and (b) undertake pilot projects to an adequate level on the likely effects of the White Paper proposals on the effectiveness of the National Health Service.

Mr. Mellor: Many of our proposals are evolutionary in nature and we will learn from the experience gained. We are quite satisfied that the NHS needs reform on the lines proposed to improve its management and to improve the service to patients.

69. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he proposes that self-governing hospitals will be required to retain core services.

Mr. Mellor: Before self-governing status is granted to a hospital the initial arrangements for provision of core services will have to be approved by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State. Thereafter self-governing hospitals will be expected to continue to provide these services subject to review at the request of either the hospital or the DHA concerned or, in the event of disagreement, the Secretary of State's further approval.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the current situation with regard to the new contract for general practitioners.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: On the 4 May I reached agreement with the negotiators of the General Medical Services Committee on all the major outstanding issues in the new contract. The negotiators undertook to commend this agreement to the annual conference of local medical committee representatives on 21 June. This conference voted to reject the agreement reached by the negotiators, and there will be a ballot of all GPs in the country.

I am disappointed that the conference has rejected the contract which its own leadership commended to it. The contract negotiations were long and hard—over 100 hours of discussion spread over more than a year. The resulting agreement was hard fought and I made a number of important concessions which I would not have made but for my desire to reach an agreement if possible. Both sides agreed on the need for a new contract which rewarded good performance. I believe this contract does meet that need and I see no sensible basis upon which negotiations could be reopened. My task is to raise the quality of primary health care within the NHS and, in order to pursue that, I aim to have in place by 1990 a contract which rewards doctors who provide the highest standards of care for their patients and encourages the rest to match the performance of the best.

Recent research by York university's centre for health economics has demonstrated the wide range of quality of service to patients provided in different parts of the country under the old contract. I shall be laying regulations before Parliament later this year to bring a new contract into effect by 1990.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give an estimate of what percentage of a district health authority's budget would be for contractual referrals for hospital care and what percentage would be for extra-contractual referrals under his White Paper.

Mr. Mellor: District health authorities will make provision, within their budgets, for the possibility of referrals which were not foreseen when they placed their contracts. The size of this contingency fund will be a matter for them. However, in deciding the pattern of contracts DHAs will be required to take account of the views of all local GPs and place contracts to secure the referral patterns which local GPs wish to see in place unless there are compelling reasons for not doing so. In this way the need for a contingency fund will be minimised.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners budget holders practices he intends to approve to begin operating in 1991.

Mr. Mellor: Applications to participate in the practice budget scheme will be made to, and approved by, regional health authorities. It is too early to estimate the likely numbers which will be in operation from 1 April 1991, but there have been an encouraging number of preliminary inquiries.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the effects of his White Paper "Working for Patients", especially relating to self-governing hospitals, on supra-regional services including poisons units.

Mr. Mellor: The NHS review White Paper has stated that "some central funding will be necessary for the development of supra-regional services".

A working party is currently considering the implications of this for these services. The NHS management executive will discuss with regional health authorities the detailed application to specialist services of the new funding arrangements proposed. It is, however, too early to say how individual units will be affected.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, under his plans for capital valuation of self-governing hospitals, he will offset the cost of any backlog on building or equipment maintenance against the capital valuation.

Mr. Freeman: The valuation of the property occupied by self-governing hospitals will be on the basis of open market value for existing use. This valuation takes account of the age and condition of the buildings.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanism and estimate of cost exists for separating the cost of treatment from research and training in order that self-governing teaching hospitals have the necessary information to operate effectively.

Mr. Mellor: We have developed a method for estimating the excess service costs arising from teaching and research at hospitals where at least 5 per cent. of student teaching is undertaken. This is used in the calculation of the service increment for teaching (SIFT). Regions and districts as appropriate to local circumstances will contract with hospitals (including self-governing hospitals) to provide service facilities for teaching in return for SIFT payments.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether he plans to introduce a system of cross charging for accident and emergency work under his proposals for self-governing hospitals where a hospital is situated near a major travel point or in a major commuter area;

(2) whether, in those inner-city areas where patients are more likely to use accident and emergency services rather than a general practitioner, he has any plans either to allow a hospital to curtail such services or to cross charge a general practitioner or family practitioner committee for costs incurred.

Mr. Mellor: All hospitals which provide accident and emergency treatment will do so under a block contract with the health authority in whose district they are located. District health authorities will be responsible for securing sufficient accident and emergency services in their district irrespective of the place of residence for all patients who are present. There is no intention that family practitioner committees or GPs should be charged.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will postpone his plans to introduce general practitioners' budgets if all hospitals are not operating the necessary management and accounting systems needed to work out the nature of various contracts by April 1991.

Mr. Mellor: We are quite sure that district health authorities and GP practice budget holders will be able to manage the contractual process by April 1991.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the capital valuation of a self-governing hospital or unit is to be based on a value for present use or on the current market value of the site.

Mr. Freeman: The valuation of the property occupied by self-governing hospitals will be on the basis of open market value for existing use.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether, if a hospital offers an integrated hospital and community midwifery service, he will ensure that the service continues if the hospital has opted out.

Mr. Mellor: Self-governing hospitals will not opt out but will remain fully within the NHS. The NHS will continue to provide integrated hospital and community services.

Where maternity services are designated by a district health authority as "core services" my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State will approve the initial arrangements for provision of such services on establishment of a self-governing hospital. The detailed arrangements will be set out in contracts between the hospital and health authority. Subsequent changes in provision will have to be either by agreement between the district health authority and self-governing hospital or have my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State's approval.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether comprehensive care services will be provided at all self-governing hospitals;

(2) whether emergency and outpatient facilities will be provided at all self-governing hospitals.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 21 June 1989]: We are prepared to consider all hospitals and a variety of other units as potentially eligible for self-governing status. Comprehensive core services or particular services need not necessarily be provided by each one.

British Medical Association

19. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the British Medical Association; and what issues were discussed.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I last met the British Medical Association on 14 June and it confirmed that it shared the aims of the Government to create a better National Health Service, as set out in the foreword to the White Paper.

The BMA also confirmed that it agrees on the desirability of introducing better financial control, and quality control in the form of medical audit in the service. It also agreed on the need to make money follow the patient, and to make patient service the prime objective of the service.

It did not, however, agree with some of the major proposals in the White Paper such as self-governing hospitals, about which many people in the NHS have expressed interest. These proposals are crucial to delivering the better service which both I and the BMA want. It did not put forward any new proposals of its own to achieve those aims. It did agree to further discussions.

I intend to reform the NHS to make it more able to provide an improved service to patients. I made it clear to the BMA that I would welcome a constructive contribution from it to that process of reform whenever it felt able to make one.

33. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what matters were discussed at his last meeting with representatives of the British Medical Association.

45. Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the British Medical Association representatives to discuss the Health Service review; and if he will make a statement.

62. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the chairman of the British Medical Association; and what matters were discussed.

67. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he last met the representatives of the British Medical Association; and what was discussed.

Mr. Mellor: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Berkshire, East (Mr. MacKay) today.

Head Inspections

21. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy on head inspections in schools by health authority nursing staff.

Mr. Freeman: Responsibility for the control of headlice infection among pupils rests with the individual health authorities through the school health service. It is for them to determine the policy for dealing with this problem in the light of local circumstances.

Food (Health Risks)

24. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he intends to take to reduce or eliminate the risks to health in the food chain.

Mr. Freeman: The Government have introduced a range of measures designed to reduce the risk of food contamination and, with industry, are continuing to consider what further action is necessary.

Both primary and secondary legislation are under review. We recently announced the intention to consult on changes in the food hygiene regulations, and the Government are presently considering the results of consultation on a wide-ranging review of the Food Act.

The Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food has commenced work under the chairmanship of Sir Mark Richmond.

Meanwhile we shall continue to act promptly to contain outbreaks of food poisoning which occur, and I refer the hon. Member to the statement my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State made on 13 June, at columns 703-9.

Student Midwives

26. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will review the grading structure for qualified nurses who became student midwives prior to 1 April 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We will be responding shortly to the Social Services Committee's report on midwives' regrading, which raises this issue.

Capital Programmes (Yorkshire)

28. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the average annual expenditure on capital programmes in the area covered by the Yorkshire regional health authority between 1979 and 1989; what was the equivalent annual figure for the years between 1974 and 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Following are figures derived from the annual accounts of the health authorities comprising the Yorkshire region:

Average annual total capital expenditure

| Period | £000 (Cash) |
|---|---|
| 1974-75 to 1978-79 (5 years) | 22,837 |
| 1979-80 to 1987-88[1] (9 years) | 54,508 |

[1] Latest year available.

The average figure for the later period represents an increase in real terms (measured at 1987-88 prices) of almost 10 per cent. on that for the earlier period.

Heart Disease

31. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to prevent coronary heart disease.

Mr. Mellor: Together with the Health Education Authority, the Department launched the "Look After Your Heart" campaign in April 1987 as an ongoing initiative to combat the high level of coronary heart disease. This initiative aims to increase awareness about the risk of heart disease and how it may be avoided, and to provide practical help to people in making the necessary changes to their lifestyle. It is doing this through publicity campaigns and special promotions, provision of detailed advice about smoking, nutrition and exercise, and funding of local initiatives. It has developed a very successful workplace element. These activities are currently being expanded, and other areas of work, such as with primary health care and in schools, are being developed.

Much other work is also going on. The Government are taking specific action to discourage smoking, which is a key factor in causing heart disease, and excessive consumption of alcohol. The Standing Medical Advisory Committee has been asked to look at the cost-effectiveness of cholesterol screening in relation to the prevention of coronary heart disease. Under changes to general practitioners' terms of service, they will be required to offer patients regular check-ups, including measurement of blood pressure. We believe that this important development will provide an opportunity for GPs to give personal advice to patients, particularly those most at risk of heart disease, about steps they can take to lessen this risk.

Hospital Food

34. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the quality of food served in hospitals.

Mr. Freeman: It is health authorities' responsibility to determine the standard and quality of food to meet the needs of patients and staff in their hospitals.

Hospitals (Harrow)

35. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received from all sources concerning the possible transfer to self-governing status of the Northwich Park hospital and the Royal National orthopaedic hospital in the Harrow district health authority area.

Mr. Mellor: Expressions of interest in self-governing status have been received from both Northwick Park hospital and the Royal National orthopaedic hospital. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has received a number of representations on the latter. Should this interest, in either case, proceed to an application, I can assure my hon. Friend that all the main interests—including staff and the local community—will have an opportunity to express their views when detailed proposals have been worked out.

GPs (Patient Time)

37. Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to the average amount of time per week that general practitioners now spend seeing patients; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The available information is taken from the general medical practitioners workload survey carried out in 1985-86 by the Health Departments and the British Medical Association. it shows that in an average working week GPs spend 26 hours seeing patients. This comprises 18 hours in surgery, six hours in home visits and two hours in clinics.

NHS Policy Board

40. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the role of the recently announced National Health Service policy board.

Mr. Mellor: The role of the NHS policy board is to advise my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State on the formulation of policy for and the strategic oversight of the NHS. It sets objectives for the NHS management executive and monitors their achievement.

Consultants

41. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many additional posts for consultants he estimates will be created over the next three years.

Mr. Mellor: We estimate that about 1,000 new medical and dental consultant posts will be created in England between 1989 and 1992, including the 100 posts announced in "Working for Patients".

Cancer Screening

42. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the number of medical screening units and future demand for screening.

Mr. Mellor: We have established two programmes to screen women regularly for cervical and breast cancers. Most of the cervical smears performed each year are taken by general practitioners. Breast cancer screening is organised by regional health authorities and is carried out in specifically equipped centres.

I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mrs. Fyfe), on 14 June, at columns 429-30 for information about those breast screening centres in England which are operational and to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood (Mr. Stewart), on 19 June, at column 35, for information about screening in health care.

Information on screening in the other parts of the United Kingdom is the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and Northern Ireland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

64. Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has issued guidelines to National Health Service hospitals on (a) the information they provide on breast cancer screening and (b) levying charges for breast cancer screening.

Mr. Mellor: The Health Education Authority has produced a leaflet which can accompany a woman's invitation letter to explain what happens at a breast screening centre. Additional material has been produced to inform staff involved in health education and primary care about the screening programme. A general information leaflet on breast screening is also due to be published shortly. The guidance to health authorities concerning the provision of breast cancer screening referred to in the reply my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health gave to the hon. Member on 21 February, at columns 606-7, drew attention to the role the Health Education Authority would play in supporting health authorities' education programmes for women.

Guidance issued to health authorities in March on income generation HN(89)9 states that the Department should be consulted where proposals for income generation clearly involve national policy,

"for example breast and cervical cancer screening".

Community Care

51. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to announce his Department's plans for the provision of community care in response to "An Agenda for Action".

Mr. Mellor: We have been giving very thorough consideration to all the available options for the future organisation and management of community care, taking account of the many representations and views we have received. We hope to be able to announce our proposals shortly.

Hospital Waiting Lists

54. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the Government spent in 1988-89 on measures designed to help reduce the length of hospital waiting lists.

Mr. Mellor: We allocated £30 million from the central waiting list fund in 1988-89 as part of the Government's drive to reduce hospital waiting lists and times. This money enabled over 117,000 additional in-patients and day cases and over 92,000 extra out-patients to be treated from the waiting lists.

Queen's Medical Centre, Nottingham

55. Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will hold a ballot of all staff at the Queen's medical centre, Nottingham on opting out.

Mr. Mellor: No.

Self governing trusts will not opt out but will remain fully within the NHS.

If an application is made for QMC Nottingham to become self-governing, Trent regional health authority will ensure that all those with an interest have the opportunity of expressing their views but a ballot will not be required. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State will consider any responses alongside the application.

Medical Scientists

57. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to ensure that the salaries of medical scientists employed within the National Health Service are sufficient to ensure that there are no critical shortages of such staff.

Mr. Mellor: The pay of non-medical scientists is a matter for negotiation between the management side of the Scientific and Professional Staff Council and the staff side representing scientists employed in the NHS. Negotiations are continuing on the staff side pay claim for 1989/90. The pay of medically qualified staff is decided after taking into account recommendations of the doctors and dentists review body.

Blood Shortages

59. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to correct the shortage of blood available for transfusion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 23 June, at column 278.

Patients (Statistics)

60. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average number of patients per general practitioner at the current date; and what was the figure in 1979.

Mr. Mellor: The information is as follows:

England—Average list size

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 1 October 1979 | 2,286 |
| 1 October 1987 | [1]2,020 |

[1] Latest available figure.

"Perinatal, Neonatal and Infant Mortality"

63. Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Government will be responding to the Social Services Select Committee report "Perinatal, Neonatal and Infant Mortality".

Mr. Mellor: Very soon.

Nurses

71. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many appeals have been submitted in regard to salary grading by members of the nursing profession; and what are the numbers that have yet to be determined.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) where nurse education is organised across more than one hospital, what are the implications for such education where one hospital opts out;

(2) whether the budget for nurse education currently with the district health authority will devolve to a hospital which opts out which is currently operating or partly operating a school of nursing.

Mr. Mellor: There will be a further working paper on education and training next month which will address these issues.

Northern Regional Health Authority

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he has discussed the future of Middlesbrough and South Cleveland hospitals with the Northern regional health authority; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what agreements have been entered into with the planning authorities for the development of sites at Poole and South Cleveland hospitals in the event of their sale to the private sector; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what discussions have taken place between the Northern regional health authority and the Teesside development corporation concerning the replacement of the Middlesbrough general and South Cleveland hospitals by a new medical complex on Teesside; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what funding he will make available for the construction of a new medical centre on Teesside; over what period of time; when any final decision will be made and by whom; and if he will make a statement;

(5) what proposals he has received from the Northern regional health authority concerning the creation of a private health company to run any new medical complex on Teesside; and if he will make a statement;

(6) what proposals he has received from the Northern regional health authority concerning the siting of a new medical complex to be built on a site presently containing chemical storage tanks; what feasibility studies in relation to safety have been carried out; by whom and when; and if he will make a statement;

(7) what proposals he has received from the Northern regional health authority concerning the transfer of capital allocations presently earmarked for health schemes in South Tees to a new medical complex on Teesside; and if he will make a statement;

(8) what proposals he has received from the Northern regional health authority for the creation of a private health care sector within any new medical complex on Teesside; and if he will make a statement;

(9) what proposals he has received from the Northern regional health authority for the closure of North Riding infirmary and the transfer of its facilities to a new medical complex on Teesside; and if he will make a statement;

(10) what proposals he has received from the Northern regional health authority concerning alternative funding arrangements in respect of the plant and equipment in any new medical facility on Teesside; and if he will make a statement;

(11) what proposals he has received from the Northern regional health authority concerning a joint development between the regional health authority and college of Durham university concerning a new medical complex on Teesside; and if he will make a statement;

(12) what reports he has received from the Northern regional health authority concerning the involvement of management consultants, Richard Ellis Venture Consultants Ltd. and Peat Marwick McLintock in the proposed new scheme for a medical complex on Teesside, and the cost at which the management consultants have been retained, and who is paying; and if he will make a statement;

(13) what representations he has received from the Northern regional health authority concerning a proposed new medical complex on Teesside; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The hon. Member is aware that Northern regional health authority is considering the possibility of a new NHS medical complex in Teeside. The proposal is at an early stage of consideration and its feasibility is currently being appraised. The outcome will be considered in conjunction with the results of a strategic review of the provision of hospital services in South Tees, which is nearing completion. Specialist advice has been commissioned by the Northern RHA from two firms of management consultants, whose fees will be payable by the RHA. No formal proposals have yet been submitted to the Department, but officials are being kept informed as the exercise progresses. Any firm plans that may result from the studies would be aimed at providing a modern, high quality hospital service within the NHS. Such a development would involve rationalisation of existing services, resulting in a significant improvement in the quality of care available locally. The proposals would not envisage the closure of existing modern facilities at South Cleveland hospital. Northern RHA is known to be in touch with the various interested parties, including Teeside development corporation and relevant local authorities, but details of such contacts are not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to seek any additional information from the chairman of Northern regional health authority.

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the present National Health Service capital allocations for South Tees; for what they are earmarked; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not held centrally. Allocation of resources to South Tees health authority is the responsibility of Northern regional health authority and the hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman for the information.

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proposals he has received from the Northern regional health authority for the sale of land at Poole and south Cleveland hospitals;

(2) what proposals he has received from the Northern regional health authority to sell sites that the Northern region considers to be surplus to requirements, including land at Middlesbrough maternity hospital, south Cleveland and Poole hospitals; what approvals are required for such sales; when approval is likely to be forthcoming; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what proposals he has received from the Northern regional health authority concerning estate rationalisation within the South Tees area health authority; how many surplus sites are proposed to be sold; what is proposed to happen to the funds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We have received no proposals from Northern regional health authority. Once NHS sites are declared surplus to requirements by health authorities they may be disposed of in accordance with the procedures set out in the NHS handbook on land transactions and the proceeds retained locally.

Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the last new facilities were opened at south Cleveland hospital; by whom; and what reasons have been advanced by the Northern regional health authority to have these closed and removed to a new medical complex on Teesside.

Mr. Freeman: The new maternity unit was officially opened by HRH The Princess of Wales on 6 October 1988. We are not aware of there being any intention to close or transfer this facility.

Health Care (Purchase)

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will explain the intended effects of the proposals to allow health authorities to purchase health care from hospitals.

Mr. Freeman: All National Health Service hospitals, whether run by health authorities or self-governing, will be free to offer their services to different health authorities and to the private sector. Consequently, a health authority will be better able to discharge its duty by using its available funds to secure a comprehensive service, including emergency services, to obtain the best service it can whether from its own hospitals, from another authority's hospitals, from NHS hospital trusts or from the private sector.

NHS Policy Board

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reply he has sent to the Royal College of Nursing in response to its complaint that the chief nursing officer has been excluded from membership of the National Health Service policy board.

Mr. Mellor: On 14 June my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State met the Royal College of Nursing to discuss this issue and a copy of the statement made after that meeting is in the Library. The fact that Mrs. Poole has not been appointed to the board has in no way altered her position and authority as the Government's chief nursing officer, nor does it imply that the Government no longer have a high regard for the nursing profession.

Eye Tests

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he supplied to opticians as to his Department's definition of a near relative of glaucoma sufferers in his criteria for free eye tests.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 June 1989]: A free sight test is available to all people aged 40 or over who are either the parent, brother, sister or child of a diagnosed glaucoma patient. Information on eligibility was circulated to opticians through a family practitioner notice in March 1989. Poster SB54 and leaflet G11, which are currently being distributed, also draw attention to the special entitlement of this group of people.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Census Questions

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to whether the inclusion of more questions in the census than previously has reduced the numbers responding.

Mr. Needham: None. The census is compulsory by law, and everyone is obliged to respond to it. However, the census is based on the principle that it should be generally acceptable to the public, and limited in its overall demands.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of respondents to the census of 1961, 1971 and 1981 did not answer the question concerning religion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The information is as follows:

| | Percentage |
|---|---|
| 1961 | 1·9 |
| 1971 | 9·4 |
| 1981 | 18·5 |

A question on religion has traditionally been included in Northern Ireland censuses for answer on a voluntary basis. The Government propose to retain a religion question on the same basis in the 1991 census.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what purpose is intended in including in the census questions on educational qualifications; and what use will be made of the answers to these questions.

Mr. Needham: The information derived from these questions will be used, together with information from other questions, to show the number of people with higher qualifications in different industries and occupations. Regional variations in the proportions of people with higher qualifications will be used in planning education and training. It will also show the reserves of qualified people among, for example, housewives and the out of work, including those not currently seeking work.

Census

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps his Department is taking to inform the public in advance of the census.

Mr. Needham: In due course, the census office will arrange publicity to explain the purpose of the census, convey assurances of confidentiality and deal with other aspects of public concern. The office will also arrange the distribution of appropriate leaflets and posters to libraries and other public places, issue an explanatory leaflet about the census and set up a telephone service to deal with inquiries from the public.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, in view of the imminence of the summer holiday period, he will extend the period for the submission of objections to the proposed Strangford lough (part III) area of special scientific interest beyond the present proposed date of 22 August.

Mr. Needham: Notification of the declaration of Strangford lough (part III) area of special scientific interest was issued on 21 April 1989. As required by article 24 of the Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands (Northern Ireland) Order 1985 the notification stated the period within which representations and objections could be made. It is not possible under the provisions of the order to extend the period beyond 22 August since this was the closing date stipulated in the notification.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the largest area of special scientific interest by area identified so far in Northern Ireland; and how many landowners there are within this area of special scientific interest.

Mr. Needham: The largest area of special scientific interest (ASSI) so far declared is Strangford lough (parts I, II and III) with a total area of 4,108 hectares. There are some 300 landowners and occupiers.

Planning Procedures

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether Ringhaddy avenue, Bowtown road, Newtownards was given planning approval as a cul-de-sac; whether the existing right-of-way through the steel fence at Ringhaddy avenue conforms with the planning approval; and what proposals he has to provide access from the Abbots road estates to Newtownards town centre consistent with existing approvals under the roads and planning legislation.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 22 June 1989]: Ringhaddy avenue was determined and constructed as a cul-de-sac. Following representations from a resident, a pedestrian link was provided through the steel fence. Planning approval was not necessary.

The Department of Environment for Northern Ireland currently has no plans to provide access from the Abbots road estate to Newtownards town centre.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, if he will list all appointments of chairmen and members of public and non-governmental bodies made by him since he took up office, together with the names of those appointed, the salaries and expenses paid to them and the method by which their appointment was made.

Mr. Ian Stewart [holding answer 5 May 1989]: The information requested is set out in the table:

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Greenhouse Effect

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the current estimates of greenhouse gas emissions, such as nitrous oxide, methane and carbon dioxide, from the agricultural sector in the United Kingdom; and what are his proposals to reduce these emissions.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Agriculture both produces and consumes carbon dioxide, and net emissions are likely to be small. Annual emissions of methane and nitrous oxide from agriculture are very tentatively and approximately estimated at 1·4 million tonnes and 0·06 million tonnes (as N) respectively.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what specific proposals his Department has put forward for consideration and enactment, in order to reduce greenhouse gas emissions such as nitrous oxide, methane and carbon dioxide, since the seminar on the greenhouse effect held by the Prime Minister on 26 April.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department participates in the work of the Intergovernmental panel on climate change, and we have drawn its attention to a number of schemes in the United Kingdom which encourage farmers to protect the environment, and which help to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

Food Irradiation

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to have a period of public consultation on his proposals to lift the ban on food irradiation and on his report of a working policy on the introduction of food irradiation in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: There will be full public consultation when detailed proposals are put forward.

Mr. Warren: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make arrangements to label all food which has been irradiated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The Council of the European Communities agreed on 14 June to amend the food labelling directive to provide for specific indication on the label of foodstuffs that have been irradiated. This requirement will be implemented into United Kingdom food labelling legislation in due course.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the micro-organisms which are not destroyed by food irradiation.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Populations of all micro-organisms in food are reduced to a greater or lesser extent by food irradiation. The process has been shown to be effective in dealing with vegetative micro-organisms such as salmonella, camphylobacter and listeria, but is not effective in the reduction of micro-organisms that produce spores—in particular clostridium botulinum.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the countries in which food irradiation is approved, giving the nature of the approval and details of the type of food covered for each country.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The list is as follows:

Pesticides

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the research sponsored by his Department into alternatives to pesticides for pest control.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The following research projects on alternatives to pesticides for pest control are currently being carried out for and by my Department.

1. Integrated control of pests on outdoor crops
The use of natural enemies, chemical and cultural methods to control aphid pests in cereals.

2. Biology and ecology of pests, pathogens and beneficial organisms
(a) The development of new methods of insect management using non-polluting chemicals affecting behaviour.
(b) The development of methods using natural predators and pesticides in integrated control systems for pests of arable crops.
(c) To determine the effects of straw incorporation and cultivation techniques on populations of pest aphids and beneficial insects, and to assess the implications for future pesticide usage.

3. Control of diseases in cereals
To develop methods, involving biological control, agrochemicals, host resistance and husbandry practices to minimise the harmful effects of takeall.

4. Development of oats and diseases resistant cereals
To evaluate new sources of disease resistance and to incorporate new resistant germplasm into high yielding winter and spring oat varieties.

5. Disease and pest management in agro-ecosystems harmonised with the environment
(a) To rationalise the development of resistant varieties by understanding the mechanisms underlying genetic host resistance, its specificity with regard to pathogen variation, its relationship with non-host resistance and the corresponding implications for its durability.
(b) To identify and conserve genetically resistant germplasm of currently important crops and minor alternative crops. Characterisation and determination of the durability of such resistances and their deployment in disease management systems using reduced pesticide inputs.
(c) To develop an holistic approach to the deployment of genetic resistance in the field with special reference to grassland cereal farming and farm forestry in de-intensified systems.
(d) To integrate the use of natural biocides, particularly Bacillus thuringiensis toxin, genetic resistance and systemic pesticides in the management of crop pests and diseases.

6. The improvement of dry peas
To define an optimum model for composition of storage compounds in a pea seed by understanding genetic variation and storage product accumulation in embryos, to improve the quality of peas for use as food and feed, and to improve disease resistance in the pea crop.

7. Pests of non-cereal crops
To develop methods for the containment of soil, dwelling nematodes by the integrated use of crop rotations, reliable resistant cultivars and efficiently-used, safely-formulated nematicides, thereby delaying selection of virulent nematode pathotypes and minimising cost and risks to operatives and the environment. Particular attention is paid to potato cyst nematodes and to other nematodes of forage and grain legumes. Problems of nematode attack in oilseed rape and other alternative crops such as sunflower and lupin are being investigated. Studies on the nature of host tolerance to nematode attack and the complex interactions between nematode host races and culture resistance are contributing to the development of integrated control measures.
8. Bird damage assessment and development of control techniques.
9. The biology of storage arthropods and development of physical and biological control strategies.
10. Laboratory and field evaluation of novel methods of pest control.
11. Control of storage pests using modified atmospheres.
12. Cereals: soil-borne fungal diseases.
13. Control of specific weeds and headland weed control.
14. Alternative cropping systems. Includes work on milling wheat production under organic farming systems.
15. Novel methods of pest control.

16. Field Vegetable Breeding
Genetic improvement of lettuce. Work to find new sources of genetic resistance to downy mildew, lettuce root aphid and important viral diseases.
Genetics of host resistance to disease and development of resistant breeding material for important fungal and viral diseases.

17. Field Vegetable Pests
Resistance of vegetables to insect pests, including biochemical methods of screening plant material for resistance, and pest-host plant interactions.

18. Field Vegetable Diseases
Biology, resistance and control of diseases of composites, crucifers and legumes. Methods of control through resistance, including durability of single gene resistance.
Screening for resistance to cucumber mosaic virus in marrow.

19. Field Vegetable Weeds
Development of novel programmes for weed control in vegetable crops, including cultural and other techniques for controlling weeds with less reliance on herbicides.

20. Top Fruit Breeding
To breed and select apple, pear, cherry, plum scion varieties and rootstocks which, amongst other attributes, are resistant to pests and diseases.

21. Top Fruit Protection
In vitro techniques for selection for resistance to fireblight.
In vitro techniques for testing for resistance to bacterial canker in cherry.
Biology, ecology and control of apple and pear pests, including regulation of spider mite in apples by predatory mites, regulation of P. pyncola on pears by predators.

22. Soft Fruit Breeding
Breeding and selection of strawberries and raspberries which, amongst other attributes, are resistant to pests and diseases.

23. Soft Fruit Protection
To elucidate the biology of wilt disease of strawberries and to improve control through biological means; select and exploit plant resistance for wilt control.

To study the biology, ecology and pest/damage relationships for several pest species, together with the development of control strategies.

24. Hop Production and Protection
Evaluation of wilt resistance in breeding material of hops.
Control of damson-hop aphids by introducing or encouraging the migration to hop gardens of natural predators.
Study of factors affecting the sexual activity and migration of damson-hop aphids to identify weak points in its life cycle.
Evaluation of biological agents for controlling the two-spotted spite mite.

25. Glasshouse Crop Pests
Biological control of major glasshouse pests (whitefly and red spider mite), secondary pests (especially aphids and thrips) and newly-established non-indigenous pests.

26. Glasshouse Crop Diseases
Integrated control of bacterial and fungal pathogens, utilising biological agents.

27. Evaluation of biological and other novel methods for pest control in greenhouse crops
Improvement in efficiency of Bacillus thuringiensis for arthropod pest control.
Use of fungi for control of arthropod pests.
Use of insect viruses for control of phytophagous pests.
The diagnosis of pathogens in invertebrate pest populations.
Use of insect parasite nematodes for pest control of glasshouse and mushroom pests.

28. Mushroom Protection
Novel control methods for mushroom pests, including behaviour-modifying chemicals, antagonists, repellants, and insect-parasite nematodes.
Biological control of bacterial blotch disease.

29. Hardy Ornamental Nursery Stock-Protection
Control of disease in the propagation of container-grown nursery stock, including biological control.

30. Bulb Breeding
Use of induced mutations and conventional methods to breed disease resistant Narcissus cultivars.

31. Bulb Protection
Control of fungal diseases of ornamental bulbs and corms, including screening for genetic resistance and biological control methods.

32. Development of integrated control methods for Western Flower Thrips.

33. Control of Narcissus basal rot by antagonists.

34. Influence of pests and diseases on grassland agriculture, and their control by biological means
(a) To develop non-polluting methods of controlling pests and diseases in newly-sown grassland with emphasis on legumes.
(b) To determine the magnitude of losses of grassland legumes to pests and diseases and, thereby, the potential for application of biocontrol methods to grassland.
(c) To determine the potential of endophytic fungi in ryegrass as a means of biocontrol of grassland pests.

35. Diseases and pests of forage grasses and legumes
(a) Host: nematode relationships in forage grasses.
(b) Host: nematode relationships in forage legumes.
(c) Host: fungus relationships in forage grasses.
(d) Host: fungus relationships in forage legumes.
(e) Host: virus relationships in graminaceous and legume species. Mechanisms of host resistance.
(f) Identification of genetically resistant germ plasm in grasses and forage legumes.
(g) Relationships between endophytic fungi and their grass hosts.

36. Exploit genetic variability in forage grasses
(a) Develop selection criteria and produce new gene combinations in perennial ryegrass.
(b) Enhancement of new germplasm created by hybridising Italian and perennial ryegrass and development of new gene combinations in Italian ryegrass.
(c) Develop and evaluate ryegrass/fescue hybrids with new potentials for coping with climatic change.

37. Develop techniques and exploit genetic variation to improve legumes
Exploit genetic variation to improve yield, reliability of yield persistency and seed yield in white clover.

38. Field boundaries: biological components influencing invertebrate predator overwintering
(a) To create overwintering habitats on farmland which favour the development of high numbers of polyphagous predators by modifying existing boundaries and by creating new ones.
(b) To monitor the accumulation of predators in autumn and winter in these new habitats together with their dispersal, distribution and predation rate in the crop in spring and summer.
(c) to convert the date into 'packaged' advice which could be made available via Videotex methods with ADAS co-operation.

39. Exploitation of predatory beetles and parasitic wasps resident in field margins, hedgerows and shelter belts around grassland
To enhance the number and variety of predators and parasitic invertebrates present by increasing the size, stability and diversity of the flora in hedgerows, field margins and shelter belts around grassland and to investigate ways of how this may best be achieved.

40. Epidemiology and inter-relationships between clover viruses of pasture crops and field boundary ecosystems
To determine the field host range and interactions of the major viruses and their vectors that infect white clover, relating this to the ecology of hosts in field boundaries and in grassland crops. To identify for development resistant genotypes in white clover and related species and genera.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements exist to ensure the competence of farm workers to apply pesticides; how these requirements differ according to the pesticide in use; and what are the different categories of such pesticides.

Mr. Donald Thompson: All people using pesticides have to be competent in their usage. Employees, and the self-employed, must have had adequate instruction and guidance in safe and efficient use. Additionally, people may not use certain pesticides unsupervised unless they hold an appropriate certificate of competence, or are working on their own or their employer's land, or are exempted by age. The arrangements are set out in the Ministers' consent to use pesticides (C(i)) published in the Gazettes on 20 January 1989 and in "Reference Book 500 (Pesticides 1989)".

The pesticides attracting certification as a result of consent C(i) are each identified in "Reference Book 500". In brief, these are the pesticides approved for professional cultivation of crops and management of weeds. Certification thus extends beyond farm workers, but does not cover all their activities. Pesticides approved for use as, for instance, rodenticides, or for the protection of stored products do not attract certification.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps have been taken to improve his Department's methods of responding to any public concerns on particular pesticide use or residues.

Mr. Ryder: My Department responds promptly to all new information on pesticide safety. It also provides the public with information on the government's very extensive controls on pesticides and pesticide residues, and on the widescale monitoring of residues in food and the environment which it undertakes.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those written parliamentary questions answered by his Department which had been tabled during the previous day's sitting during the last 12 months indicating the hon. Member asking each such question.

Mr. Donald Thompson: This information is not readily available within the Department but the hon. Member may be able to obtain some information from House of Commons records.

Tripe

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether he had plans to extend the ban on bovine offals for human consumption to include tripe;

(2) whether he has any evidence that tripe carries the infective agent responsible for bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The potential for tripe to carry the BSE agent is currently being studied. A decision on whether to ban its use for human consumption will be taken when the results of this study and the views of interested parties are known and have been evaluated.

Product Licences

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any information on the commercial sale and use of products for use in treating animals or fish which have not been granted a product licence.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Information on the commercial sale and use of veterinary medicinal products is not required for the purposes of the Medicines Act 1968 and is not collected by my Department.

Sheepmeat

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the future of the European Community sheepmeat regime.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Discussions on the EC Commission's proposals for a revised sheepmeat regime took place at the Agriculture Council on 19 and 20 June. Major differences of view persist amongst member states and the Council will return to this matter at a subsequent meeting.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of Compassion in World Farming to discuss animal welfare.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I last met Compassion in World Farming on 3 April and my officials last met them on 21 June.

Potato Marketing Board

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to make an announcement about the future of the Potato Marketing Board.

Mr. Ryder: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 14 June at column 411.

Coastal Defence Works

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those authorities which have made representations to him about coastal defence and repair works during the last year.

Mr. Ryder: There is continuing correspondence with various authorities on matters relating to coastal defences. During 1988-89 the following authorities made comments on policy or submitted proposals for coast protection or sea defence work:

Allerdale District Council
Alnwick District Council
Arun District Council
Blackpool Borough Council
Bournemouth Borough Council
Brighton Borough Council
Canterbury City Council
Carrick District Council
Castle Morpeth District Council
Chichester District Council
Christchurch Borough Council
Cleethorpes Borough Council
Dover District Council
Easington District Council
Eastbourne Borough Council
East Yorkshire Borough Council
Gosport Borough Council
Great Yarmouth Borough Council
Hartlepool Borough Council
Hastings Borough Council
Havant Borough Council
Holderness Borough Council
Kerrier District Council
Lancaster City Council
Langbaurgh Borough Council
Lewes District Council
New Forest District Council
North Cornwall District Council
North Norfolk District Council
Penwith District Council
Poole Borough Council
Portsmouth City Council
Purbeck District Council
Rother District Council
Scarborough Borough Council
Shepway District Council
South Hams District Council
South Lakeland District Council
South Wight District Council
Suffolk Coastal District Council
Sunderland Borough Council
Swale Borough Council
Tendering District Council

Thanet District Council
Torridge District Council
Wansbeck District Council
Waveney District Council
West Dorset District Council
West Somerset District Council
Weymouth and Portland Borough Council
Wirral Borough Council
Worthing Borough Council
Wyre Borough Council
Mappleton Parish Council
Anglian Water Authority
Southern Water Authority
Aldeburgh Town Council
Orford and Gedgrave Parish Council
Mablethorpe and Sutton Town Council

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will review British participation in the Common Agricultural Policy.

Mr. MacGregor: The treaty establishing the European Economic Community provides specifically for a common agricultural policy (CAP). The Government's policy is to participate fully in negotiations on the CAP, pressing for reform to continue, in order to increase market-orientation, control expenditure and bring supply into better balance with demand. Substantial progress has been made in this direction, though more remains to be done.

Hedgerows

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish of 16 March, Official Report, column 346, if he can now estimate how many miles of hedgerow were re-layed in the 1988-89 winter in the United Kingdom with grant-in-aid assistance.

Mr. Ryder: Figures for the full 1988-89 winter period are not yet available. In the period October-December 1988, grants were paid in the United Kingdom under the agriculture improvement scheme for the planting and laying of some 260 miles of hedgerows.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the review of the demand for veterinary surgeons to be completed.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have asked for the report to be prepared by the end of this year.

Public Relations

Mr. Blair: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which public relations firms his Department has employed and at what cost, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It is not my Department's policy to employ public relations firms.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many complaints about food poisoning he has dealt with in the past year; and what steps he is taking as a result.

Mr. Ryder: Incidents of food poisoning are generally handled by local authorities in the first instance, and the oversight of epidemiological information is the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health. However, I receive a number of representations on related matters. In the last 12 months I have, for example, introduced a comprehensive set of measures to deal with salmonella in eggs, and set in hand research on a wide range of related issues, including the susceptibility of listeria to temperatures applied in storage or cooking.

With my right hon. and learned Friend I have also issued a food hygiene leaflet entitled "Food Safety A Guide From Her Majesty's Government", and set up a committee, under the chairmanship of Professor Sir Mark Richmond, to make recommendations on the microbiological safety of food.

Unpasteurised Milk

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many letters he has received expressing opposition to the limiting of availability of unpasteurised milk; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend gave to the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill) on 13 June at column 353.

DEFENCE

Low Flying

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-flying sorties were flown over the United Kingdom by United States Air Force aircraft based in the United Kingdom in 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Neubert: A total of 21,869 low-flying sorties were flown over the United Kingdom during 1987 by United States Air Force aircraft based in the United Kingdom and 22,050 during 1988.

Lead-free Petrol

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many motorised vehicles in his Department and in the armed forces run on lead-free petrol; if he has any plans to increase the use of lead-free petrol by vehicles run by his Department and the armed forces; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: The majority of my Department's current vehicle fleet uses and will continue to use diesel fuel. We have already implemented, for petrol-engined staff cars, vans and minibuses, a policy of purchasing vehicles capable of running on unleaded petrol. The remainder of the current fleet of petrol-engined vehicles, which can be technically and cost-effectively adapted to run on unleaded petrol, is being converted during routine servicing.

Surface Fleet

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list in the Official Report the names of the destroyers and frigates of the surface fleet, available for service at 24 hours' notice on 1 June 1988, 1 January 1989, and 1 June 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Details of ships available for operations at precise periods of notice are classified. However, the names of the destroyers and frigates that were available for operational deployment immediately or within a short period for each of the dates requested are as follows:

| 1 June 1988 | 1 January 1989 | 1 June 1989 |
|---|---|---|
| HMS Achilles | HMS Achilles | HMS Achilles |
| HMS Active | HMS Active | HMS Active |
| HMS Alacrity | HMS Alacrity | HMS Alacrity |
| HMS Amazon | HMS Amazon | HMS Amazon |
| HMS Ambuscade | HMS Ambuscade | HMS Ambuscade |
| HMS Andromeda | HMS Andromeda | HMS Andromeda |
| HMS Apollo | HMS Arethusa | HMS Argonaut |
| HMS Arethusa | HMS Avenger | HMS Ariadne |
| HMS Avenger | HMS Beaver | HMS Arrow |
| HMS Battleaxe | HMS Birmingham | HMS Avenger |
| HMS Beaver | HMS Boxer | HMS Beaver |
| HMS Birmingham | HMS Brave | HMS Birmingham |
| HMS Boxer | HMS Brazen | HMS Boxer |
| HMS Brave | HMS Brilliant | HMS Brave |
| HMS Brazen | HMS Bristol | HMS Brilliant |
| HMS Bristol | HMS Broadsword | HMS Bristol |
| HMS Charybdis | HMS Cardiff | HMS Broadsword |
| HMS Cleopatra | HMS Charybdis | HMS Campbeltown |
| HMS Cornwall | HMS Cleopatra | HMS Cardiff |
| HMS Danae | HMS Cornwall | HMS Charybdis |

Electro-Magnetic Propulsion

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what expenditure has been incurred by the British Government on research and development work on the electro-magnetic propulsion of projectiles.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is not our practice to give details of funding of particular projects. However, I can say that such funding represents only a very small proportion of the defence research programme.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what work has been carried out by the royal armament research and development establishment on the electro-magnetic propulsion of projectiles.

Mr. Sainsbury: The royal armament research and development establishment has been undertaking research into electro-magnetic propulsion of projectiles since the early 1980s. It is not our practice to go into details of particular projects. However, it has a wide-ranging potential application for land, sea and air-based weapons.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any injuries have been caused as a result of research or development work into the electro-magnetic propulsion of projectiles.

Mr. Sainsbury: I am not aware of any injuries caused as a result of research or development work into electro-magnetic propulsion of projectiles undertaken in the United Kingdom.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Ministry of Defence has received any funding from the United States Department of Defence to carry out research or development work into the electro-magnetic propulsion of projectiles.

Mr. Sainsbury: Yes, in December 1986 for a period of three years.

Strategic Defence Initiative

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what work has been carried out at the royal armament research and development establishment on behalf of the United States Government strategic defence initiative programme.

Mr. Salisbury: Such a programme of work has been in hand at the royal armament research and development establishment since December 1986 with the purpose of achieving a greater understanding of electro-magnetic launcher capabilities.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Unichem Ltd.

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what action he proposes to take following the publication last month of a proposed order to prohibit UniChem Ltd. from continuing to operate its share scheme as recommended by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in its report published on 17 May.

Mr. Maude: I have today laid before the House the UniChem Limited (Allotment of Shares) Order 1989 which will come into force on 19 July. Except for a minor technical amendment, this will follow the draft order published in May.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Mr. T. Gizaw

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, in view of the libellous statements made about Mr. Louis Fitzgibbon of Portland place, Brighton by Mr. T. Gizaw, the Ethiopian press counsellor, he will take steps to expel Mr. Gizaw from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: No. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office maintains an impartial stance in this private libel action, where the facts are disputed.

Students (China)

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has made any representations to the Chinese embassy in Britain concerning the protection of the lives and interests of students from China who are studying in Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Chislehurst (Mr. Sims) on 16 June, at columns 559-60.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Tax Liability

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will indicate, for each fiscal year since 1979, the total amount of taxation income forgone by Her Majesty's Treasury as a result of extra-statutory decisions on tax liability.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Extra-statutory concessions are operated locally and it would be disproportionately expensive, for the Departments and taxpayers, to collect the detailed information needed to determine precise annual costs. Most concessions are made to deal with what are, on the whole, minor or transitory anomalies under the legislation or to meet cases of hardship at the margins of the tax code. They generally apply to relatively few people and usually involve small amounts of tax in individual cases. There are, however, some exceptions—where the numbers of taxpayers benefiting from a concession and the amounts of tax involved in individual cases are larger.

The Inland Revenue has been able to estimate, in terms of broad orders of magnitude, the current annual revenue costs of most concessions appearing in its published booklet (IR1). The details are given in the table—references are to the numbers that appear in the booklet. The five largest concessions are all practices of long standing—A1, A5 and A67 date from the 1940s, A63 from the 1960s and A65 from the start of North sea oil exploration.

| Revenue Cost—£ million | Inland Revenue (Booklet IR1) | |
|---|---|---|
| 250 | A63 | External training course—expenses borne by employer. |
| 200 | A5 | Expenses allowances and benefits in kind (mainly removal expenses and bridging loan costs borne by employers). |
| 50-100 | A67 | Payments to employees moved to higher cost housing areas. |
| 10-50 | A65 | Workers on offshore oil and gas rigs or platforms—free transfers from or to mainland. |
| | A1 | Flat rate allowances for cost of tools and special clothing.. |
| 3-10 | A2 | Meal vouchers. |
| | A6 | Miners: free coal and benefits in kind. |
| | A19 | Arrears of tax arising through official error. |
| | A22 | Long service awards. |
| | A27 | Mortgage interest relief: temporary absences from mortgaged property. |
| | D2 | Residence in the United Kingdom: year of commencement or cessation of residence. |
| | D22 | (CGT) Relief for the replacement of business assets: expenditure on improvements to existing assets. |
| | D24 | (CGT) Relief for the replacement of business assets: assets not brought immediately into trading use. |
| | D26 | (CGT) Relief for exchange of joint interests. |
| | I2 | Direct exports from tanker-loading fields. |
| | I5 | Petroleum Revenue Tax instalments. |

Of the remaining 181 Inland Revenue concessions currently in operation, which include about 40 that are obsolescent and a further eight that are being legislated this year and/or are likely to become obsolescent as a result of legislation this year, the relevant revenue costs are thought to be:

| Revenue Cost—£ million | Number of Concessions |
|---|---|
| 0·5-3 | 13 |
| 0·1-0·5 | 30 |
| below 0·1 | 85 |

This leaves 53 for which the costs are not known, although the majority of these are thought unlikely to involve significant amounts of tax.

Customs and Excise concessions are published in notice 748. They have 39 concessions currently in operation, of which nine are being legislated this year. They estimate that at least 10 of these—and almost certainly more—involve minimal negligible cost in terms of tax forgone.

War Loans

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will redeem the 3½ per cent. war loans; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: There are no plans to redeem 3½ per cent. war loan.

EC Finance Ministers

Mr. Adley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next intends to meet his EC counterparts; and what he intends to discuss.

Mr. Brooke: EC Finance Ministers meet on a regular basis. The next Ecofin Council will take place in Brussels on 10 July 1989.

HOME DEPARTMENT

European Elections

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has received any representations about enabling EEC nationals, long resident in the United Kingdom to vote for United Kingdom Members of the European Parliament; what is his policy on this; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We receive, from time to time, representations that citizens of other European Community states should be able to vote in European Parliament elections held here. It is for the European Parliament to make any recommendation for such a system to be adopted by the member states and none has as yet been forthcoming.

Unconvicted Juveniles

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he is seeking alternative accommodation to B wing of Hull prison for unconvicted juveniles; and whether he is considering the former detention centre at Gringley-on-the-Hill as a possible alternative.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There is at present no practicable alternative accommodation for the unconvicted juvenile prisoners who are held in B wing of Hull prison. The accommodation at the former detention centre at Gringley is unsuitable for those prisoners. However the Department of Health and the local authority have reviewed the need for secure accommodation for 15 and 16-year-old boys in the region and plans for a new unit for the Yorkshire and Humberside region are well advanced with a target date for opening in early 1991. A 300-place remand centre is also planned to open on Humberside in 1991. Meanwhile a programme of action has been put in hand to improve conditions in Hull B wing.

Mr. Albert Baker

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Brent, East, 6 April, Official Report, column 239, if he will make a further statement as to the case of Mr. Albert Baker.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Mr. Baker was refused leave to move for judicial review of the Government's decision not to transfer him to Northern Ireland. His petitions remain under consideration and a reply will be sent to him as soon as possible.

DNA Testing

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the projected public expenditure savings arising from the introduction of a central DNA testing scheme for those seeking entry clearance to the United Kingdom; and if he will identify the savings to his Department and also the appellate authorities.

Mr. Renton: We do not anticipate any reduction in Home Office expenditure from the introduction of a central DNA testing scheme into the entry clearance process overseas. The administration of the immigration appeals system is the responsibility of my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor.

Chinese Students

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he is taking any special steps to protect the lives and interests of students from China who are studying in Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: If any Chinese student feels at risk in the United Kingdom he or she should contact the police.

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will allow all students from China who are studying in Britain to extend their stay during the current crisis; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will estimate the number of students from China studying in Britain.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 16 June to questions from the hon. Members for Leyton (Mr. Cohen), for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) and for Tooting (Mr. Cox) at column 566.

PRIME MINISTER

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if, during the visit of the Prime Minister of Spain on 19 June, she raised the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and prospects for new initiatives to be developed with North Atlantic Treaty Organisation allies in the lead up to the fourth review conference on the nuclear non-proliferation treaty in 1990.

The Prime Minister: No, but the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and related matters are regularly discussed with Spain at official level.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if, during her meeting with the President-Designate of the Republic of South Africa, Mr. de Klerk, on 23 June, she raised the prospects of South Africa joining the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

The Prime Minister: No, but the issue was raised by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs during his talks with Mr. de Klerk.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Environmental Research

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to increase his Department's budget for sponsoring research into environmental matters and ensuring that the findings of such research are readily available to inform policy making at a national and local level.

Mr. Jackson: The findings of research into environmental matters sponsored by this Department are published in national and international scientific journals. The Natural Environment Reseach Council publishes an annual report which is laid before the House; copies of the latest report, for 1987-88, are available in the Library. The NERC also issues an annual corporate plan, annual reports of each of its institutes, and other publications detailing strategies in individual areas of science; copies of these are available direct from the NERC. The other research councils have similar arrangements. The Government review their expenditure plans each year after they have received advice from the Advisory Board for the Research Councils.

Parents

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the contribution of parents to the life and work of schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend and I view the contribution of parents to the life and work of schools as having the utmost importance, and many of our policies are designed to extend parental choice and influence. The Department has funded a major research project to examine the involvement of parents in their children's schooling. The report on the project is due later this year.

Teacher Recruitment

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has to ease the problems of teacher recruitment (a) in shortage subjects and (b) in regions of high living costs.

Mr. Butcher: Action to tackle teacher shortages has been aimed in particular at London and the south-east where recruitment is hindered by the cost of housing. We have in place a series of measures which have cost £50 million over the last three years. The education support grant programme for 1990-91 includes support for expenditure of £2 million on local recruitment activity.

Teachers

Sir William Shelton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the number of teachers in (a) higher education and (b) postgraduate studies in each year since 1979; and what has been their average real earnings in each such year.

Mr. Jackson: Data are not readily available in the form requested. However, the following may be helpful. The number of teachers in (a) universities and (b) polytechnics, and average salaries for each group are shown in the following tables.

| Year | Number of Lecturers | Average Salary £ | Real Terms |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1979 | 18,585 | 8,458 | 100·0 |
| 1980 | 18,757 | 9,979 | 96·9 |
| 1981 | 18,409 | 11,187 | 97·0 |
| 1982 | 17,406 | 11,936 | 94·6 |
| 1983 | 17,200 | 12,543 | 95·5 |
| 1984 | 16,504 | 13,342 | 96·6 |
| 1985 | 16,970 | 13,964 | 94·6 |
| 1986 | 16,959 | 14,242 | 93·6 |
| 1987 | 16,479 | 16,592 | 104·6 |

Note

1. These figures relate to lecturers' salaries and exclude other staff including professors, readers and senior lecturers for whom data are not readily available. Information on total earnings is not collected.
2. The figures relate to full-time, non-clinical academic staff at universities in Great Britain.
3. The Real Terms column is indexed using the Retail Prices Index as at April, with 1979 taken as 100.

Table B

| Polytechnics | Number of Staff | Average Salary | Real Terms |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1979 | 16,854 | 7,462 | 100·0 |
| 1980 | 17,042 | 9,016 | 92·2 |
| 1981 | 16,824 | 11,399 | 112·0 |
| 1982 | 16,250 | 12,359 | 111·0 |
| 1983 | 15,883 | 13,152 | 113·5 |
| 1984 | 15,642 | 13,842 | 113·6 |
| 1985 | 15,490 | 14,481 | 111·2 |
| 1986 | 15,548 | 15,453 | 115·1 |
| 1987 | 15,299 | 16,291 | 116·4 |

Note

1. The figures for polytechnics relate to all grades up to and including Principals and to England and Wales only.
2. The Real Terms column is indexed as for universities.

Further and Higher Education

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, how many people stayed on in full-time education after 16 for each of the last five years.

Mr. Robert Jackson: The information is as follows:

Participation in full-time education: England. Percentage of age group

| | Age at previous 31 August | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| | 16 | 17 | 18 |
| 1984 | 45 | 31 | 17 |
| 1985 | 45 | 31 | 17 |
| 1986 | 45 | 32 | 17 |
| 1987 | 45 | 32 | 17 |
| 1988 | 47 | 33 | 18 |

Examination Dates

Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions he has had with education authorities and examination bodies over the possibility of moving the main dates for the General Certificate of Secondary Education and A-levels from the summer.

Mrs. Angela Rumbold: None.

Teacher Morale

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he proposes to answer the letter of 17 March concerning teacher morale, sent to him by the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside, acknowledged 20 March, Ref. 55 JB/0525/0076; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: I replied to the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside on 26 June.

WALES

Cynon Valley (Pollution)

91. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on environmental pollution at the Phurnacite plant in the Cynon valley.

Mr. Grist: The hon. Lady will know from discussions and correspondence with my right hon. Friend that he is fully aware of local feelings about pollution from the Phurnacite plant. Coal Products Ltd's applications for planning permission for proposed developments at the plant to replace the outdated disticoke batteries with a mild heat treatment process are being considered by the local planning authority, Cynon Valley borough council. If planning permissions are given, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution will need to be satisfied that the process is designed to meet current emission control standards before it is allowed to operate.

Liver Disease

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people died in Wales of cirrhosis of the liver in each of years 1975 to 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The numbers of deaths of residents of Wales where the underlying cause of death was recorded as cirrhosis of the liver were as follows:

| Year | Deaths |
|---|---|
| 1975 | 139 |
| 1976 | 123 |
| 1977 | 121 |
| 1978 | 111 |

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Irradiated Food

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library copies of any reports on the health effects of food irradiation which indicate that irradiated food might be unsafe.

Mr. MacGregor: A full review of the health effects of irradiation was carried out in the United Kingdom by the independent scientific Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods, whose report contains an extensive bibliography. Copies of this report are in the Library. Similar reviews have also been carried out by the World Health Organisation, the Food and Agriculture Organisation and scientists of the EC Scientific Committee for Food. All have concluded that irradiated food is both safe and wholesome.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Government's policy for the labelling of irradiated food, in the wholesale, retail and catering sectors, respectively.

Mr. MacGregor: The Council of the European Communities agreed on 14 June to amend the food labelling directive to provide for specific indication on the label of foodstuffs that have been irradiated. This requirement will be implemented into United Kingdom food labelling legislation in due course. Wholesale and retail sales are covered by the directive, as are sales to caterers, but not sales by caterers. The question of such labelling in the catering sector will therefore need to be given detailed consideration, bearing in mind my clear commitment to informed consumer choice in this matter.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the studies which have been conducted into the effects on human and animal health of food irradiation.

Mr. MacGregor: A full list could not be collated without undue expenditure of time and effort since research has been undertaken in a number of countries over a period of more than 40 years. References to the main studies will be found in appendix G to the report on the safety and wholesomeness of irradiated foods by the Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods. A copy of this report is in the Library.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the radiolytic products which have been identified in irradiated food.

Mr. MacGregor: Most of the known radiolytic products in irradiated food are found either naturally in some foods or are formed as a result of cooking or other methods of preservation. The lack of unique radiolytic products is also reflected in the absence of a detection test for irradiated food. Extensive research has so far failed to find a radiolytic product which could be used as the basis of such a test.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the nutrients and vitamins in food which may be adversely affected by irradiation.

Mr. MacGregor: Some destruction of nutrients, including vitamins, occurs with cooking, storage and processing of all foods. In the case of proteins, carbohydrates and minerals, studies in general reveal no detectable effect through irradiation at the low levels of dose contemplated. The small reduction in some vitamins noticed in some studies would not produce any adverse dietary effects, and nutritional losses through irradiation are not considered to be significant in the diet as a whole. Nevertheless the nutrient content of irradiated food will be monitored under the existing arrangements for monitoring the nutrient content of all foods.

Mr. David Young: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the commercial organisations that wrote to or lobbied him in favour of irradiation of food.

Mr. MacGregor: No commercial organisation has lobbied me on the irradiation of food. Support has, however, been publicly expressed by the Food and Drink Federation, the Spice Trade Association and the Institute of Cereals Manufacturers.

Farm Animal Welfare

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce legislation to safeguard the welfare of animals on farms.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Part I of the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968 already makes it an offence to cause unnecessary pain or distress to farm livestock. In addition, regulations on farm animal welfare and welfare codes have been made under the Act. I hope soon to lay before the House draft regulations that will make some of the welfare code provisions mandatory.

Abattoirs

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he has taken following recent reports that local authorities are failing to enforce regulations for abattoirs relating to hygiene, safety and humane killing.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Recent reports in the media have criticised conditions in some slaughterhouses without identifying the establishments concerned. It is the responsibility of all, including those who produce such reports, to draw to the attention of the appropriate local authority any breaches in the law which they may have witnessed.

Local authorities take their enforcement responsibilities very seriously and I am confident that none would hesitate to take appropriate action if abuses were reported.

Officers of the state veterinary service visit all slaughterhouses to monitor hygiene and welfare standards and give advice to enforcement authorities.

National Fruit Collection

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to prevent the dispersal of the national fruit collection and archives at Brogdale.

Mr. Donald Thompson: We have made clear our intention to ensure that the national fruit collection and its associated records are preserved, and we are considering what arrangements should be made in the event that Brogdale experimental horticulture station is closed.

Torry Research Station

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are his plans for Torry research station; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Torry research station is one of the world's leading research institutes in the area of fish safety, hygiene and quality. It carries out a programme costing over £2 million per annum in support of Government policies for food safety and quality. In accordance with the high priority which the Government attach to these policies, this work, which includes important underpinning research, is to continue.

In addition, there is work at Torry research station which is mainly concerned with product and process development. We have consulted the fishing and related industries about their readiness to fund near-market work in these areas. However, the industries have shown very little readiness to fund such work. Accordingly we are now setting in train the necessary steps to concentrate the research at Torry on those areas of work which are required in support of our policies for food safety and quality. This will mean stopping about one third of Torry's current programme. About 30 posts at the laboratory will be lost, although we will endeavour to keep the number of compulsory redundancies to a minimum. Naturally, if between now and the completion of this exercise, any new industry funding is forthcoming we will be ready to try to retain the necessary expertise and facilities to meet the proposed research contracts. In any event, I expect Torry research station to continue to attract significant outside funding for analytical services and consultancies as it has done in recent years.

Forestry

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the decline in commercial forestry planting levels in England and Wales.

Mr. MacGregor: During the last six months I have received nine representations about the possible effects on planting levels of the forestry taxation changes introduced in the 1988 Budget. Some of these were general comments, while others referred to the problems of woodland maintenance and the difficulties faced by forest nurseries. None of the representations referred specifically to a decline in commercial forestry planting levels in England.

The situation in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Monofilament Gill Nets

Dr. Godman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he is able to estimate how many fishing vessels registered in English ports deploy monofilament gill nets, where they normally fish and for which species;

(2) if he is able to estimate the number of fishing vessels registered at ports in Wales which deploy monofilament gill nets, where they normally fish and for which species.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 15 June 1989]: Data collected by my Department in 1988 of the landings of seafish made by registered vessels over 10 metres show that 251 vessels in England and six vessels in Wales used gill or enmeshing nets, the majority of which would have been of monofilament construction. Comparable data are not collected for landings made by vessels under 10 metres, but we estimate that some 1,000 craft under 10 metres in England and 200 craft in Wales would have used gill or enmeshing nets. some of these boats will also be licensed to fish salmon and sea trout. An illustrative map showing the location of the main gill net fisheries off England and Wales and the principal species caught has been placed in the Library of the House.

HEALTH

Cook-chill Food

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the implications for the food consumer of vitamin losses which occur during the cook-chill process;

(2) what evaluation of the nutritional content of cook-chill food has been undertaken in the United Kingdom;

(3) what information his Department has collected on whether foods which are high in polyunsaturated acids are suitable for use in the cook-chill process.

Mr. Freeman: After a thorough review of the available data the working group of independent experts concluded that wherever food is heated and/or stored there will be nutrient losses. Where food is to be stored, consideration at the menu planning stage should be given to the reduction in the amount of foods with high levels of polyunsaturated fatty acids as they are particularly prone to rancidity during storage.

The expert group considered that the nutritional loss in a properly managed cook-chill catering system were no more than in any other large-scale catering system.

Listeria

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest information his Department has received regarding the levels of heat resistance of listeria in food.

Mr. Freeman: The Department has received copies of the MAFF-sponsored research carried out by the Camden Food and Drink Research Association.

Dental Laboratories

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what encouragement his Department gives to general dental practitioners to use the certification scheme for dental laboratories;

(2) what involvement his Department has with the certification scheme for dental laboratories; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: At present there is no certification scheme for dental laboratories. The Dental Laboratories Association (DLA) has taken the initiative in the formation of an independent body known as the Certification Authority for Dental Laboratories and Suppliers (CADLAS), which plans to commence operation from October 1989.

The Department's NHS procurement directorate was approached by the DLA on this matter in November 1987. Since then the directorate's technical staff have encouraged, advised and held discussions with the DLA about CADLAS, in terms of participating in a series of seminars arranged by the DLA throughout the United Kingdom, sending an observer to the first two meetings of the CADLAS council and advising CADLAS on quality assurance requirements and the draft good manufacturing practice (GMP) standard.

The Department accepts the need for a recognised system of quality assurance in this field and is confident that CADLAS is equipped to fulfil this role. Its ultimate success will, however, depend on its acceptance and recognition by dental practitioners who have the prime responsibility for the quality of dental prosthetics.

Midwives

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will lay before the House the Government's response to the fourth report of the Select Committee on Social Services, HC 289, Session 1988-89, on midwives' regrading.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon and learned Friend has done so today.

The Government welcome the Committee's interest in this matter, and have carefully studied its report and recommendations. The Government wish to take this opportunity of emphasising the importance that they attach to the role of the midwifery profession within the National Health Service and their recognition of the skilful and dedicated contribution that midwives make to the welfare of mothers and babies.

The Government followed the principle set out in the Committee's fourth recommendation—that future regrading exercises for NHS staff be separated from assimilation to the new pay scales—when implementing the new grading structure for nursing and midwifery educational staff, but for the reasons given in their response are unable to accept the remaining recommendations.

In the Government's view, it is important that the Committee's report should be considered in the wider context. Since March 1988 alone, midwives' pay has increased by over 28 per cent. on average, and the pay of midwives, like that of nurses and health visitors, is now at its highest-ever level in real terms. For the nine out of 10 staff midwives graded E or above in the new clinical grading structure, and the three out of four midwifery sisters graded G, pay levels are now 50 per cent. higher in real terms than they were in 1979. Moreover, the new structure gives midwives, like nurses and health visitors, better clinical career prospects than ever before.

EMPLOYMENT

Public Relations

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which public relations firms his Department has employed and at what cost, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Cope: Apart from the special circumstances of privatisation work, the consistent practice of successive Governments has been to avoid the use of public relations firms or other firms outside government for public relations work. The Department has not employed any.

Employment Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much his Department paid out in advance funding to employment training agents and managers; how much has been recouped; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available except at disproportionate cost.

All employment training (ET) training agents and training managers other than local authorities were entitled to 100 per cent. advance funding in the first three months of ET. Advances will be recouped where appropriate up to August 1989.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will state (a) the production cost, (b) the amount spent on television advertising so far and (c) the projected campaign budget, in respect of the current commercial for employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: The information required is as follows:

(a) The production cost of the commercial was £494,500. This included producing both the 60 and 40 second versions.

(b) The amount spent on television advertising up to 21 June 1989 is £2,024,000 excluding production costs.

(c) The projected budget for the current TV campaign excluding production costs is £3,795,000.

All figures are inclusive of value added tax.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment to what extent extended introduction is being made available to people with disabilities on employment training; and whether its uptake is monitored by training agents, training managers and the employment rehabilitation service.

Mr. Nicholls: Disabled people form part of the client group which extended introduction is designed to help. Opportunities to join extended introduction are available in all the Department's Training Agency's areas. Statistics are not available on the number of disabled people entering extended introduction. However, training managers work to remove any obstacles such as premises constraints which could make it difficult for disabled people to take advantage of extended introduction.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures are being taken to inform disablement resettlement officers of the residential training provision available to disabled people wishing to take part in the employment training programme.

Mr. Lee: The initial training of disablement resettlement officers includes information about residential training provision and incorporates a visit to a residential training college. While in post, they receive further information through written instructions and guidance, as well as through newsletters and information packs which detail the residential training available. Disablement resettlement officers have also taken part in Training Agency workshops about employment training, including residential provision for trainees.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of trainees currently taking part in the employment training programme are registered as disabled under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944.

Mr. Nicholls: Information is not presently available in the form requested. However, people who identified themselves as having a disability or long-term health problem which affects the work they can do make up 12 per cent. of entrants to employment training.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of the disabled trainees who entered the employment training programme by the end of February, are currently training with an employer on a work placement.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available.

Training Bonuses

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about his future policy on paying training bonuses in 1991-92, and when employment training is run by training and enterprise councils.

Mr. Nicholls: The policy for payment of training bonuses remains unchanged.

Business on Own Account Scheme

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications for the business on own account scheme were received for each of the last five years for which figures are available; how many were approved; and what were the total grants made in each year.

Mr. Lee: The information requested about the business on own account scheme is given in the table:

| | Number of applications | Number of approvals | Expenditure on grants £ |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1984-85 | 15 | 7 | 26,272 |
| 1985-86 | 14 | 5 | 42,506 |
| 1986-87 | 12 | 1 | 4,211 |
| 1987-88 | 9 | 6 | 22,012 |
| 1988-89 | 16 | 8 | 30,454 |

The future development of my Department's special schemes for people with disabilities, including the business on own account scheme is being considered as part of our internal review of services for people with disabilities.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the messages he has received from pensioner organisations (a) agreeing and (b) disagreeing with the sentiments of his recent speech to Age Concern.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the recent speech of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State at the sheltered housing conference on 5 June. We have received no messages from pensioner organisations relating to the speech made on that occasion.

Social Fund

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what proportion of applications to social fund inspectors the applicant is represented.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The social fund commissioner has advised me that the information requested is not collected.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department's Woolwich office have been allocated for (a) social fund loans and (b) social fund grants in 1989-90; and what were the comparable figures in the preceding year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is available in the Library.

Independent Living Fund

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many civil servants and at what grade run the independent living fund.

Mr. Scott: Thirty-two, ranging in grade from administrative assistant to senior executive officer, working under the direction of the trustees of the fund.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will brief local social security offices about the independent living fund; and if he will make appropriate forms available at those offices.

Mr. Scott: Guidance on the independent living fund has been issued to all local offices. Posters and explanatory leaflets publicising the fund, and explaining how an application form may be obtained, have also been issued.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the budget for the independent living fund for each of the years for which figures are available.

Mr. Scott: Up to £5 million was made available for the first year of the independent living fund. A further £5 million has been made available for the current year, but this figure is under continuous review.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the criteria for deciding how much money an applicant gets from the independent living fund.

Mr. Scott: The amount payable is decided by the trustees and is based on the cost of reasonable care which cannot be met from other sources.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what items of guidance, by topic, his Department has issued to local authorities on the independent living fund.

Mr. Scott: The director of the independent living fund is writing to all local authority directors of social services, bringing the fund to their attention, and explaining what help it can give to severely disabled people.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to advertise the independent living fund to potential claimants.

Mr. Scott: Publicity for the independent living fund has been mainly through the specialist press and organisations representing disabled people. The trustees are responsible for publicity and are continuing to use various methods to make the fund even more widely known.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated cost per successful application for housing benefit transitional payments made by the Glasgow unit of his Department.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 12 June 1989]: The work of the transitional payments unit (TPU) involves the processing of applications and correspondence from applicants and local authorities, making awards and payments to successful applicants, liaising with local authorities, producing leaflets and claim forms, and maintaining a free advice line. Both capital and manpower costs were heavily concentrated in the unit's first year of operation; administrative costs have fluctuated according to the level of activity in the unit and will decline significantly in future years. It is not possible to apportion the costs of the TPU between the activities undertaken, nor to produce a cost per claim. However, the full administrative costs of the unit in 1988-89 amounted to 21p in every pound of expenditure on the transitional payments scheme in that year.

Transitional Protection Unit

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will publish his Department instructions issued to the transitional protection unit and place a copy in the Library;

(2) whether the instructions issued by his Department to the transitional protection unit includes a restriction on the amount of housing benefit transitional protection which can be paid because a local authority is rate-capped; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 June 1989]: The housing benefit transitional payments scheme is intended to provide help to vulnerable groups of claimants who experienced reductions in their housing benefit as a result of changes introduced by the Government in April 1988. Because the method of calculating transitional payments involves a comparison between housing benefit in payment before and after 4 April 1988, some applicants who lived in an area whose local authority was rate-capped and which reduced its domestic rates and who were therefore entitled to a lesser amount of housing benefit may well have received a transitional payment for this reason and not because of the Government's changes to the housing benefit scheme. The procedural instructions to the transitional payments unit (TPU) do not provide for a different assessment in these cases, but some cases (less than 100) were incorrectly assessed and transitional payment was reduced on account of rate capping. If the hon. Member is aware of any such cases and will supply the Department with details, the transitional payment will be reassessed and arrears paid.

In view of the proximity of the closing date for applications (30 June) and the transitory nature of the scheme there are no current plans to publish the TPU instruction manual.

TRANSPORT

Trunk Roads (London)

Sir William Shelton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total capital expenditure invested in trunk roads in London in 1988-89.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Capital expenditure on motorways and trunk roads in 1988-89 amounted to nearly £74 million. Of that total, just over £12 million was spent on capital maintenance.

Light Dues

Mr. Patrick Thomson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the amount of light dues paid by fishing vessels during the year 1987-88; and what was the original estimate.

Mr. Portillo: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Moray (Mrs. Ewing) on 16 February at column 285. The general lighthouse authorities have now received some £191,000 in light dues paid for United Kingdom-registered fishing vessels for the financial year 1987-88. A similar sum is estimated to have been received in light dues paid by non-United Kingdom registered fishing vessels, but disproportionate effort would be required to establish a precise figure.

Ports

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much public subsidy is given to British ports; and what is the situation in EEC countries.

Mr. Portillo: The only grants that the Government make to British ports are for fishing harbour projects and severance payments to surplus registered dock workers. A few local authorities fund the losses of ports which they own. In some other member states public funds meet a large proportion of the cost of port infrastructure developments. Certain ports in all parts of the Community may also receive grants from the European regional development fund.

Mr. Patrick Thomson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by (a) volume and (b) value the amount of trade handled by British ports in each year since 1979.

Mr. Portillo: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise data on the volume and value of imports and exports through the seaports of the United Kingdom from 1979 to 1988 (excluding imports of oil and gas by pipeline from the Norwegian sector of the North sea) are as follows:

Trade through United Kingdom sea ports

| | Volume (million tonnes) | | Value (billion pounds) | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Imports | Exports | Imports | Exports |
| 1979 | 156·0 | 89·3 | 38·1 | 31·7 |
| 1980 | 130·9 | 93·0 | 38·1 | 37·0 |
| 1981 | 121·0 | 116·5 | 40·7 | 40·4 |
| 1982 | 120·8 | 115·7 | 45·7 | 43·9 |
| 1983 | 117·6 | 121·5 | 51·8 | 47·2 |
| 1984 | 137·7 | 127·2 | 61·3 | 53·8 |
| 1985 | 142·3 | 133·1 | 66·9 | 59·7 |
| 1986 | 147·9 | 137·6 | 67·8 | 53·6 |
| 1987 | 149·9 | 136·0 | 74·5 | 58·3 |
| [1]1988 | 160·6 | 123·1 | 82·3 | 59·0 |

[1] Provisional.

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers, cars and coaches passed through Britain's ports in each year since 1979.

Mr. Portillo: Information on car, coach and international passenger movements through the seaports of Great Britain, up to 1987, is published in "Transport Statistics Great Britain 1977-1987" (tables 1.9 and 4.11) copies of which are in the Library. Car and coach figures include domestic movements except those to the Isle of Wight. Corresponding figures for 1988 are 4,234,000 cars, including 262,000 by hovercraft services, 170,000 buses and coaches, and 24,867,000 passengers.

Road Traffic Studies

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether those undertaking the London assessment studies have been asked to include consideration of road pricing, area licensing and other methods of road traffic restraint in arriving at their conclusions and recommendations.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The consultants will carry out sensitivity tests on a range of options within the study areas. These tests will assess the effects of road traffic restraint measures on the options.

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received any representations from individuals or organisations in the Chiswick area in favour of the new road proposals through Chiswick and Grove Park contained in the west London assessment study published in 1988; and whether he will give summary details of such representations.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have received a large number of representations from individuals and organisations in the Chiswick area on different aspects of the west London assessment study. It would not be practicable to analyse them in the way requested.

Sir Barney Hayhoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the results of stage 2B of the west London assessment study; and whether he proposes a period of public consultation before the announcement of the Government's response.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We expect to receive the consultants report on their assessment of options later in the summer. They will be published as soon as possible thereafter. There will be an opportunity for public comment before decisions are taken.

Aircraft Noise

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, following the report of the inter-departmental land compensation working party, he will state the Government's policy in regard to insulation and compensation for injurious affection of schools and hospitals that are subjected to military aircraft noise exceeding 70 dba.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The general position is that compensation for injurious affection arising from the use of public works including airfields is limited to owners and owner-occupiers of residential property, owner-occupiers of agricultural property and owner occupiers of hereditaments not exceeding a rateable value of £2,250. There are no proposals to extend this eligibility.

The land compensation working party set up a sub-group to look at the Noise Insulation Regulations 1975 and regulations governing certain civil airports with a view to their possible extension to buildings other than dwellings. It is expected that the sub-group's report will be submitted in July.

Buildings near military airfields are not covered by these statutory provisions. However, the Ministry of Defence deals with them on analogous basis. Their noise compensation scheme would reflect any change to the statutory provisions.

Public Transport (South-East London)

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what forecast demand studies have been made for future public transport requirements in south-east London.

Mr. Portillo: I know of no recent specific studies of public transport demand in south-east London, but the consultants working on the south London and south circular assessment studies are considering whether public transport options might help to solve the problems which those studies are addressing.

Night Flights

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many night flights have (a) been authorised and (b) taken place in the current year and last year at (i) Gatwick, (ii) Heathrow and (iii) Manchester airports.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Quota and actual movement information for the three airports is as follows:

| | Gatwick | | Heathrow | | Manchester | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Quota | Actual | Quota | Actual | Quota | Actual |
| 1988 Summer | 4,430 (60) | 4,430 (57) | 2,750 (60) | 1,830 | 6,760 | 6,723 |
| 1988-89 Winter | 2,025 (30) | 2,040 (11) | 2,982 (30) | 3,002 (30) | — | 1,464 |
| 1989 Summer | 4,580 (60) | 1,281 ( 5) | 2,750 (60) | 802 (39) | 7,098 | 2,179 |

Notes:
1. 1989 summer 'actual' figures are given to 17 June.
2. Figures in brackets are delayed noisy movements subject to special quota.
3. Figures for Manchester airport provided by Manchester Airport plc who are responsible for setting the monitoring quotas at that airport. Winter night jet operations at Manchester are not subject to quota restrictions.
4. The current summer season does not end until 24.00 hours on 28 October.
5. At Gatwick and Heathrow the night noise restrictions permit the airport manager to disregard flights from the restrictions if they are delayed by widespread and prolonged disruption of air traffic or in other exceptional circumstances. In the summer season of 1988 Gatwick Airport Limited disregarded for quota purposes 1,598 movements and Heathrow Airport Limited disregarded 97. In the winter season 1988-89 Gatwick disregarded 95 movements while Heathrow disregarded 56 movements. At Manchester whilst restrictions were temporarily suspended for the same reason there were 961 night flights. All these flights are additional to the figures already mentioned.
6. The quota of 3,000 movements for winter 1988-89 at Heathrow was reduced to 2,982 because 18 infringements of the maximum permitted noise level were recorded prior to 31 January.

Noisy Aircraft

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what progress he has made in international negotiations towards the phasing out of noisy aircraft including the BAC 1-11 and the B727; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what progress he has made internationally in developing controls over aeroplanes certificated to ICAO's annex 16, volume 1, chapter 2 standards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Internationally the Government have been actively pursuing their objective, first stated in the 1985 White Paper on airports policy (para 8.5), of securing the phasing out of chapter 2 aeroplanes such as the BAC1-11 and B727. Since aircraft have long operational lives, the replacement of chapter 2 by chapter 3 aircraft will be a long and expensive process, but a start has been made with the decision, supported by the United Kingdom, of the European civil aviation conference that from 1 October 1990 no further chapter 2 aircraft should be added to member states' registers. The issue of the eventual banning of operations of chapter 2 aircraft is one of the main topics to be discussed at the International Civil Aviation Organisation's general assembly in the autumn.

Manchester Airport

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he is satisfied that Manchester airport plc has consulted adequately in conformity with section 35 of the Civil Aviation Act 1982 with representatives from local authorities affected by excessive aircraft noise.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This is a matter between Manchester Airport plc and the local authorities in the neighbourhood of the airport.

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the designation of Manchester airport under sections 78 and 79 of the Civil Aviation Act 1982.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: My right hon. Friend is considering the various representations he has received about designation.

Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he has any plans to lower the maximum permissible take-off noise levels at Manchester airport;

(2) if he has any plans to seek an improvement in the monitoring of noise levels in the vicinity of Manchester airport.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: These are both matters for Manchester Airport plc.

London Underground

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations he has received regarding the provision of an extension of the Northern line of the tube into south-east London to Camberwell and beyond since January 1989;

(2) what assessment has been made of the socio-economic effects of an extension of the Northern line of the Underground to Camberwell and beyond, with particular reference to the effects of improving transport links to areas of higher employment in attracting new enterprise into the area;

(3) what assessment has been made of the effects of an extension of the Northern line of the Underground to Camberwell and beyond on overcrowding in the Victoria area;

(4) what assessment has been made of the effects of an extension of the Northern line of the Underground into south-east London to Camberwell and beyond on congestion on the roads of south-east London;

(5) if, following the publication of the central London rail study in January 1989 and subsequent representations, he intends to provide for an extension of the Northern line to Camberwell and beyond; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The Department has received 17 letters supporting the extension of the Underground to Camberwell. The central London rail study concluded that such an extension would not achieve the study's objectives. It is now for London Underground Limited and London Regional Transport to consider in the first instance whether a line to Camberwell is worthwhile in its own right and how it compares with the many competing schemes for improvements to the Underground network.

Banbury Trunk Relief Road

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce his decision in respect of the inspector's report relating to the compulsory purchase, side roads and bridge orders concerning the Banbury trunk relief road, stages II and III.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Within the next few weeks.

Driver and Vehicle Statistics

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will detail the number of vehicle first registrations, and of replacement driving licences issued by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing centre, Swansea in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The numbers of first vehicle registrations and replacement driving licences issued have increased by some 15 per cent. and 100 per cent. respectively since 1979-80. The tables provide the year-on-year information (the volumes include commercial vehicles and motorcycles, as well as cars):

Vehicle First Registrations 1978-80/1980-89

| Year | Volume |
|---|---|
| 1979-80 | 2,386,868 |
| 1980-81 | 2,038,140 |
| 1981-82 | 2,004,335 |
| 1982-83 | 2,211,126 |
| 1983-84 | 2,306,742 |
| 1984-85 | 2,253,508 |
| 1985-86 | 2,277,893 |
| 1986-87 | 2,365,901 |
| 1987-88 | 2,554,442 |
| 1988-89 | 2,736,327 |

Replacement Driving Licences 1979-80/1980-89

| Year | Volume |
|---|---|
| 1979-80 | 1,469,295 |
| 1980-81 | 1,576,957 |
| 1981-82 | 1,354,354 |
| 1982-83 | 1,869,745 |
| 1983-84 | 1,972,378 |
| 1984-85 | 2,035,602 |
| 1985-86 | 2,295,228 |
| 1986-87 | 2,808,782 |
| 1987-88 | 2,920,831 |
| 1988-89 | 2,930,869 |

Privatisation

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has for any future privatisation programme; and if he will name the financial advisers employed to advise on such a programme.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend keeps the options for further privatisation under constant review. A study of the long-term options for British Rail is in progress, including the feasibility of transfer to the private sector.

As part of that work Deloitte, Haskins and Sells was appointed to carry out a factual study of the structural options, National Economic Research Associates to advise on regulation and Samuel Montagu to provide financial advice.

ENVIRONMENT

Dogs

13. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he proposes to deal with the problem of dog fouling.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: As my right hon. Friend announced in the House on 14 June, we propose to place on local authorities a duty to clear up dog mess in public places. This will be enforced through a code of practice to which local authorities will be required to adhere.

65. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department uses a definition of domestic pet in relation to the keeping of dogs in private homes.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No. The Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 lists those animals for which licences are required if kept on domestic premises.

44. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions has he had with local authority associations concerning dogs and public health.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No formal discussions have taken place recently. We shall, however, be consulting the local authority associations and other interested organisations shortly about the proposal that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 14 June to place on local authorities a duty to deal with strays and clear up dog faeces in public places.

Dogs (Registration)

16. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received in the last month concerning the registration of dogs.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have received a large number of representations on this matter. My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Home Secretary announced on 14 June a package of measures to deal with the problems caused by irresponsible dog ownership—dog attacks, straying and fouling. Registration is not the answer to these problems.

69. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the estimated cost of a compulsory dog registration scheme.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have made no such estimate. A recent report by the London school of economics on behalf of the RSPCA estimates that the cost of administering and keeping up to date a national dog registration scheme would be about £20 million annually. We do not believe that dog registration addresses the real problems caused by dogs.

Council House Sales

17. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will take measures to penalise local authorities which are inefficient in processing council house sale applications.

31. Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he implemented the provision in the Housing Act 1988 for council tenants to set aside rent against mortgage payments in the event of delays by councils in processing their applications to buy their homes.

48. Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he proposes to speed up the processing of council house sale applications.

51. Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he implemented the provision in the Housing Act 1988 for council tenants to set aside rent against mortgage payments in the event of delays by councils in processing their applications to buy their homes.

60. Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will take measures to penalise local authorities which are inefficient in processing council house sale applications.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he proposes to speed up the processing of council house sale applications.

Mr. Trippier: As I announced in my answer of 10 March to my hon. Friend the Member for Harrow, West (Mr. Hughes) at column 699, section 124 of the Housing Act 1988 came into force on that date. It enables tenants whose applications are delayed by the landlord to have rent payments set against the purchase price of their homes.

68. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council houses have been sold to sitting tenants in England since May 1979.

Mr. Trippier: From April 1979 to March 1989 about 1,040,000 tenants bought their homes from English local authorities and new towns.

41. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to extend the opportunities of council tenants to become owner-occupiers.

Mr. Trippier: I refer to the answer I gave my hon. Friend on 24 May at columns 591-92.

River Don (Pollution)

18. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that sufficient measures are being taken to prevent further pollution of the River Don where it flows through Sheffield and South Yorkshire.

Mr. Moynihan: The river objective for the River Don, set by Yorkshire water authority is for fair quality-class 2. This should be achieved shortly for the Don upstream of Sheffield with the implementation of the final stages of the Don valley interceptor sewer. A major programme for upgrading and extending Sheffield's sewage treatment works and sewerage system, combined with improved trade effluent discharges, should result in 63km of the River Don downstream of Sheffield reaching this standard by 1995.

Empty Properties

19. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to ensure the efficient and urgent use of empty properties before allowing green belt land to be used for property development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: There are already stringent controls on development in the green belts. They should ensure that all opportunities for meeting development needs elsewhere are fully considered.

Unleaded Petrol

20. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the level of demand for unleaded petrol in March.

29. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of total petrol sales in the United Kingdom are now accounted for by the sale of unleaded petrol.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In the month to mid-March, unleaded petrol accounted for 6·4 per cent. of the market.

Uptake more than doubled in the following month to 14·4 per cent. The latest figure for the month to mid-May is 19·3 per cent., which shows that the switch to unleaded fuel is rapidly gaining momentum. The rate of progress is very encouraging as the average for the whole of 1988 was a mere 1·1 per cent. This can be attributed to the Chancellor's Budget incentive, the successful national television advertising campaign and many other Government and private sector promotional initiatives.

66. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of refuellings now take place at garages which stock unleaded petrol.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The United Kingdom Petroleum Industry Association advises us that approaching two out of three refuellings now take place at petrol stations where unleaded fuel is available.

Empty Council Properties

21. Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will supply the latest estimate of empty council properties in the Greater London area.

Mr. Trippier: London boroughs reported some 23,300 empty council properties in their housing investment programme returns for April 1988.

Football Membership Scheme

22. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the Professional Footballers Association to discuss the proposed football membership scheme.

Mr. Moynihan: I have yet to meet representatives of the Professional Footballers' Association formally to discuss the national membership scheme, but I hope to do so shortly.

34. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met officials from the Football Leagues to discuss the proposed football membership scheme.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friend and I last discussed the Football Spectators Bill with the chairman of the Football Association and the President of the Football League on 34 May.

EC Water Directives

23. Mr. Wm Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he now expects to submit to the European Community proposals to meet the requirements of the European Commission bathing water directive and the drinking water directive in full.

Mr. Ridley: I expect to be able to present proposals to meet the requirements of the EC bathing water and drinking water directives to the European Commission shortly.

Unified Business Rate

24. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he makes of the level of the unified business rate in Oxfordshire.

Mr. Gummer: We estimate that if the uniform business rate had taken effect this year it would have been of the order of 35p in the pound in England.

Local Authority Services

25. Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he proposes to introduce greater efficiency into the provision of local authority services.

Mr. Gummer: We have introduced a number of measures to secure greater efficiency into the provision of local authority services. The Audit Commission we established is responsible for reviewing value for money in local government. Local authorities are being required to put seven services out to competitive tender, and the community charge and our proposals for the new capital finance system and ring fenced housing revenue account will lead to greater accountability and increased efficiency in the provision of services.

Street Cleaning

26. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes to seek to place a duty on local authorities to keep their local streets clean.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A duty on local authorities to keep land clean, and to have regard to a code of practice, is one of a number of proposals for legislation on litter which my right hon. Friend intends to announce soon.

Competitive Tendering

27. Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what he estimates would have been the additional costs so far incurred if services currently put out to competitive tender had not been so treated.

Mr. Gummer: Research carried out by the Audit Commission and published in its report "Preparing for Compulsory Competition" suggests that savings of at least 20 per cent. can be made on previous contract costs, irrespective of whether a private contractor or the in-house organisation wins the work. Figures relating to competition under the Local Government Act 1988 are not yet generally available.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the latest estimate for the savings from competitive tendering by local authorities.

Mr. Gummer: The Department will be asking authorities to supply information on the first round of tendering shortly. Earlier research into the voluntary competition indicated that savings of 20 to 30 per cent. were available on an expenditure of some £3,000 million.

Community Charge

28. Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the medical advice he has received on the exemption of severe dementia sufferers from the community charge.

Mr. Gummer: My right hon. Friend receives medical advice on these matters from the Department of Health.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the leaflet, "The Community Charge (The So-Called Poll Tax): How It Will Work For You" delivered to all households in England has been reprinted with amendments.

Mr. Ridley: Neither amendments nor reprints have been necessary.

88. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the cost of implementing the poll tax.

Mr. Gummer: The Government have no plans to introduce a poll tax.

In advice that the Department commissioned from Price Waterhouse, the current cost of preparing for the community charge in 1989-90 was estimated to be between £99 million and £122 million, and the capital costs in 1989-90 was estimated to be between £125 million and £175 million. These estimates were at November 1987 prices.

81. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to issue further guidance to community charge registration officers on the questions being asked on community charge registration forms.

Mr. Gummer: Clear and explicit advice on these matters has already been issued to community charge registration officers, as well as a model community charge registration form. It is for registration officers to ensure that their requests for information comply with the statutory requirements.

58. Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which three counties would on the current figures levy the highest community charge; and which party controls each of them.

Mr. Gummer: In the illustrative community charge figures published for 1988-89, the three shire counties with the highest over-spend per adult were Cleveland, Cumbria and Derbyshire, Cleveland and Derbyshire were Labour-controlled in April 1988, but no party had overall control in Cumbria.

47. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has received so far regarding campaigns to encourage the non-payment of the community charge.

Mr. Gummer: The Government are aware of the actions of a number of bodies and individuals whose aim is to encourage people to evade their legal responsibilities in relation to the community charge. Such actions are irresponsible and undemocratic.

New Settlements

30. Mr. Haynes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his policy for the siting of new settlements in the south of England.

Mr. Chope: Current policy on new settlements is set out in paragraph 11 of planning policy guidance note 3, which makes it clear that proposals must be subject to normal planning procedures and must be considered within the framework of existing planning policies.

African Elephant

32. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to safeguard the future of the African elephant.

77. Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will now recommend that the African elephant become an appendix I protected animal at the next meeting of CITES in October.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have introduced an immediate ban on the import of ivory into the United Kingdom pending the introduction of a Community wide ban, and have asked our European colleagues to support the case for transferring the African elephant from appendix II to appendix I of the convention on international trade in endangered species of fauna and flora (CITES). We shall play a full part in the discussions on this difficult and complex issue at the forthcoming conference of the parties to CITES.

Schools (Sport)

33. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the number of school children participating in sport and recreation; and what action his Department is taking to ensure adequate facilities are available for outside school sports facilities.

Mr. Moynihan: I have no detailed information on which to base an estimate of the number of school children participating in sport and recreation. The Sports Council provides grant-aid towards the provision of sports facilities and this year has earmarked nearly £9 million from its allocated budget of £41 million for this purpose.

Urban Development Corporations

35. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give a breakdown of the money provided to each urban development corporation up to March 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The total provision to 31 March 1989 was as follows:

| UDC | Provision £ million |
|---|---|
| Black Country | 25·4 |
| Bristol | 0·3 |
| Central Manchester | 2·5 |
| Leeds | 2·7 |
| London Docklands | 514·5 |
| Merseyside | 189·2 |
| Sheffield | 8·0 |
| Teesside | 26·0 |
| Trafford Park | 26·0 |
| Tyne and Wear | 28·0 |

Litter

36. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about future initiatives to combat litter.

50. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further measures he proposes to deal with the litter problem.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend will shortly be announcing a number of proposals for legislation designed to ensure more effective action to be taken against litterers and litter; to set clear standards for cleanliness in public places; and to ensure that those standards are met.

59. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government plan to bring forward legislation to enable local authorities to issue fixed penalty tickets for litter offences; and whether he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Government are considering fixed penalty schemes for littering as one of a range of options for improving legislation to combat litter, which my right hon. Friend intends to announce soon.

Sporting Events

37. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what efforts are being made to attract major sporting events to this country.

Mr. Moynihan: It is for the national governing bodies of sport to seek to attract major sporting events to this country. I have no doubt that, as in the past, we can look forward to many major sporting events being staged in the United Kingdom.

70. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions in the past 10 years Britain has been the venue for international sporting events; and what discussions are currently taking place on the possibility of future events being held within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Moynihan: This information is not held centrally. It is for the national governing bodies of sport to decide whether to bid to host international sporting events. I have no doubt we can look forward to many future international sporting events being held in this country.

Environmental Research

38. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make it his policy to increase his Department's sponsorship of environmental research projects with particular reference to all matters of public interest for which his Department has some responsibility.

Mr. Ridley: The scale of my Department's expenditure on environmental research is assessed on the needs to inform decisions, guide policy, and monitor the achievement of environmental goals. It is planned to increase from £31·5 million in 1988-89 to £35·8 million in this financial year.

Environmental Statements

39. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to recommend the environmental statement by Wyre Forest district council as a model for other local authorities.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No. Local authorities have a range of important environmental responsibilities, such as the collection and disposal of waste and the control of certain sources of air pollution. We look to them to ensure that they discharge these responsibilities effectively, as well as taking informed purchasing decisions, which is a main concern of Wyre Forest district council's statement.

Urban Programme

40. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many projects in inner city areas have now been assisted by grants provided through the Government's urban programme.

Mr. Trippier: Since 1979-80, when the enhanced urban programme was introduced, an estimated total of some 43,500 projects have been assisted. This includes projects supported under the former traditional urban programme.

Rivers

42. Sir Peter Blaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to which European Community member states had more rivers in good or fair condition than the United Kingdom at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Howard: The 1985 river quality surveys indicated that about 95 per cent. of river lengths in the United Kingdom were classifed as being of good or fair quality. Comprehensive information on a comparable basis for other EC member states is not available. However, a study published in 1988 by the Water Research Centre, in reviewing classification schemes in member states, showed that on the basis of comparisons made using the United Kingdom river classification scheme, no other member state had a greater proportion of "good" or "fair" quality rivers, although our position was matched by that of the Netherlands. A summary of these results is published in the Water Authorities' Association publication "Water Facts 1988".

Homelessness

43. Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will give his Department's latest estimate of the number of families accepted as being homeless for inner London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Latest estimates of households accepted as homeless in inner London appear in table 1(a) of "Local authorities' action under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act: England. Results for the first quarter of 1989, Supplementary Tables", which are in the Library.

Structure Plans

45. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the future of structure plan procedures.

Mr. Howard: Our proposals were published last January in the White Paper on the future of development plans, Cm. 569. The counties will continue to have a key role in the planning process, but will be expected in future to concentrate on those planning issues which genuinely need to be considered on a county-wide basis. Structure plans will be replaced by statements of county planning policies—SCPPs—dealing with a specified range of topics. Each district planning authority will be required to have regard to the SCPP and to ensure that its district development plan is consistent with the SCPP.

Each county will be responsible for adopting its own SCPP, and for conducting the public examination of the draft statement. My right hon. Friend will continue to appoint the chairman of the panel, and the inspector member, but the statement will not be subject to his formal approval, unless reserve powers are invoked.

Business Rates (Northumberland)

46. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the estimated level of rates on businesses in Northumberland in 1990-91.

Mr. Gummer: The report of a preliminary survey carried out by the Inland Revenue of the effects of the uniform business rate and the 1990 revaluation of business property, which is available in the Library, suggests that rate bills for businesses in the northern region could fall by some £50 million a year once the transition to the new system is complete.

Separate figures on the effects of revaluation in Northumberland are not available. However, if the uniform business rate had been introduced this year the effect would have been to reduce the rate poundage paid by businesses in Northumberland by between 15 and 24 per cent. depending on the district council area concerned.

Nature Reserves

49. Mr. Archer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will respond to the Nature Conservancy Council report, "Towards a Strategy for National Nature Reserves".

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the right hon. and learned Member to the statement made by my noble Friend the Minister for Housing, Environment and Countryside in another place on 3 May.

Rural Housing

52. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the deficit of affordable housing in rural areas.

Mr. Trippier: It is not practicable to make a meaningful, reliable estimate of the sort suggested.

76. Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further proposals he has to increase the supply of low-cost houses for rent in rural and urban areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Government have taken a variety of measures to encourage supply of affordable rented housing, including the deregulation of private letting, the encouragement of private investment in housing associations and an 80 per cent. increase in funding for the Housing Corporation.

74. Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has plans to advise planning authorities to make land available in urban and rural areas for (a) rented accommodation and (b) affordable housing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend's statement on 3 February—Official Report, column 433—set out the Government's policy on the role of the planning system in securing the release of land for low-cost housing to meet local needs in rural areas. Planning policy guidance note 3 stresses that the planning system should cater effectively for the demand for land both for owner occupation and for rented housing. This applies to urban and to rural areas.

64. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received regarding the need for low-cost housing in rural areas.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend receives many representations on the housing problems of both rural and urban areas from hon. Members, from interest groups, and from members of the public. The Government's policy on rural housing was set out in his statement of 5 July 1988, and amplified in statements of 3 and 7 February, copies of which are in the Library.

Council Works (Contracts)

53. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied with the procedure of local authorities in awarding contracts for council works to the private sector.

Mr. Gummer: We are concerned about the high incidence of complaints to the Department about alleged anti-competitive behaviour by authorities in introducing competition under the Local Government Act 1988. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has strong sanction powers under the Act and he will not hesitate to use them when necessary.

District Plans

54. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many district councils in England have not yet completed their district plan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Figures for November 1988 show that 243 of the 296 non-metropolitan districts in England do not have local plans on deposit or adopted which fully cover their areas. Planning policy guidance note 12 urged authorities to extend local plan coverage, and current indications are that most authorities intend to complete draft plans for the whole of their districts within the next two years. The proposals set out in "The Future of Development Plans" (Cm. 569) will ensure that these plans can, where appropriate, be incorporated into the new district development plans which all authorities will be required to prepare.

Water Privatisation

55. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress of publication of the prospectus for water privatisation.

Mr. Howard: It is expected that the prospectus will be published in November this year.

Sea Water

56. Mr. Lord: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to improve the quality of the sea water around the beaches of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Water authorities are currently spending about £100 million a year on improvements to bathing waters.

In 1988, a total of 6 per cent. of bathing waters in England, Wales and Northern Ireland met the mandatory coliform bacteria standards of the EC bathing water directive. I have asked water authorities to draw up programmes with the aim of bringing the remaining waters up to these standards by the mid-1990s.

Planning Decisions

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is now in a position to provide the information referred to in his answer of 22 March, Official Report, column 635 relating to planning decisions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I wrote to the hon. Member on 5 April with a list of the cases concerned. I am sending him a further copy of my letter.

Vacant Land

61. Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes he estimates could be built on the 49,900 acres of land currently vacant, unused and surplus to requirements and owned by local authorities; and what progress he is making in putting such vacant land to good use.

Mr. Trippier: It is not possible to estimate how many homes could in practice be built on such land. At 31 May 1989 approximately 14,700 acres of local authority land on the land register had a planning indication for residential use. It is for authorities to dispose of surplus land and make effective use of what they retain. By 31 May 1989 some 17,000 acres of local authority land had been removed from the register, mainly disposed of or brought into use. My right hon. Friend's powers to direct disposals will continue to be used where appropriate. By 31 May use of these powers had been initiated in respect of some 1,500 acres of local authority land.

Nuclear Waste

62. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the importing of nuclear waste.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No nuclear waste is imported into the country.

Land Register

63. Mr. Bevan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes he estimates could be built on the 7,900 sites currently on the land register.

Mr. Trippier: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 26 June to my hon. Friends the Members for South Hams (Mr. Steen) and for Bromsgrove (Sir H. Miller).

Housing Defects

67. Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what additional allocations he intends to make in the current year's housing investment programme for local authorities who have difficulties in meeting their housing defects obligations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Local authorities are normally expected to be able to meet their housing defects obligations from within their general housing programme resources, but to help authorities with particular difficulties with designated defective properties, we distributed an extra £15 million of resources this year.

Water Quality

71. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received any recent representations about the quality of water in the Barnsley area.

Mr. Moynihan: The hon. Member for Barnsley, West and Penistone (Mr. McKay) has written to my right hon. Friend, and I have replied. The director of administration, Barnsley metropolitan borough council, has also written to the Department and a reply has been sent.

London City Airport

72. Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next hopes to meet the chairman of the London Docklands development corporation to discuss the London City airport site and its surrounds.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to do so at present.

EC Ministers

73. Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet his European Community counterparts; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Ridley: The European Community's Environment Council, which is usually attended by my noble Friend the Minister for Housing, Environment and Countryside, will next meet on 19 September. It will be for the French presidency to decide the agenda.

Basthby Thorpe (Methane)

75. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Scretary of State for the Environment if he has received any representations concerning the accumulation of methane in the Basthby Thorpe area landfill site; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I discussed this case with the hon. Member and representatives from the local residents' association on 12 June. No other representations have been received.

Sea Water Pollution (Southend)

78. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the pollution levels in the sea water at Southend-on-Sea.

Mr. Howard: At Southend-on-Sea, the Anglian water authority recently brought into use an extension to an existing outfall at a cost of £5 million. While this has brought about significant improvements in water quality, it is clear that further measures are needed. In response to a request from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, the Anglian water authority is developing proposals for satisfactory long-term arrangements for sewage disposal at Southend.

However, as a temporary measure, the water authority is disinfecting sewage with peracetic acid prior to discharge through the outfall. This has enabled the identified bathing waters at Thorpe bay and Westcliff bay consistently to meet the bathing water directive's mandatory coliform standards so far during the 1989 bathing season.

East beach, Shoeburyness, which was recently identified as a bathing water under the EC bathing water directive, already meets those mandatory standards.

Gleneagles Agreement

79. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice his Department is giving to the organisation of the Henley regatta to ensure that both the spirit and the letter of the Gleneagles agreement are observed at this year's regatta.

Mr. Moynihan: The organisers of the Henley royal regatta are well aware of the terms of the Gleneagles agreement and of the Government's continuing commitment to it.

87. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last discussed the Gleneagles agreement with the chairman of the Sports Council.

Mr. Moynihan: I have not discussed the Gleneagles agreement formally with the newly-appointed chairman of the Sports Council. As chairman of the council, Mr. Yarranton issued a statement expressing his support for the agreement on 12 June.

Housing Action Trust, Lambeth

80. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is now able to announce a timetable for a ballot on a housing action trust for the Angell and Loughborough estates in Lambeth.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 24 May 1989, concerning ballots in the proposed housing action trust areas.

Planning Proposals (Consultation)

82. Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is considering a more important role for district health authorities in the consultative process of planning proposals at district council level in his forthcoming planning Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The White Paper "The Future of Development Plans" (Cm. 569) set out the Government's proposals for reform of the development plan system. Under the new arrangements district planning authorities will, when preparing their draft plans, be required to consult any statutory bodies likely to be affected. There will continue to be provision, as there is now, for local public inquiries to be held by an inspector appointed by my right hon. Friend to hear objections to deposited plans. It will be up to district health authorities to make appropriate use of those procedures.

Marine Nature Reserves

83. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the progress of consultations on marine nature reserves.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The first statutory marine nature reserve around Lundy island was established on 21 November 1986. The Nature Conservancy Council has formally submitted proposals for a second reserve at Skomer island —Marloes peninsular—to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. A decision is awaited from the South Wales sea fisheries committee on a proposed byelaw controlling fishing before further progress can be made.

The NCC published a consultation paper on Menai Straits in September 1988 and is considering the 175 responses it has received.

Energy Conservation

84. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, what advice and help with grants for repairs and so on, his Department is giving to people on low incomes to conserve energy in their homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The homes insulation scheme, administered by housing authorities and funded by my Department, provides 90 per cent. grant for loft insulation in qualifying dwellings whose householders are recipients of income support, family credit or housing benefit. A departmental booklet for scheme applicants, distributed to all authorities, includes detailed guidance to those who wish to carry out the work themselves. Discretionary aid for energy conservation measures may also be available via home improvement grants, usually as part of a wider package of improvements. Advice to householders is contained in the Department's housing booklet No. 14.

Rating Revaluations

85. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would be the effect of a rating revaluation on the level of rates payable on a typical terraced house with a current rateable value of £40 in the area covered by Kirklees council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Under the Local Government Finance Act 1988 domestic rates are to be replaced from 1 April 1990 by the community charge. No revaluation of domestic rateable values is therefore to be made. Such a revaluation would in any event now be very difficult to undertake because of lack of evidence of market rents for domestic property.

Surrey Structure Plan

86. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received in response to his proposed revised modifications to the first alteration to the Surrey structure plan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The Secretary of State has so far received three responses to the proposed revised modification which was formally advertised by the county council on 18 May. Six weeks are allowed for representations, the closing date for which will be 10 July.

The Secretary of State will then complete his consideration of the proposed revised modification, and his approval of the first alteration to the Surrey structure plan will follow as soon as possible afterwards.

Stonehenge

89. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the future of Stonehenge.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: English Heritage is responsible for managing Stonehenge on behalf of my right hon. Friend. As my hon. Friend knows, it has plans for a new visitor centre and other major improvements in the way Stonehenge is presented to the public. Critical to the success of these plans is the choice of access route to the visitor centre. This has taken time to resolve because of the conflicting interests of adjoining landowners, and questions of archaeology and military security. However, discussions are taking place, and I hope that the matter will be resolved soon.

Derelict Land

90. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take further steps to discourage development outside the conurbations and provide additional incentives to secure reclamation of derelict land within them.

Mr. Trippier: The Government are already firmly committed to the preservation of the countryside and the maximum use of urban land for new development. Under the derelict land grant, priority is given to reclaiming derelict sites in urban areas and city grant and urban programme grants are also available to reclaim derelict land and facilitate development. In addition, the 10 urban development corporations now established in England are making a significant impact on the derelict land in their areas.

Nevertheless, the latest household projections make it clear that some land for housing will continue to be needed in the foreseeable future on new sites outside urban areas. Such sites will have to be identified with an eye to all material planning considerations.

Playing Fields

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he is taking to prevent building development by housing associations, local councils and other public bodies on school and other playing fields; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Local planning authorities are responsible for determining development proposals in the first instance. As I indicated in reply to the hon. Member for Durham, North (Mr. Radice) on 24 May, we have urged authorities to take account of the wider needs of the community and to consult local sports and recreational interests when considering proposals for the development of recreational land.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from Cambridgeshire county council on his consultation paper regarding the role and function of waste disposal authorities, and what was the nature of their representations.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have received detailed comments from Cambridgeshire county council. These, along with many others, are being given careful consideration.

Rents into Mortgages Scheme

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received any representations on the introduction of a rents into mortgages scheme for council tenants in England, similar to the one proposed for Scotland.

Mr. Trippier: My hon. Friend and a small number of members of the public have made such representations. The scheme announced on 11 May is confined to tenants of Scottish Homes and does not extend to local authority tenants.

Rent and Rate Arrears

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning (a) local authority members who are tenants of the same authority in arrears with their rents and (b) such members in arrears with their rates; and whether he has any proposals to deal with the rent or rate arrears by councillors.

Mr. Trippier: I have received various representations. It is obviously destructive to effective rent collection if those elected to local authorities do not set an example by not getting in arrears. I am considering whether it would be desirable to introduce arrangements whereby any allowances due to a councillor could be offset against significant sums that that councillor may owe to the authority.

Sports Council

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the chairman of the Sports Council.

Mr. Moynihan: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave earlier today to the hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell).

Hostels

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much has been spent by his Department since 1981 on hostels which are financed and managed through the Department of Social Security system.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

Before 31 March 1985 the Department's accounting system did not specifically identify expenditure on its hostels (known as resettlement units). Also, up to 31 March 1987, most of the resettlement units were jointly run with the Department's re-establishment centres. Therefore, separate expenditure details for resettlement units are available only from 1987-88 after the closure of the re-establishment centres. Gross expenditure including that paid to PSA for certain maintenance work was as follows:

| | £ million |
|---|---|
| 1985-86 | [1]12·5 |
| 1986-87 | [1]11·5 |
| 1987-88 | 12·1 |
| 1988-89 | [2]12·5 |

[1] Includes expenditure on re-establishment centres.
[2] Forecast.

SCOTLAND

Electricity

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he intends to ensure that independent electricity producers in Scotland will be allowed equal access with the North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board and the South of Scotland Electricity Board to the distribution network after privatisation.

Mr. Lang: Yes. There will be use of system arrangements which will ensure that independent power producers have access to the transmission and distribution systems of the Scottish utilities on an equitable basis. The principles for providing access and the structure of charging will be set out in the licences granted to the successor companies of the Scottish electricity boards and will be overseen by the Director General of Electricity Supply.

Forests (Privatisation)

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to extend private ownership of forests in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. and learned Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) on 16 June 1989 at columns 544-45.

Community Charge

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland have paid the community charge; and how many have not.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available at present.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary State for Scotland if he will list by region the number of land agents employed by the Nature Conservancy Council.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1989]: The Nature Conservancy Council has advised me that the number of land agents currently employed by the council in its Scottish regions is as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| North West region | 2 |
| North East region | 0 |
| South West region | 1 |
| South East region | 1 |

The land agency complement in Scotland is 10 and efforts are being made to recruit the balance.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary State for Scotland if he will list by region the number of management agreements made between the Nature Conservancy Council and landowners in 1988 and each of the preceding two years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1989]: The Nature Conservancy Council has advised me that the numbers of management agreements made in its Scottish regions in the years 1986-87 to 1988-89 were as follows:

| | 1986-87 | 1987-88 | 1988-89 |
|---|---|---|---|
| North West region | 13 | 17 | 12 |
| North East region | 16 | 15 | 18 |
| South West region | 10 | 25 | 9 |
| South East region | 9 | 19 | 5 |

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary State for Scotland what is the average time taken between notification by the Nature Conservancy Council of its intention to place a restriction on certain farming activities on a site of special scientific interest and the reaching of a management agreement with the landowner.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 27 June 1989]: The notification of land as a site of special scientific interest by the Nature Conservancy Council does not restrict existing farming activities. Where such activities are damaging to the special interest, they may be restricted only under a voluntary management agreement. Where a farmer proposes changes in activity he is obliged to serve notice on the NCC which if it wishes to restrict such activities will, within four months, offer to negotiate a management agreement. For the length of time taken to negotiate a management agreement I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment on 14 February 1989 to the hon. Member for the Isle of Wight (Mr. Field), column 189.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Dogs

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the dog registration scheme in the Province, set up under the Dogs (NI) Order 1983, is enforced by dog wardens; how many stray dogs are collected annually; how many dogs have been put down annually since the order was introduced.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 19 June 1989]: The provisions of the Dogs (NI) Order 1983 are enforced by Northern Ireland's 26 district councils, each of which employs dog wardens. The other information requested is as follows:

| | Stray dogs collected | Dogs put down (including at owners' expense) |
|---|---|---|
| 1984 | 8,297 | 7,828 |
| 1985 | 11,306 | 10,567 |
| 1986 | 10,833 | 10,384 |
| 1987 | 10,520 | 10,575 |
| 1988 | 11,888 | 11,907 |

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dogs are licensed by district councils under the Dog (NI) Order 1983; what have been the totals in 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988; and if he will state (a) the amount of revenue generated by the scheme annually and (b) the cost of administration.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 19 June 1989]: The number of dog licences issued under the Dogs (NI) Order 1983 and the revenue generated from licences is as follows:

| | Number of dog licences issued | Licence revenue £ |
|---|---|---|
| 1984 | 84,137 | 419,000 |
| 1985 | 70,001 | 348,000 |
| 1986 | 69,046 | 343,000 |
| 1987 | 64,847 | 320,000 |
| 1988 | 70,315 | 348,000 |

The number of licences issued includes block licences (for three or more dogs). Information on the costs of administration is not collected centrally.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Early-day Motions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many early-day motions were tabled in each Session since 1966; and how many were subsequently debated on the floor of the House.

Mr. Wakeham: The information requested for the sessions 1966-67 to 1969-70 is as follows:

| Session | Number of EDMs |
|---|---|
| 1966-67 | 640 |
| 1967-68 | 446 |
| 1968-69 | 443 |
| 1969-70 | 300 |

For information about subsequent sessions, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Derbyshire, West (Mr. McLoughlin) on Monday 19 June, Official Report, column 34.

The information requested in the second part of the question is not held in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Lord President of the Council (1) if he will publish a list of early-day motions, other than prayers, debated on the Floor of the House in parliamentary time provided by the Government in each Session since 1966.

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report a list of early-day motions, other than prayers, debated on the Floor of the House since 1966.

Mr. Wakeham: I regret that this information is not held in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will publish in the Official Report a list of private Members' Bills where a division took place on Second Reading and where the Bill received the Royal Assent in each Session since 1966.

Mr. Wakeham: Since the 1966-67 Session, the following private Members' Bills have received Royal Assent having previously been read a Second time on a Division:

| | Year |
|---|---|
| Divorce Reform Bill | 1968-69 |
| Conservation of Seals Bill | 1969-70 |

Mr. Amess: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will seek to amend Standing Order No. 90 so as to provide that, for private members' Bills, not fewer than 20 hon. Members rising in their places shall be required to constitute objection; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: I have no plans to do so.

Procedure Committee Reports

Mr. Amess: To ask the Lord President of the Council what representations he has received concerning the Procedure Committee's reports on use of time on the Floor of the House and private Members' time; how many supported the implementation of these reports; and how many expressed an opposite view; and what percentage the latter represents of the former.

Mr. John Wakeham: Since my reply to a similar question by my hon. Friend on 23 May at column 509, I have received one further letter which was in support of the recommendations in the two reports so far as they relate to private Members' time.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Tourism

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he is now able to announce the result of the review of tourism policy in Northern Ireland which was commissioned in October.

Mr. Viggers: Following the recent review, a statement of the Government's proposals for tourism is being published today, and copies of the document "Tourism in Northern Ireland—A View to the Future" are available in the House of Commons Library.

The review concludes that tourism in Northern Ireland has not prospered in line with its opportunities. One feature of difficulty in the promotion of tourism in Northern Ireland is its image, but that does not reflect the full picture, and should not prevent the implementation of change in the marketing of the product.

The Government intend to create a body which will have responsibility for both marketing and product development, bringing together the present promotional role of the Northern Ireland tourist board, and the grant-aiding functions of the Department of Economic Development.

Implementation of the proposed changes will require legislation in due course.

Irish Language

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils passed (a) O-level and (b) A-level Irish language in the years 1985 to 1988.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:-

Passes in Irish language

| | O-level | A-level |
|---|---|---|
| 1985 | 1,221 | 230 |
| 1986 | 1,208 | 209 |
| 1987 | 1,072 | 223 |
| 1988 | 1,046 | 203 |

Notes:

O-level passes for 1985-87 comprise CSE Grade 1 and GCE Grades A-C. In 1988, GCSE replaced GCE and CSE: figure given is for GCSE Grades A-C.

A-level passes comprise grades A-E.

Post-graduate Awards

Mr McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the principal differences in the granting of post-graduate awards between Northern Ireland and Great Britain; and how many such awards have been granted in Northern Ireland during the past five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The principal differences between Northern Ireland and Great Britain in the granting of post-graduate awards are (a) in Northern Ireland the Department of Education is responsible for making awards to Northern Ireland students for those areas of study which in Great Britain are the responsibility of the science and engineering, the natural environment, and the economic and social research councils, the British Academy, the Department of Education and Science and the Scottish Education Department;

(b) the Department of Education offers up to 20 postgraduate distinction awards each year to enable graduates from anywhere in the United Kingdom who have gained first-class degrees to undertake research at the two Northern Ireland universities.

New awards made in each of the last five years are as follows:-

| | Studentships | Bursaries |
|---|---|---|
| 1984-85 | 311 | 131 |
| 1985-86 | 307 | 131 |
| 1986-87 | 311 | 134 |
| 1987-88 | 311 | 133 |
| 1988-89 | [1]337 | 133 |

[1] Includes 20 Distinction Awards.

Police Complaints (Report)

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will arrange for copies of the first annual report of the Independent Commission for Police Complaints for Northern Ireland to be laid in the House.

Mr. Tom King: I have arranged to do so today. This is the first report of the commission which I set up in February last year and, therefore, relates to a settling-in period. However the report clearly demonstrates that the commission has established a very firm foundation for the thorough and impartial consideration of complaints against members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. As the new commission develops its role I have every confidence that it will make a material contribution to strengthening good relations between the RUC and the whole community in Northern Ireland.

Human Rights

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has received the 14th report of the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: The report has been published today, and copies have been laid before Parliament. It covers the period 1 November 1987 to 31 March 1989.

The report covers a wide range of matters which the commission has considered during the period under review. These include fair employment, the Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1988, electoral law, broadcasting restrictions, emergency legislation, the draft Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order and educatiou.

Copies of my response to the commission's report and of the report itself have been placed in the Library.

THE ARTS

Museums (Repairs)

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Minister for the Arts, what is the estimated cost of necessary repairs and fabric at the national gallery, the national portrait gallery, the Victoria and Albert museum, the Tate gallery and the natural history museum; and what is the estimated cost of modernising the plumbing at each of the above-named institutions.

Mr. Luce: The maintenance and repair of these historic buildings is a continuous process which will always require a rolling programme of expenditure. Major maintenance projects are in hand at all of these institutions, but I accept that further investment is necessary. I have allocated £72 million in the current three-year funding period for the building and maintenance programmes at these institutions and hope to announce further allocations later in the year.

Horniman Museum and Library

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he will appoint a shadow board of trustees for the Horniman museum and library; and when he will announce what resources there are available for the institution.

Mr. Luce: I hope that some members of the 'shadow' board of trustees for the Horniman museum and library will be appointed this autumn. I will announce in due course the financial provision which will be made for the museum from the arts programme.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Child Car Restraints

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the revenue from value added tax on child car seat restraints for the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information requested is not available.

ENVIRONMENT

Community Charge

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has taken legal advice to test whether the community charge registration form produced by Trafford council is ultra vires; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: It is not for the Department to test whether the registration forms issued by community charge registration officers (CCROs) are intra vires. We have issued detailed guidance on community charge registration and a model registration form. If CCROs use the model form and follow the guidance, I am confident that they will be acting intra vires.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the effects of his policy on community charge exemptions on the future of care in the community.

Mr. Gummer: The Government have provided a number of exemptions from the community charge including those for certain residential care workers and those for severely mentally impaired people. These, combined with rebate arrangements and uprated income support, ensure that our policy on community care is unaffected.

Sewage Treatment Works

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what ministerial permission has (a) been requested and (b) been granted, for relaxation of sewage treatment works discharge consents for Yorkshire water authority; and what period of time they cover.

Mr. Howard: Lists of sewage treatment works for which applications have been made by water authorities for time-limited relaxations to discharge consents have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Details of the applications, including the period for which the temporary variation has been requested, may be obtained from the public register maintained by Yorkshire water authority. The duration of any time-limited relaxation granted will, within the constraints set out in my announcement of 7 December 1988, Official Report column 199 reflect the expected time scale of the capital improvements to be carried out. None of the applications from the authority has yet been granted.

Sport

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will respond to those parts of the report "Sport and Young People, Partnership and Action" produced by the school sport forum in July 1988 which relate to his departmental responsibilities.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Education and Science will issue their joint response to the report "Sport and Young People, Partnership and Action" shortly.

Domestic Property (Compensation)

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Mid-Staffordshire, 17 January Official Report, column 149, if he is now in a position to publish his proposals for dealing with the compensation code for domestic property which, under current legislation, is based either upon gross, net annual or rateable values for implementation on 1 April 1990, under the Local Government Finance Act 1988.

Mr. Chope: Paragraphs 7 and 8 of the Department's consultation paper on land compensation and compulsory purchase legislation issued on 7 March, include proposals for amendments to the method of calculating home loss payments when domestic rateable values are abolished on 1 April 1990. I am sending my hon. Friend a copy of the consultation paper to which we have received many interesting responses which we are now considering.

Valuation and Community Charge Tribunals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the selected valuation and community change tribunal offices where he proposes to use his Department's valuation office staff for user computer support; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The valuation and community charge tribunal offices proposed as regional centres for computer user support are:

Cleveland and Durham
Essex North and South
Greater London (South Eastern)
Greater Manchester North
Greater Manchester South
Hereford and Worcester and Kent

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the valuation and community charge tribunal offices that received in January an interim pay award to its staff of (a) three increments and (b) one increment; and if he will make a statement as to why there was a differential pay award.

Mr. Gummer: Staff in 16 offices set out in list (a) received an interim pay award equivalent to three increments while the staff of the remaining 26 offices in list (b) received one increment. The award to offices in list (a) reflected local market factors affecting recruitment retention of staff. Since January 1989 a further seven offices indicated by an asterisk in list (b) have been added to list (a) in the light of evidence of similar market factors.

List (a)

Central London, Holborn
London North East, Ilford
London North West, Harrow
London South East, Croydon
London South West, Hounslow
Avon and Gloucestershire, Cheltenham
Befordshire and Hertfordshire, Hertford
Berkshire, Wokingham
Coventry, Solihull and Worcestershire, Leamington Spa
Essex North and South, Chelmsford
Hampshire South and Isle of Wight, Southampton
Hampshire North and Wiltshire, Winchester
Kent, Maidstone
Leicestershire, Northamptonshire and Nottinghamshire, Nottingham
Surrey, Woking
West Sussex, Chichester

List (b)

Buckinghamshire, Aylesbury*
Cambridgeshire, Peterborough
Cheshire, Chester
Cleveland and Durham, Darlington
Devon, Cornwall and Isles of Scilly, Plymouth*
Cumbria, Whitehaven
Derbyshire, Chesterfield
Dorset and Somerset, Yeovil
Hereford and Worcester, Worcester
Humberside, Bridlington
Lancashire, Preston
Lincolnshire, Horncastle
Merseyside, Liverpool
Manchester, North, Bolton
Manchester South, Chorlton-Cum-Hardy, Manchester*
West Midlands West, Dudley
Birmingham, Birmingham
Norfolk, Norwich*
Northumberland, Tyne and Wear, North Shields
Oxfordshire, Oxford
Staffordshire and Shropshire, Stafford
Suffolk, Ipswich*
East Sussex, Eastbourne*
North Yorkshire, Middlesbrough*
South Yorkshire, Doncaster
West Yorkshire, Leeds

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why his Department proposes to use valuation office staff for user computer support and place them in selected valuation and community charge tribunal offices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Computer systems in 42 valuation and community charge tribunal offices become operational in September this year. By then a fully effective support system must be in place to help the offices overcome any problems. We propose to achieve this by seconding experienced computer staff from the Inland Revenue to selected tribunal offices within easy reach of other offices.

Water Stocks

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any further information in relation to impounded water stocks following his answer to the hon. Member for Kingswood, 8 June, Official Report, column 87.

Mr. Howard: There are some impounded stocks below normal in the Southern and South West water authorities areas.

Wild Birds

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, by reference to site location, the occasions since 1 December 1981 when the European Commission has initiated inquiries with his Department concerning development proposals or other activities which may have an adverse impact on areas qualifying for special protection under article 4 of EC directive 79/409 on the conservation of wild birds.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Such inquiries are confidential between the European Commission and Her Majesty's Government, and details are not normally made public.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 6 June, Official Report, column 89, what additional legal protection to that given under section 28 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 is given to areas which meet the criteria for designation under article 4 of EC directive 79/409 on the conservation of wild birds or wetlands of international importance under the Ramsar convention.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the last paragraph of my reply to him on 6 June at column 89 in respect of SPAs. Ramsar sites are a further subset of SSSIs. The fact of designation in accordance with this international convention would influence decisions on development proposals affecting these areas; the factors to be taken into account when considering development proposals are set out in detail in DOE circular 27/87—"Nature Conservation".

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next intends to announce the designation of an area either as a site under the Ramsar convention on the conservation of wetlands of international importance or as a special protection area under EC directive 79/409 on the conservation of wild birds, or both.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A number of proposals are currently being considered by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland. The next classification of a site will be announced as soon as the necessary consultations have been satisfactorily completed.

Shopping Developments

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of any organisation or individuals to which his decision about some or all of the applications for out-of-town shopping developments have been communicated.

Mr. Howard: It is my right hon. Friend's invariable practice to notify applicants and others concerned of his decisions on planning appeals and called-in applications when they are finalised, and not before. Decisions on the group of appeals and called-in planning applications for major retail developments in Greater Manchester and north-east Cheshire have not yet been finalised.

North West Water

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the cost of advertising by North West Water in the current year and each of the previous four years.

Mr. Howard: This is a matter for the authority.

Ivory Imports

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals he has received during the last 12 months against the refusal to grant an import licence under CITES; how many of these appeals he granted; and whether any were in respect of ivory earrings or other ivory jewellery.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 15 June 1989 at column 540.

National Park Planning Boards

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list how many members of each national park planning board live within the area of that park as a percentage of the total numbers on each board.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information for the seven English national parks is as follows:

| Park | Members | Number living within Park | Percentage of total number Per cent. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Dartmoor | 21 | 7 | 33 |
| Exmoor | 21 | 4 | 19 |
| Lake District[1] | 30 | 10 | 34 |
| Northumberland | 27 | 2 | 7 |
| North York Moors | 27 | 4 | 15 |
| Peak District | 34 | 10 | 29 |
| Yorkshire Dales | 24 | 11 | 46 |

[1] 29 members are in place and there is currently one vacancy on the Lake District Board.

Tenants' Choice Ballots

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will make available the model contract which a tenants' choice applicant landlord must use when employing an independent teller to conduct the ballot of tenants' views.

Mr. Trippier: A model contract setting out detailed obligations on applicant landlords and independent tellers when consulting tenants in a tenants' choice ballot was issued by the Department and the Housing Corporation today. It has been drawn up in consultation with the Electoral Reform Society.

The applicant landlord is required to use this contract as a condition of his approval to apply to acquire the property. The contract is a rigorous document designed to ensure as far as possible that every tenant eligible to do so is able to return a fully informed vote within the consultation period.

Copies of the contract have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses and are available from the Housing Corporation.

River Pollution

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list all discharges into the River Wear which are controlled by the sewage treatment effluent consent standards by maximum admissible concentrations, the number of occasions when these standards have been breached and action taken to enforce compliance;

(2) if he will list the number of occasions the Northumbria water authority has been found to be in breach of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 (a) river by river in the authority's area, (b) the substances involved in each incident, (c) the source of the contravention, and (d) on coastal outfalls and the substances involved;

(3) if he will list the number of times that Northumbria water authority has been in breach of the sewage effluent consent standards on the River Wear since 1987; which sewage treatment works were involved in each incident; and what action was taken to enforce compliance.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 21 June 1989]: Details of the consents to discharge into the River Wear, including those for sewage effluent, and information about breaches of these consents are held on registers maintained by the Northumbrian water authority and are available for public inspection, free of charge, at all reasonable hours. This information is not held centrally.

In considering what action to take to enforce compliance, Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution pay particular attention to the following factors: whether the sewage treatment works is persistently or grossly non-compliant; whether the breach has had a detrimental effect on the receiving water quality; and whether there are plans for improvement either through capital investment, by better maintenance or by improved operational control.

Street Lighting

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make an allocation to each local authority to enable a survey to be carried out to assess the need for the repair and replacement of street lighting; and if he will make available to local authorities adequate funding to finance a rolling programme to improve street lighting.

Mr Peter Bottomley: I have been asked to reply.

No. The repair and renewal of street lighting on local roads is a local highway authority responsibility. Local authorities finance them from within their general resources for roads expenditure. If individual authorities have special needs they may wish to highlight them in their transport policies and programme submissions to the Department.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

West Bank (Schools)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Israel about the closure of schools in the West Bank.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have repeatedly made clear our view that the closure of schools is not justified by Israel's security concerns, and called on the Israeli authorities to allow the schools to reopen—most recently in the European Council declaration on the middle east of 27 June.

Mohammed Nazak and Jurida Begum

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East can expect a substantive reply to his letter of 27 January to the Parliamentary Under-Secretary, concerning the case of Mohammed Nazak and Jurida Begum and the appeal lodged in Abu Dhabi on 1 May 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to my letter of 20 February 1989 in reply to his letter of 27 January. I will be sending the hon. Member another copy.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Attorney-General on what date the chief constable of the Sussex police consulted the Director of Public Prosecutions concerning correspondence between the hon. Member for Brent, East and the chief constable of the Sussex police regarding the circumstances surrounding Mr. Colin Wallace's conviction for manslaughter.

The Attorney-General: I take the hon. Member's question to refer to his letter to the chief constable of the Sussex police dated 24 February 1989. It was referred to the Director of Public Prosecutions by letter dated 7 March 1989.

ENERGY

Windscale

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what monitoring systems are installed at No. 2 pile at Windscale to safeguard against a release of Wigner energy; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether any attempt was made to anneal or remove the stored Wigner energy in the No. 2 pile at Windscale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Controlled releases of Wigner energy were made at intervals while Windscale No. 2 pile was in operation, but none has been attempted since 1957 when it was closed down and defuelled. This energy could be released in significant quantity only by substantial heating of the pile; there are no credible circumstances in which such heat could be generated inadvertently. Nevertheless, temperatures are monitored continuously using instruments positioned in the outlet ducts.

Disconnections

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make it his policy to collect statistics on the numbers of domestic credit customers disconnected in each region of British Gas during (i) 1979 and (ii) the most recent full year for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Morrison: It is for the Gas Consumers Council to monitor disconnections figures and take up any issues arising from them. The GCC published a report on disconnections in February of last year when disconnections were still rising. Subsequently British Gas modified its procedures on debt and disconnections, in agreement with the Office of Gas Supply, and in the latest 12-month period for which figures are available the number of disconnections has fallen by 35 per cent.

Sellafield (Radioactive Chimneys)

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what measures have been taken to protect the Cumbrian population during the dismantling of the two radioactive chimneys associated with the 1957 fire at Windscale (Sellafield); and what plans are under way for the examination of children and pregnant women during this period.

Mr. Michael Spicer: BNFL is currently decommissioning one of the two original Windscale pile chimneys. All necessary safety precautions will be taken during the decommissioning and this will ensure that no member of the public will be at risk from exposure to radioactive contamination.

Oil and Gas Revenues

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what has been the cumulative total of benefit to the Exchequer from North sea oil and gas since May 1979 to date in respect of (a) licence fees and other revenues, and (b) taxation.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The cumulative total of licence fees attributable to United Kingdom oil and gas production over the fiscal years 1979-80 to 1988-89 is £545 million. Receipts from the gas levy over the same period were £3·8 billion. Total royalty revenues over the period are estimated at £13·6 billion, and total tax revenues at £51·6 billion. Further details are contained in the Report of the Secretary of State for Energy to Parliament of April 1989 (the "Brown Book").

Petroleum Licensing

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he is ready to announce the results of the 11th offshore petroleum licensing round.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I am pleased to be able to tell the House that I am today making conditional offers of 105 licence awards.

The round has been a great success. Virtually all the major companies involved on the United Kingdom continental shelf have made applications. Overall there were 414 applications for individual blocks, many more than in most previous rounds, and representing an average of 3·6 applications for each block applied for.

The high quality of the work programmes on offer was a particular feature of this round, which was evident both by the willingness of many applicants to evaluate prospects at many different geological layers, and by the average of 2·38 firm or conditional wells per block offered by the successful applicants, which is a far higher average than in any previous round.

This round was intended to give the industry the chance to make up lost ground after the difficulties occasioned by low oil prices at the time of the 10th round. These results show that our confidence in launching the round was entirely justified. The industry has responded magnificently, and its commitment will ensure that the UKCS continues to be a major international oil province well into the 21st century.

Before offering particular blocks my Department undertook extensive consultations with fishing, environmental, shipping and defence interests, and where appropriate other particular interests in the area. Special conditions, tailored to the precise circumstances of the block in question, will be included in the licences to ensure that these concerns are taken into account when undertaking operations. I have also ensured that all operators for the newly licensed blocks will be capable of meeting the necessary safety standards.

I am pleased to see that British independents have been well represented in this round. As a result of the awards some British independents will be taking on offshore operatorships for the first time. This demonstrates that our own independent sector is alive and well, and I hope that these opportunities will encourage the further growth of this sector.

A copy of the list of awards has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

British Coal (Licensing)

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the operators of private coal mines currently licensed by British Coal.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is a matter for the British Coal Corporation and I have asked the chairman to write to my right hon. Friend.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what principles he expects to be reflected in British Coal's statement of its licensing policy and practice in relation to the private mining sector referred to in his reply to the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling on 3 November, Official Report, column 708;

(2) when British Coal's statement on its licensing policy and practice in relation to the private mining sector referred to in his reply to the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling on 3 November, Official Report, column 708, will be finalised;

(3) whether he will place in the Library a copy of British Coal's statement on its licensing policy and practice in relation to the private mining sector when it is finalised.

Mr. Michael Spicer: British Coal's statement of licensing policy and practice has now been finalised, and I am today arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

The statement represents the furthest that the corporation considers it can go towards greater flexibility and transparency towards the licensed sector within the constraints imposed by the Coal Industry Nationalisation Act 1946. It describes the criteria the corporation will use for assessing licence applications, and sets the target of processing applications within three months and of indicating objections at an earlier stage if possible. In addition, although a system of external appeal against licence rejection would not be consistent with the 1946 statute, British Coal is instituting internal arrangements along the same lines.

British Coal has reaffirmed its undertaking to set royalties at levels that will permit efficiently managed operations to develop their business profitably, and to reduce royalties for new licences in any case where accounting evidence is provided which demonstrates that profit expectations would otherwise be cut to unreasonably low levels. The corporation has also offered to discuss an increase in the licence period, which may facilitate licensees' mine planning and financial arrangements.

The statement confirms that it is not British Coal's policy to refuse a licence solely on the ground that it is already adequately supplied. It recognises the importance to licensed mines of reasonably assured markets for their coal, and supports the endeavours of licensed operators supplying on a continuing basis to obtain terms which properly reflect this.

British Coal has agreed to prepare annual reviews of developments in the licensed sector, together with brief summaries each six months. I will ensure that copies of these reviews will be placed in the Library of the House.

UKAEA

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what financial targets and external finance limits have been set for the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority for 1989-90.

Mr. Parkinson: I have set a financial target of 4 per cent. return on capital employed defined as current cost profits before long-term interest and extraordinary items on the current cost value of the authority's assets. The external finance limit is £1·2 million, as published in the public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 606).

WALES

Low-Cost Housing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he will take to encourage the provision of low-cost starter homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: We have made record provision for housing associations in Wales, not least because they are in a good position to provide starter homes. The Housing for Wales programme for 1989-90 itself allows for significant investment in new low-cost home ownership schemes. I shall be in touch with local authorities and other interests very soon as regards planning considerations for houses in rural areas.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he will take to provide low-cost rented accommodation in conjunction with (i) housing associations, (ii) local authorities and (iii) the private sector; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: We welcome the hon. Gentleman's interest in mixed funding. We have encouraged housing associations and local authorities to work together to provide homes for rent as well as for shared ownership. Some £15 million of private investment in social housing is expected to be attracted to Wales in 1989-90 on top of the publicly funded programme of over £70 million.

Health Service

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received from general practitioners and others on the effects of the proposals outlined in the National Health Service White Paper, "Working For Patients", on practices in (a) the south Wales valleys and (b) rural areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Social Workers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take measures to increase the number of social workers in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: It is for individual local authorities to determine the appropriate number of social workers required to meet their statutory obligations and provide an adequate range and depth of services. Rate support grant provision to local authorities for 1989-90 was 14·5 per cent. higher than that for 1988-89. My right hon. Friend will be announcing the rate support grant for 1990-91 in the autumn.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of social workers employed by each of the county authorities of Wales; what is his estimate of the number of fully qualified social workers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Grist: The information requested is given in the table. Details of qualifications are available centrally only for full-time staff.

| Local Authority | Number of full-time social workers at 30 September 1988 | |
|---|---|---|
| | Total[1] | Qualified[2] |
| Clwyd | 168 | 144 |
| Dyfed | 148 | 117 |
| Gwent | 208 | 175 |
| Gwynedd | 111 | 71 |
| Mid Glamorgan | 245 | 204 |
| Powys | 41 | 27 |
| South Glamorgan | 188 | 170 |
| West Glamorgan | 167 | 106 |

Notes:
[1] Senior social workers, social workers and community workers.
[2] Holding the certificate of qualification in social work of the CCETSW or equivalent.

Sewage Outfalls

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list indicating the position of all sewage outfalls, whether into rivers or the sea, and the daily average volume of effluent released by each outfall.

Mr. Grist: No. This information is already available on public registers maintained by water authorities.

Postgraduate Medical and Dental Education

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he intends to make for postgraduate medical and dental education in Wales following the abolition of the Council for Postgraduate Medical Education in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: Following extensive consultation by officials of my Department, I have concluded that a separate Welsh Council for Postgraduate Medical and Dental Education would be appropriate and will be established with effect from 1 July 1989, with the following terms of reference:

To advise the Secretary of State for Wales and make provision on his behalf for the delivery of postgraduate and continuing medical and dental education in Wales, taking into account both the standards promulgated by professional bodies and the potential difficulties of reconciling service and training needs; to identify particular problems and to develop realistic solutions to these in consultation with relevant interests; and to report regularly.

The chairman of the council will be Mr. E. M. W. Griffith CBE, chairman of Clwyd health authority. Members have been selected so as to cover the widest range of educational, professional and service interests. The setting up of this new body, after extensive consultation with professional and educational interests in Wales, reflects the Government's commitment to maintaining and enhancing the standards of medical and dental education in Wales.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Licensed Premises

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if, pursuant to this reply to the hon. Member for Cambridgeshire, South-West (Sir A. Grant) on 8 June, Official Report, column 229, he will make a statement on his proposals to amend the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 in so far as it affects the security of tenure of tenants of licensed premises.

Mr. Maude: The Government will bring forward legislation to amend the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 in relation to the security of tenure of licensed premises as soon as parliamentary time permits.

Wolverhampton and Dudley Brewery

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in which petty sessional divisions Wolverhampton and Dudley Brewery has over 33 per cent. of the public house licences.

Mr. Maude: In 1986, which is the most recent year for which detailed figures are available, Wolverhampton and Dudley Breweries owned 33 per cent. or more of the full on-licensed premises in the following petty sessional divisions: Dudley, Kidderminster, Stourbridge, Bewdley Borough.

Faulty Cars

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will consider introducing into United Kingdom law, laws similar to the United States Lemon laws giving a right to consumers to reject faulty cars.

Mr. Forth: The Sale of Goods Act 1979 provides for the consumer, if he acts within a reasonable time, to reject goods which are not of merchantable quality. Subject to minor clarifying amendments, the Government intend to implement the Law Commissions' recommendations (Cm. 137) for changes which would strengthen and clarify consumers' rights, in particular by replacing the old requirement of "merchantable" quality with a more up-to-date definition. However there are no plans to introduce legislation similar to United States Lemon laws.

Iraq

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what British trade missions have visited Iraq in the past year; and if he will ensure that any future missions are briefed by the Government on the Iraq Government's war against its Kurdish minority.

Mr. Alan Clark [holding answer 26 June 1989]: In the 12 months ended 31 May 1989 the DTI sponsored four trade missions to Iraq led by:

British Water Industries Group
Engineering Industries Association
Association of British Healthcare Industries
British Electro-technical and Allied Manufacturers Association

The addition my Department is aware of three missions led by:

Nottingham Chamber of Commerce
Coventry Chamber of Commerce
Manchester Chamber of Commerce

Officials from my Department normally brief officially sponsored missions and those unsponsored missions they are invited to address. Such briefing concentrates on commercial relations and aspects of doing business in the country. Officials in the United Kingdom and commercial staff abroad are always willing to brief trade delegations on political developments.

Human Genome Analysis

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what advice has been given by the British Government to the European Communities regarding the Commission of the Communities proposal for a programme in human genome analysis.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 June 1989]: The European Commission's proposal for a new research programme in predictive medicine is concerned with human genome analysis. An explanatory memorandum on this programme was submitted to the Committees of the House concerned with European legislation by the Department of Health on 28 September 1988. Discussion on the programme is still taking place in a working group of the European Council in which the British Government participated.

SCOTLAND

Nephrops

71. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any proposals to add the nephrops fisheries in areas IV and VI to the current United Kingdom pressure stock licensing scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In view of the fact that nephrops in area IV are not subject to a quota, and that catches of nephrops in areas Vb and VI have been on average only 70 to 80 per cent. of the United Kingdom's total allowable catch in recent years, I do not consider that the designation of these stocks as pressure stocks would be justified. However, fisheries departments continue to monitor these stocks closely and have the ability to restrict their uptake if necessary.

Regional Grants

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give the total amount of expenditure in regional development grant between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 and for each of the region and island authorities;

(2) if he will give the total amount of expenditure on enterprise grants between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 and for each of the region and island authorities;

(3) if he will give the total amount of expenditure on regional selective assistance between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 and for each of the region and island authorities.

Mr. Lang: Comprehensive figures in the form requested are not available for expenditure under the old regional development grant scheme. Expenditures on each of the revised regional development grant (RDG2) scheme, regional enterprise grants (REG) and regional selective assistance (RSA) in the period 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989 are given in the table.

| Region | Regional development grants £ million | Regional enterprise grants £ million | Regional selective assistance £ million |
|---|---|---|---|
| Borders | — | — | * |
| Central | * | * | 2·0 |
| Dumfries and Galloway | * | — | 0·8 |

| Strathclyde | 41·6 | 0·2 | 22·4 |
| Tayside | 4·0 | * | 1·8 |
| TOTAL | 50·8 | 0·3 | 38·0 |

Notes:

(i) Regional development grants and regional enterprise grants are available in development areas. Regional selective assistance is available in development and intermediate areas.

(ii) Starred entries are suppressed to avoid disclosure of information relating to individual businesses.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give the total number of applications (a) received and (b) approved for regional development grants between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 and for each of the region and island authorities;

(2) if he will give the total number of applications (a) received and (b) approved for enterprise grants between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 and for each of the region and island authorities;

(3) if he will give the total number of applications (a) received and (b) approved for regional selective assistance between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 and for each of the region and island authorities.

Mr. Lang: Comprehensive figures in the form requested are not available for the old regional development grant scheme. The revised regional development grant (RDG2) scheme closed to new applications on 31 March 1998. Figures for RDG2 approvals and for applications and offers of regional enterprise grants (REG) and regional selective assistance (RSA) in the period 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989 are given in the table:

| Region | RDG2 | REG | | RSA | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Approvals | Applications | Offers | Applications | Offers |
| Central | * | * | * | * | * |
| Dumfries and Galloway | 6 | — | — | * | * |
| Fife | * | * | * | 29 | 24 |
| Highland | — | — | — | * | * |

| Western Isles | — | — | — | * | * |
| Location undecided | — | * | — | — | — |
| Total | 3,148 | 481 | 226 | 255 | 221 |

Notes: (i) RDG2 and REG are available in development areas. RSA is available in development and intermediate areas.
(ii) Starred figures are suppressed to avoid disclosure of information relating to individual businesses.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Bail Hostels

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals for new bail hostels he has received from the Greater Manchester area; and what steps he is taking to encourage proposals.

Mr. John Patten: Following a meeting between officials and representatives of the Greater Manchester probation service on 1 December 1988 capital provision of £550,000 was allocated to provide about 50 new bail hostel places in Manchester by April 1990. On 9 March 1989 officials visited the Greater Manchester probation service to discuss their proposals which will involve two new bail hostels and additional places at two existing hostels.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the average time taken between an applicant to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board applying for an appeal hearing and the appeal taking place;

(2) what is the average length of time taken between receipt of a claim and its single member adjudication by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board.

Mr. John Patten: Information is not available in the form requested, but the percentage of cases resolved by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board within certain periods of registration, either by single member adjudication or hearings determination, is shown at paragraphs 6 and 11 of the board's latest annual report (Cm. 536), a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many claims to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board are awaiting single member adjudication; and, of those, how many have been awaiting adjudication for over one year, two years, three years, four years and five years, respectively;

(2) what is the longest period that has been taken to reach single member adjudication in any claim to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board;

(3) what plans there are to speed up the processing of claims to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The board does not keep detailed information about the length of time for which cases have awaited determination by a single member. On 1 June 1989, 69,480 applications were awaiting final determination by a single member. Interim assessments of compensation had been made in 2,828 of these cases.

To speed up the processing of claims the board's complement has been increased from 220 in 1987 to 320 now and a new office has been opened in Glasgow where recruitment is expected to be easier and turnover lower than in London. The board's new chairman is reviewing administrative procedures with the aim of reducing the time taken to resolve claims.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many members of staff are employed by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board;

(2) how many staff vacancies at the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board are presently being advertised;

(3) what is the present level of staff shortages as a percentage of the recommended full staff complement at the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board.

Mr. John Patten: On 23 June 1989 the board had the equivalent of 317 whole-time staff, 0·9 per cent. below its complement of 320, including 36 temporary staff engaged as part of the phased relocation of about 180 posts from London to Glasgow. The vacancies are being filled by interdepartmental trawl.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average length of time taken between the receipt of an appraisal by single member adjudication and receipt of a formal Criminal Injuries Compensation Board decision and the notification of the outcome to the applicant.

Mr. John Patten: Notification of a decision by a single member of the board is usually dispatched within two weeks of the date of the decision. Applicants whose claims are decided following a hearing are usually advised of the decision at the conclusion of the proceedings.

Seat Belt Offences

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of (a) males and (b) females (i) charged and (ii) convicted of failure to wear a seat belt in 1987 and 1988;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of (a) males and (b) females (i) 16 to 18, (ii) 19 to 21, (iii) 22 to 24, (iv) 25 to 30 and (v) 30 years and over who were (aa) charged and (bb) convicted of failure to wear a seat belt in 1987 and 1988.

Mr. John Patten: The latest available information is shown in the table. Information on the age of persons proceeded against for summary offences is not generally collected for those aged 21 and over. Since 1 October 1986, the police have been able to issue fixed penalty notices for seat belt offences as an alternative to prosecution. Further information is given in Home Office statistical bulletin issue 32/88, table 13 of which suggests that in 1987 there was a large rise in the enforcement of this legislation. Figures for 1988 will be published in the autumn.

Proceedings at magistrates' courts for seat belt offences

England and Wales 1987 — Number of offences

| Age group | Males | | Females | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Proceeded against | Found guilty | Proceeded against | Found guilty |
| Under 16 | 16 | 13 | — | — |
| 16 to 18 | 341 | 285 | 29 | 26 |
| 19 to 20 | 655 | 555 | 49 | 43 |
| 21 and over | 7,497 | 6,094 | 563 | 488 |
| Total | 8,509 | 6,947 | 641 | 557 |

Parties (Police Powers)

Dr. Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he plans to seek further powers to enable the police to deal with large-scale party-style events held on private property;

(2) if he will call for a report from the Chief Constable of the Thames Valley on the events at White Waltham industrial estate on Saturday 24 June, and on the outcome of police inquiries into these events.

(3) if he will take steps to ensure that police and local authorities are aware in advance of the planned location of the large-scale party-style events planned for July.

Mr. Hurd: I have just received from the Chief Constable of Thames Valley a report on the incident at White Waltham on 24 June and I will consider the need for any further action in the light of his assessment of events. The police have been aware of the growth of these parties and, insofar as there may be a breach of the law or a risk to public safety, have taken action to prevent them where possible. I understand that the Metropolitan Police have been able to prevent in advance or shut down some 75 such parties so far this year.

In addition to continuing police action, those involved in these events should be aware that they may be in breach of existing public entertainment law. The controls exist to ensure that the local authority, police and fire services are given advance notice of events, that there are proper control and safety arrangements, and to minimise nuisance to the local community. It is already an offence to provide public entertainment involving music and dancing without a licence. The maximum penalty in Greater London is a fine of up to £2,000 plus imprisonment of up to three months. Outside Greater London, the fine is the same but imprisonment is not available.

There are also controls over nuisance caused by noise, for which the maximum penalty is a fine of up to £2,000.

We are satisfied that the existing law on the misuse of drugs is strong and adequate. At large gatherings of young people there is always the risk of drugs being used or supplied. The police attach high priority to drugs enforcement and action will be taken where necessary.

Those who hire out large premises would be well advised to exercise caution to establish the true purpose of the activity and inform the police if they are suspicious. Regular use of premises for purposes for which planning permission had not been obtained may result in enforcement action.

There is in being a comprehensive set of controls, backed up by offences, and penalties for those who commit them, to keep events within proper grounds.

I am considering whether there are any gaps in the law, but it is clear that the main need is for citizens who have advance knowledge of any party at which the law may be broken to give timely information to the police so that the law can be enforced.

Prisons

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners there were in Leicester prison as at (a) 26, (b) 23, (c) 16, (d) 9 and (e) 2 June, and (f) 26 (g) 19 and (h) 12 May 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is as follows:

| | Numbers |
|---|---|
| 26 June 1989 | 362 |
| 23 June 1989 | 365 |
| 16 June 1989 | 369 |
| 9 June 1989 | 389 |
| 2 June 1989 | 374 |
| 26 May 1989 | 381 |
| 19 May 1989 | 388 |
| 12 May 1989 | 379 |

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when a decision is to be taken on the application of Mr. G. M. Tinwala—reference: T204490—to settle in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Renton: The British deputy high commission in Bombay was notified on 27 June that entry clearance may be issued to Mr. Tinwala.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East can expect to hear from his Department on the case of Mohammed Nazak and Miss Jurida Begum, reference N. 158192, whose papers were forwarded by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to his Department on 6 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: I have replied to the hon. Member's letter of 6 June today.

Road Accidents

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions are given to chief constables in relation to the inspection of tachographs and their charts following road accidents involving vehicles which are required to carry them.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. This is a matter for individual chief officers of police.

Crime Prevention

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has proposals to review the effectiveness of prison sentences in controlling crime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Our views were set out in the Green Paper "Punishment, Custody and the Community" (Cm. 424), published in July last year.

Commission for Racial Equality

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many men from the ethnic groups (a) Afro-Caribbean or African, (b) Asian and (c) white have been appointed in the principal, director and chief executive grades of the Commission for Racial Equality;

(2) how many women from the ethnic groups (a) Afro-Caribbean or African, (b) Asian and (c) white have been appointed in the principal, director and chief executive grades of the Commission for Racial Equality.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is as follows:

| | Chief Executive | Director | Principal |
|---|---|---|---|
| Men | | | |
| a. Afro-Caribbean and African | — | — | 1 |
| b. Asian | — | 1 | 5 |

| b. Asian | — | — | — |
| c. White | — | 2 | 2 |

Prisoners (Rule 43)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were on rule 43 in prisons in England and Wales on 1 June.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 14 June 1989]: The latest readily available information is given in the table.

Prisoners held in prison service establishments in England and Wales under prison rule 43 and young offender institution rule 46: by type of segregation, age group and sex, 30 April 1989

TRANSPORT

Greenhouse Effect

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has taken account of the implications for the greenhouse effect of his Department's forecast increase in vehicle miles of 83-142 per cent. by the year 2025 in his recent White Paper, "Roads for Prosperity" (Cm. 693);

(2) what account has been taken of environmental degradation including atmospheric pollution in his recent White Paper, "Roads for Prosperity" (Cm. 693).

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Road congestion is bad for the environment. It increases atmospheric pollution whereas free-flowing traffic cuts down on emissions and saves fuel.

The proposals in "Roads for Prosperity" will also have a major impact in improving the environment by taking traffic away from communities and off unsuitable roads. The emphasis in our programme on increasing the capacity of existing routes will help minimise its environmental impact. Protecting and enhancing the environment will continue to be a major feature of our road building plans.

I have sent the hon. Member a copy of the press notice No. 291 (28 June) which illustrates how exhaust fumes at the 1979 levels would be possible if economic driving and efficient maintenance were widespread.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals his Department has put forward for reducing greenhouse gas emissions such as carbon dioxide and tropospheric ozone from road transport since the Prime Minister's seminar on the greenhouse effect on 26 April.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: At the Council of Environment Ministers held in Luxembourg on 8 and 9 June my noble Friend the Minister for Housing, Environment and Countryside supported tighter new limits on gaseous emissions from small cars. These gases are the precursors of tropospheric ozone. He was also successful in pressing the Commission to report back to the Council on measures that can be taken to combat carbon dioxide emissions from cars.

Orange Badges

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he sought advice from organisations representing disabled people before deciding that eligibility for orange badges should not automatically be extended to those with upper limb disabilities.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The decision that badges should continue to be restricted to people with severe mobility problems was made in the light of representations from the statutory disabled persons transport advisory committee (DPTAC).

The committee's constituent organisations include: the joint committee on mobility for the disabled, the Disabled Drivers Association, the Royal Association for Disability and Rehabilitation and the Disabled Drivers Motor Club. The majority of DPTAC's members are people with disabilities. We have accepted DPTAC's advice. We are taking medical advice on the mobility problems specific to Thalidomide victims. We are also in touch with the Thalidomide Trust and the Thalidomide Society.

Any individual who has a severe mobility problem may qualify for a badge, regardless of the medical cause of the problem.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of (a) the effects of private sector involvement in the building of the Channel tunnel rail link and (b) whether the private sector has a role in appraisal of the design; and what financial advisers are employed by his Department to advise on private sector investment in building the Channel tunnel rail link.

Mr. Portillo: Our assessment will depend on the outcome of British Rail's current discussions with a number of private sector interests. The Department has not as yet appointed financial advisers on this matter.

Aircraft (Near-Misses)

Mr. Rhodes James: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will ask the Air Accident Investigation Branch for an urgent report on the near-miss over Heathrow airport at approximately 07.30 hours on Saturday 26 June involving an Air Canada flight from London to Nice and another aircraft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Civil Aviation Authority which has statutory responsibility for the safety regulation of civil aviation within the United Kingdom, has no record of any near-miss incident occurring over Heathrow airport at the time specified on either Saturday 24 June or Monday 26 June.

Severn Crossing

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will make arrangements for an exhibition at Westminister similar to the one currently on display in venues in Gwent, together with a briefing by officials, in order for hon. Members on both sides of the Bristol channel to be fully informed of the proposals for the second Severn crossing.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The exhibition—which explains proposed changes to the route of the approach roads to the second Severn crossing—is already being held at venues on both sides of the Bristol channel—at Caldicot 26 to 28 June; at Rogiet 29 June to 1 July; at Pilning 3 to 5 July; and at Avonmouth 7 and 8 July. Officials will be on hand throughout to respond to queries.

Hon. Members with a constituency interest were told in advance about the exhibition. Any hon. Member unable to attend should write to me; it may be possible to arrange a separate viewing for them of the display material at a later date.

Unleaded Petrol

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on whether car engines deteriorate more quickly when only lead-free petrol is used in them.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Most of the information available to the Department comes from the United States, where there is more than a decade of experience with running on unleaded petrol. It has been found that components of the drivetrain, such as spark plugs and exhaust systems may last longer with unleaded petrol. There is no indication of damage from unleaded petrol when engines are designed for its use.

Using unleaded petrol in a vehicle for which it is not designed could result in serious damage.

British Rail (Safety)

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list (a) the number of reports he has received from the railways inspectorate, (b) the number recommending prosecutions, and (c) the number of prosecutions taken up and the outcome for each of the past 10 years;

(2) if he will list (a) the number of deaths on British Rail premises each year in the last 10 years and (b) the number of prosecutions for such deaths and the outcome of the prosecutions.

Mr. Portillo: The number of deaths on British Rail premises during the period 1979-88 is in table A. Table B shows the number of prosecutions arising from incidents involving fatalities and the outcome. The decision to go ahead with prosecutions under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 is a matter solely for the chief inspecting officer of railways. He does not consult my right hon. Friend before proceeding. Details of all prosecutions, and their outcome, during the period 1980-1988 were set out in my answer of 4 May 1989, at column 118 to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) There were no prosecutions in 1979.

Table A
Fatal Accidents on BR Premises 1979-1988

| Liverpool Street Station | 1 | 13 January 1987 | Guilty, fined £5,000 plus £900 costs. |

Street Lighting

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money has been spent by each county council highways authority on street lighting in 1988-89 and 1989-90; and what percentage that money is of the total amount spent on roads, by each county.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Figures for local authority spending on street lighting are not yet available for the years in question.

Capital Expenditure

Sir William Shelton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the capital expenditure invested in (a) Rail Network SouthEast and (b) London Underground in 1988-89.

Mr. Portillo: This information will be published in the 1989-90 annual report and accounts for British Rail and London Regional Transport. Both documents will be published shortly.

M3

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the state of the surface of the M3 between junctions 4 and 2, London-bound; and when repairs are scheduled to take place.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This length of motorway is in need of surface maintenance. The necessary work is planned for early next year.

Highways

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what allocation each county council highways authority has made in 1988-89 and 1989-90 for non-major schemes.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No figures are available yet for 1989-90. The counties' 1988-89 budgets for capital expenditure on schemes costing less than £1 million were as follows:

1988-89 budgets for capital expenditure on schemes costing under £1 million

Docklands (Traffic Delays)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) for how long the hon. Member for Enfield, Southgate (Mr. Portillo) was delayed in traffic on his visit to Luciano Pavarotti's concert in docklands; what representations he has received on traffic delays in the docklands area; and if he will increase planned expenditure on road links between central London and docklands;

(2) if, given the considerable traffic delays encountered by those attending last Sunday's London Arena concert by Luciano Pavarotti, he will speed up work on (a) roads and (b) communications generally for the London docklands.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 26 June 1989]: It took me just over an hour from Westminster to the Arena, which is about the time I allow for journeys to major events at Earls Court, Wimbledon and so on. It was perhaps a pity that more people did not choose to travel by docklands light railway, which was operated especially for the Pavarotti concert.

The Department and the London Docklands development corporation have very large road programmes which are being pursued with all possible urgency. On the A13 trunk road in Tower Hamlets and Newham, over £60 million of schemes will provide interim and permanent improvements to every major junction and bridge over the next seven years. These schemes form part of the Department's £600 million programme for trunk roads in east London of which the Sidcup bypass, South Woodford to Barking relief road, Rochester way relief road and Beckton flyover tidal flow are already complete, and others in hand include the A406 Chingford road to Hale End road improvement, the A12 Hackney Wick to M11 link road and the proposed east London river crossing, on the design of which we hope to make an announcement shortly. With refurbishment of the Blackwall tunnel south bore now nearing completion, we hope to tackle the north bore in offpeak periods over the two years from September. We have also invited tenders for a new traffic control and communications system for east London to be located at Blackwall.

The London Docklands development corporation's £550 million programme of access roads includes schemes already complete in the Surrey docks and under way at the Royal docks. Work will start later this year on a new crossing over the lower Lea, and the compulsory purchase order has now been made for the proposed 1·5 km dual two-lane cut-and-cover tunnel from The Highway to Westferry road and Poplar, known as the Limehouse link.

The Department is working closely on co-ordination of streetworks with the utilities, developers, the police and the LDDC which has commissioned a study into extending the controlled parking zone to docklands.

On public transport, the reliability of the docklands light railway is being improved with an urgent programme of remedial measures. Capacity will be trebled on completion of the extension to Bank, and the Bill for a link to Beckton is now completing its parliamentary passage. I am about to receive the report of the east London rail study recommending extension of the Jubilee line through Surrey docks, Canary wharf and the Greenwich peninsula to Stratford, for which we shall be seeking contributions from developers. Subject to satisfactory contributions, LRT could deposit the necessary Bill in Parliament in November. British Rail is introducing longer trains in October on its north London link, where capacity will be increased by a tunnel refurbishment to be funded by LDDC. The new network of docklands minibus routes usefully complements London Regional Transport's improved docklands bus services, and Thamesline riverbus services are being extended to Greenland and Greenwich piers.

My chairmanship of a steering group comprising operators, boroughs, utilities, developers, the police and the LDDC enables me to help keep the momentum up and to intervene whenever necessary to facilitate action.

I am satisfied that the docklands transport programmes are appropriate and are being progressed as fast as possible.

PRIME MINISTER

Water Privatisation

Q13. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding water privatisation.

Q105. Mr. Goodlad: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding water privatisation.

The Prime Minister: I receive many representations about water privatisation, which provides the best framework and conditions for achieving even higher standards of water quality.

United States of America

Q71. Mr. Malins: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding relations with the United States of America.

The Prime Minister: No.

Berlin Wall

Q83. Mr. Cash: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the Berlin wall.

The Prime Minister: There is widespread concern in Britain about the Berlin wall and the shootings which took place there earlier this year. Such barriers to freedom have no place in Europe today. We look forward to the day when the wall is torn down.

Competition Policy

Q89. Mr. Page: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations concerning competition policy.

The Prime Minister: I receive many and varied representations about the Government's policies which seek to extend competition and opportunity.

Peterstene Wentlooge

Q95. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister whether she intends to pay an official visit to the Peterstene Wentlooge area of Newport, West.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Small Businesses

Q98. Mr. William Powell: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the performance of small businesses.

The Prime Minister: No specific representations have been received. The small firms sector is flourishing in the beneficial climate the Government have created for businesses. Estimated, unadjusted figures for last year are already showing a record rate of new business formation, net of closures, of 1,300 new businesses a week.

Self-employment

Q100. Mr. Marland: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding self-employment.

The Prime Minister: I receive many letters from people who have become self-employed or who are thinking of setting up their own businesses. Many refer to the satisfaction they have found in setting up in business, having taken advantage of the improved climate for enterprise in this country. This improvement is reflected in the increase by 1 million in the number of self-employed people in the United Kingdom since this Government came into office.

City of London

Q101. Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the performance of the City of London.

The Prime Minister: I regularly discuss the performance of the City which makes an important contribution to our economic prosperity.

Environment Protection

Q102. Sir Hugh Rossi: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the protection of the environment.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations regarding the environment. The Government have undertaken a great many measures to improve the quality of the environment. We intend to bring forward further legislative proposals shortly.

National Heritage

Q104. Mr. Alexander: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received representations regarding the national heritage.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friends and I receive representations frequently. The national heritage is vital to the quality of life.

Ozone Layer

Q107. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Prime Minister if she has received recent representations regarding the ozone layer.

The Prime Minister: I have received many representations regarding the ozone layer.

Yorkshire and Humberside

Q149. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to pay a visit to Yorkshire and Humberside.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

British Rail (Land)

Mr. Adley: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make it her policy not to require British Rail to dispose of railway land from which railway services have been withdrawn.

The Prime Minister: I understand that before British Rail declare unused railway land non-operational, they normally take account of possible future railway requirements.

Family Problems

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will co-ordinate action to tackle current problems of the family.

The Prime Minister: The present arrangements for co-ordination between Government Departments ensure that full consideration is given to all matters affecting the family.

Rain Forests

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister whether Commissioner Carla Ripa Di Meana had any consultations with Her Majesty's Government before arranging (a) to meet representatives of the Green party and (b) to make contact with non-governmental organisations concerned with the rain forest in Britain; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No. I understand that the European Commission is prepared to listen to the views of all bodies with an interest in the environment, including Opposition parties and non-governmental organisations. They are not obliged to consult the Governments of member states of the European Community before doing so. Her Majesty's Government have had regular and detailed discussions with the Commissioner on a wide range of environmental issues since he took up his post in January of this year.

Import Licences

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list all those gifts received by her or her Ministers during the past five years which have required an import licence under the conventions on international trade in endangered species; and how many such applications were (a) initially granted, (b) granted on appeal and (c) refused.

The Prime Minister: This information is not readily obtainable and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Community Charge

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make an official visit to South Yorkshire and the Barnsley, East constituency to explain Government policy on the poll tax.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so. The Government have no plans for any poll tax. The Government policy on and implications of the community charge have been fully set out in the excellent leaflets published by the Department of the Environment and the Welsh Office.

Malaysia

Miss Lestor: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her answer of 23 June, Official Report, column 276, whether any of the clarifications by which the Government made clear to the Malaysian Government, on a number of occasions in 1988, that they were willing to consider Malaysian requests for aid were contained in correspondence which also related to the arms sales package, the memorandum of understanding of which was they were signed in 1988.

The Prime Minister: The contents of Government-to-Government correspondence are confidential. As the hon. Member will be aware from the reply of my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development to her earlier question on 19 June at column 18 we have been giving grant aid to Malaysia since well before negotiations on the defence sales package began.

Engagements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 June.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 June.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 June.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 June.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 June.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 June.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

DEFENCE

Port Calls

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the dates of port calls by Royal Naval vessels to foreign ports in 1987, 1988 and 1989; and what are the dates of planned port calls up to 1990.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our normal practice to disclose planned port visits by Royal Navy vessels, but I will write to the hon. Member about the first part of his question.

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what importance the Government attach to visits by Royal Naval vessels to foreign ports; and what is the Government's policy regarding port calls.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government attach great importance to visits to foreign ports by Her Majesty's ships. Port calls help to forge and maintain links with other countries and navies and, by providing opportunities for rest and recreation, play a prominent part in maintaining crew morale. Visits are also made for operational reasons, such as to take on supplies and fuel, and can offer opportunities to display British technology which can be of direct benefit to United Kingdom industry.

It is our policy to encourage Royal Navy visits to foreign ports and, where appropriate, to reciprocate by welcoming foreign naval vessels to United Kingdom ports.

Public Relations

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which public relations firms his Department has employed and at what cost, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Apart from the special circumstances of privatisation work, the consistent practice of successive Governments has been to avoid the use of public relations firms or other firms outside Government for public relations work.

Low Flying

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the areas in the United Kingdom where low flying at 250 ft is permitted and where ultra low flying at 100 ft is permitted; and which of these areas is used by naval aircraft or aircraft assigned to naval operations.

Mr. Neubert: Since the introduction of the revised United Kingdom low flying system in 1979, the whole of Great Britain has, in principle, been open to low flying down to 250 feet except for major conurbations, danger zones and certain areas such as civil and military air traffic zones, airports and glider sites. Flying down to 100 feet is permitted only in three sparsely populated areas in northern Scotland, central Wales and the Borders. The United Kingdom low flying system as a whole is available for use by Royal Navy aircraft where their role makes such training necessary.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of low flying sorties over the United Kingdom were flown by naval aircraft or aircraft assigned to naval operations in 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Neubert: Central records are not held in a form that would allow this information to be provided.

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he first received information from the right hon. Member for Swansea, West about a low-flying Royal Air Force aircraft's simulated attack on Swansea airport; when he intends to let him know the outcome of the Department's inquiries into the allegation of low flying; and if he will give detailed reasons for the delay.

Mr. Neubert: As the right hon. Member will recall, I met him on the evening of Monday 30 January to discuss several alleged low flying incidents in the west Swansea area. I wrote to the right hon. Member on 1 February with full details of the incident involving a simulated attack on Swansea airport by a Royal Air Force aircraft. I also wrote to the right hon. Member on 19 May about a separate incident on 24 January. I hope to be able to write to the right hon. Member shortly about another incident in the Swansea area on 20 January, into which the RAF police investigation has not yet been concluded, but I am not aware that either of these incidents involved Swansea airport.

Ministry Houses, Barton Stacey

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many houses the Ministry of Defence owns at Barton Stacey; and, of these, how many were empty on 31 March in each year from 1986 to 1989.

Mr. Neubert: The Army's stock of married quarters and vacancies at 31 March for each of the years 1986 to 1989 was as follows:

| | Stock | Vacancies |
|---|---|---|
| 31 March 1986 | 161 | 29 |
| 31 March 1987 | 161 | 86 |
| 31 March 1988 | 138 | 35 |
| 31 March 1989 | 138 | 27 |

Of the 27 vacancies at 31 March this year, seven were already allocated to nominated incomers, one was awaiting repair and 10 were already being processed for disposal and will shortly be advertised under the discounted sale to service men scheme.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what agreement has been concluded with the United States Government relating to the development of a stand-off nuclear missile to replace the WE177 free-fall nuclear bomb.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are still studying a number of procurement options for possible replacement of the WE177 free fall nuclear bomb, but no decisions have yet been taken.

Nuclear Submarines (Swansea)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what approvals are required for a nuclear submarine berth to be established at the port of Swansea; and which approvals have been obtained so far.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All berths for nuclear-powered submarines require the approval of the nuclear-powered warships safety committee, an independent committee whose members include national experts on nuclear safety matters. The nuclear-powered warships safety committee reports to the Secretary of State for Defence on all public safety aspects of the use of a berth by nuclear-powered warships. If a berth is approved by the nuclear-powered warships safety committee, a final decision on its use is taken by this Department, in consultation with local and port authorities.

Since I replied to the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West (Mr. Jones) on 26 June at column 371, the nuclear-powered warships safety committee has given its approval for a berth at Swansea to be used by nuclear-powered submarines: further discussions between Ministry of Defence officials and local and port authorities will follow.

Trucks Supply

Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the result of the competition to supply 4-tonne trucks to the services will be made known.

Mr. Sainsbury: Detailed appraisal of the results of demanding and comprehensive user and evaluation trials of vehicles supplied by the three competing companies—AWD Ltd, Leyland DAF and Volvo (GB) Ltd.—has now been completed. This, together with a comparative assessment of the three companies' commercial proposals in terms of both capital purchase and whole life costs make it clear that the Leyland DAF vehicle is the one giving best value for money. I am pleased to anounce, therefore, that we shall shortly be placing an order with Leyland DAF for the supply of 4-tonne trucks to meet the services' requirements over the period 1990-91 to 1994-95. I should add that the competition provided an excellent example of the effectiveness of our procurement policy. It was hard fought between three very good companies, any one of whose vehicles would have met the services' requirements.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Food Research

69. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the future of the institutes of food research in Reading, Norwich and Bristol.

Mr. Jackson: The AFRC has taken the decision, consistent with the policy outlined in its corporate plan, to consolidate the work of the Institute of Food Research at the Reading and Norwich sites and to secure the future of the laboratories. The restructured institute will allow for greater emphasis on key areas such as food safety. The laboratory at Langford, Bristol will cease to be part of the institute by the end of 1990.

70. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many research workers will be made redundant by the closure of the food research centre at Bristol; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Although there will be redundancies arising from the withdrawal of AFRC funding from the Bristol laboratory of the Institute of Food Research, it is not possible at this stage to state precisely the number of research workers involved. The detailed implementation of staffing changes for the institute as a whole, following the restructuring plan announced by AFRC, is now being determined; every effort will be made to keep compulsory redundancies to a minimum. With respect to the Bristol laboratory, there will be opportunities for the redeployment of some of its scientists, to new scientific posts and other vacancies within the remaining institute laboratories at Reading and Norwich, within the agricultural and food research service and elsewhere.

Sport

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will respond to those parts of the report "Sport and Young People, Partnership and Action" produced by the school sport forum in July 1988 which relate to his departmental responsibilities.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Education and Science and for the Environment will issue a joint response shortly.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give an updated report on progress so far with the establishment of various city technology colleges.

Mr. Butcher: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my right hon. Friend gave on 6 June to my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre Forest (Mr. Coombs) Official Report, column 10.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table in the Official Report in respect of city technology colleges, giving, in respect of each city technology college or proposed or planned city technology college, information as to (a) name, site, and local authority, (b) numbers of pupils, (c) total cost, (d) maximum amount of Exchequer contribution by way of (i) grant and (ii) loans, (e) amount of sponsors' contributions whether in cash or kind and names of principal sponsors, (f) the nature of any contracts for the supply of goods or services awarded to sponsors, or close associates of sponsors, and their names, (g) whether closure of an existing school is involved, (h) whether any ballot of parents has been held and (i) what level of teachers' salaries are paid.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information requested by the right hon. Member is as follows:

[1] This covers only the initial capital costs of establishing the CTC. It does not include revenue costs.
[2] Sponsors' contribution to date. Funding raising continues in each project. This includes contributions in kind which are as yet uncosted.
[3] Confirmed sponsorship to date.
[4] Public consultations were held by Kent on its proposals to close the Downs school. One statutory objection containing 62 signatures was made to the section 12 proposal subsequently published.

In addition sponsors have announced plans for the establishment of CTCs in the premises of the Sylvan school, Croydon, the Haberdashers' Aske's schools, Hatcham, and the Bacon's school, Bermondsey. These all involve the closure or discontinuance of the existing schools under the provisions of either section 12 of the 1980 Education Act or section 14 of the 1944 Education Act. I have made clear that any such proposals which come to me will be treated strictly on their merits and it would be inappropriate to comment further. CTCs are independent schools and it will be for their governors to determine what level of salaries are paid to their staff. However, my recurrent grant to CTCs will be comparable to what LEAs spend on maintained schools in similar areas, including expenditure on staff salaries.

Higher Education (Consultative Paper)

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received in relation to his consultative paper, "Shifting the Balance of Public Funding of Higher Education to Fees."

Mr. Jackson: We have received more than 150 almost wholly favourable responses.

Crack

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the 15 inner-city areas targeted by education co-ordinators in a campaign to persuade teenagers to say no to crack; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The Government believe that it would be counterproductive to identify particular localities. Local education authorities' drugs education co-ordinators are intensifying their efforts and collaborating with other agencies and the wider local communities in all areas where crack appears to them to be an actual or potential problem. The Government are ready to support local efforts of this sort, and are in touch with local agencies about appropriate means of doing so.

Expenditure

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the cumulative total of his Department's expenditure since May 1979 to date over and above the expenditure level prevailing in May 1979.

Mrs. Rumbold: The total programme of the Department of Education and Science in 1979 and each subsequent financial year is given in the table below:

Expenditure (outturn)

| Financial year | £ million |
|---|---|
| 1979-80 | 8,945 |
| 1980-81 | 10,899 |
| 1981-82 | 11,841 |
| 1982-83 | 12,741 |
| 1983-84 | 13,421 |
| 1984-85 | 13,940 |

| 1989-90 | [2]19,571 |

[1] Estimated outturn.
[2] Plans.

School Closures

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many proposals for (a) closure and (b) reorganisation of schools he has received during the current academic year; how many school places these represent; how many such closures and reorganisations he has approved and how many school places these decisions represent; what was the target for the year; and if he will give comparable figures for each academic year since 1979.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information is not available in the form requested. The available data is summarised in the following table.

| Calendar year | Number of proposals decided | Number of places to be taken out of use by proposals in column 2 | Number of proposals in column 2 approved | Number of surplus places to be taken out of use as a result of approved proposals |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| (1) | (2) | (3) | (4) | (5) |
| 1983 | 366 | 104,174 | 330 | 85,606 |
| 1984 | 292 | 85,862 | 270 | 77,590 |
| 1985 | 205 | 101,097 | 185 | 88,218 |
| 1986 | 172 | 81,663 | 147 | 62,828 |
| 1987 | 159 | 55,116 | 134 | 45,326 |
| 1988 | 145 | 64,256 | 116 | 27,170 |

The Government's national targets for the removal of surplus places cannot be directly compared with the figures in column 5 since the former also include places taken out of use as a result of the rationalisation of split sites, mothballed classrooms and the removal of temporary accommodation. In 1987-88 a total of 124,000 places were taken out of use against the national target of 139,000.

Teachers' Resignations

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many teachers had submitted resignations by 31 May 1989.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: This information is not available. The latest data are for the year ending March 1987, when 28,960 teachers left full-time service in the maintained nursery, primary and secondary sector in England. Of these, 1,760 transferred to full-time service elsewhere in the maintained sector in England and Wales and 2,900 to part-time service in the maintained sector. A further 8,500 retired and 450 died.

Foreign Languages

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a progress report on his drive to improve the teaching of foreign languages announced on 16 June 1986.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Government attach great importance to improving the nation's skills in modern foreign languages. That is reflected in our policy on modern foreign languages in the school curriculum was set out in the January 1988 policy statement "Modern Languages in the School Curriculum", and in the inclusion among the national curriculum foundation subjects of a modern foreign language to be studied by all pupils between the ages of 11 and 16.

From this autumn, pupils will have to study a modern foreign language for a reasonable time in the first three years of secondary schooling. This requirement will be extended to the last two years of compulsory schooling later. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I published on 19 May the Education (National Curriculum) (Modern Foreign Languages) Order 1989 under section 3(2)(b) of the Education Reform Act 1988, specifying those languages eligible to be taught as the national curriculum foundation subject.

Within this framework, and to implement the 1988 policy statement, I am encouraging schools to offer a greater diversity of languages and I am providing education support grants for pilot projects in some local education authorities in England to promote the preparation and implementation of plans for language diversification. Schools will be free to offer a second foreign language during the 11 to 16 phase or in the sixth form in addition to meeting the national curriculum requirements. I hope that greater numbers studying a language to the age of 16 will result in an increase in those continuing with language learning not only in the sixth form but in post-school education.

Changes in examinations at 16 and 18 will improve standards of oral and written communication.

I shall shortly be announcing the establishment of a national curriculum working group on modern foreign languages with a view to beginning to implement the first attainment targets and programmes of study in schools from autumn 1992.

Students

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the number of (a) full-time students, (b) part-time students expressed as full-time equivalents, in first degree courses, for each year since 1979 to date in (a) universities, (b) polytechnics and (c) other institutions of higher education.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The readily available information is shown in the following table:

First degree students in Great Britain

Thousands

| | Academic year beginning in | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 1979 | 1980 | 1981 | 1982 | 1983 | 1984 | 1985 | 1986 | 1987 |
| Full-time | | | | | | | | | |
| University | 241·2 | 247·8 | 250·2 | 246·9 | 240·8 | 237·8 | 238·3 | 241·1 | 245·6 |
| Polytechnics and colleges | 127·5 | 130·8 | 147·2 | 161·0 | 171·3 | 178·0 | 181·0 | 186·9 | 195·3 |
| Full-time equivalent of part-time[1] | | | | | | | | | |
| Open University | 21·4 | 21·0 | 22·1 | 23·2 | 23·4 | 23·6 | 23·2 | 23·8 | 25·0 |
| Other universities | 0·9 | 1·0 | 1·1 | 1·2 | 1·3 | 1·5 | 1·6 | 1·6 | 1·8 |
| Polytechnics and colleges | 5·8 | 5·9 | 6·3 | 6·6 | 7·0 | 7·3 | 7·8 | 8·3 | 8·8 |

[1] For consistency between sectors all part-time students have been counted as 0·35 FTE.

Teacher Shortages (Tower Hamlets)

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has for securing the education of children in Tower Hamlets who are presently unable to attend school as a consequence of teacher shortages.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The staffing of schools in Tower Hamlets is a matter for the Inner London education authority and, from 1 April 1990, the borough of Tower Hamlets. I welcome the fact that both authorities are now taking specific steps to ensure that schools are adequately staffed.

I had a constructive meeting on 13 June with the Inner London education authority, accompanied by the right hon. Member for Bethnal Green and Stepney (Mr. Shore); further discussions are being held at official level to explore ways of tackling the situation.

Secondary Schools Staffing Survey

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) when he will publish the full results of the secondary schools staffing survey;

(2) when, and in what form, the secondary schools staffing survey was published; and whether (a) any press notice was issued to accompany it and (b) any briefing for the press by Ministers or officials was held.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: Key results from the 1988 secondary school staffing survey were placed in the Library of the House on 2 May, and issued under a press notice on 3 May. The results included summary analyses of teachers by age and qualification by subject, their deployment on subject teaching, the percentages of secondary pupils studying different subjects in each year group of compulsory schooling and information on teacher absences. I drew attention to the main findings in a speech in the House on 2 May. No press conference was held about the results.

A full set of analyses from the survey will be published shortly.

Higher Education

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of working-class children go on to higher education in Great Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Results from the youth cohort study show that in the academic year 1987-88 5 per cent. of 18-year-olds in socioeconomic groups 3 (manual), 4 and 5 in England and Wales entered higher education. Given that these young people amount to more than 60 per cent. of the age group, this is clearly not enough. The Government's policies for schools and higher education will help to increase their participation.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Lone Parents

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much the average living standards of lone parents have increased since 1979.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: From 1979 to 1985, the average living standards of lone parents improved by 10 per cent. This improvement is larger than for couples without children or single people. Both these groups had improvements in their living standards of 6 per cent.

Claim Forms

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will take steps to simplify the forms used to claim benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Steps are taken in the production of forms to ensure that they are as simple and as easy to use as they can be. The Department is committed to research and testing as part of a continuing programme in the designing and writing of new and existing forms.

Housing Benefit

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the estimates of the numbers of people who would be eligible to claim housing benefit rent allowances if rents were to be increased nationally by (a) 1 per cent., (b) 3 per cent., (c) 5 per cent. and (d) 8 per cent.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The estimated increases in the rent allowance caseload for 1989-90 if rents were to increase nationally are as follows:

| Rent increase (per cent.) | Increase in caseload |
|---|---|
| (a) 1 | 1,000 |
| (b) 3 | 2,000 |
| (c) 5 | 5,000 |
| (d) 8 | 10,000 |

Notes:

1. The estimates allow for differential take-up, taking account of increased incentives at higher levels of entitlement, and for a time lag in take-up.
2. Rent figures used derive from the Department's projections based on the family expenditure survey data.

Pensioners (Savings)

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of pensioners have savings.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In 1986, 70 per cent. of all pensioners and 85 per cent. of recently retired pensioners had income from savings and investment.

Disability

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the number of people in Wales receiving (i) attendance allowance, (ii) industrial disablement benefit, (iii) mobility allowance, (iv) invalid care allowance, (v) invalidity benefit and (vi) severe disablement benefit for the latest available date.

Mr. Scott: I regret that some of the information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information which is available is as follows:

Recipients of invalidity benefit in Wales at 2 April 1988—126,900 (statistical estimate).

Recipients of severe disablement allowance in Wales at 31 May 1981—17,948.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, pursuant to his reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe of 19 June, Official Report, column 21, about the representations that the Minister for the Disabled has had from the British Council of Organisations of Disabled People, he will publish his reply to the chairman in the Official Report.

Mr. Scott: I have placed a copy of my reply in the Library.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the fifth report by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys on disability in Great Britain will be published.

Mr. Scott: The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS) has today published the fifth report on the findings of the surveys of disability in Great Britain carried out between 1985 and 1988. The report covers the financial circumstances of families with disabled children living in private households.

The report contains detailed information about the effect of a child's disability on a family's income and expenditure. It does not however take account of the financial value of services received by families with a disabled child. The final report in the series, which will be published next month, will provide information about the use of services, transport and education by disabled children.

The report's findings relate to 1985 when the data was collected. Since then the social security reforms and this year's uprating have targeted increased help on families. More than 10,000 families with disabled children now receive specific help through the disabled child's premium as well as the family premium which is paid to all families receiving income support and housing benefit. This year's uprating targeted further help on families by adding an extra 50p to child allowances in income support, family credit and housing benefit.

We welcome comments on this report, as we have on the four reports already published.

Benefit Rules

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when changes in the housing benefit rules, enabling under-18s to be paid the same rate as over-18s, are to be introduced; what publicity is being issued to explain the changes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: From 10 July 1989, single people under 18 will be entitled to the same housing benefit personal allowances as those aged 18 to 24, as set out in the Housing Benefit (General Amendment No. 3) Regulations 1989 (SI 1989 No. 1017)). An information note for claimant advisers is in preparation.

Community Charge

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by each charging authority in the west midlands the income level at which (a) a single person aged under 25 years, (b) a single person aged over 25 years, (c) a single pensioner, (d) a pensioner couple, and (e) a couple with two children all with no savings would lose entitlement to a community charge rebate, assuming the most recent safety-netted community charge figures.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 19 May 1989 at columns 327-8.

Transitional Payments

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claims had been made for housing benefit transitional payments by 8 June; and how many claims had been successful;

(2) if he will extend the deadline for housing benefit transitional payments beyond 30 June;

(3) if he will state the total number of successful claims as a proportion of the number of households estimated to be entitled to housing benefit transitional payments;

(4) what further steps he is taking to publicise the availability of housing benefit transitional payments.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer on 16 June 1989]: Housing benefit transitional payments are intended to provide help to vulnerable groups of people who experienced reductions in their housing benefit as a result of changes introduced by the Government in April 1988. Two national press publicity campaigns were undertaken, more than 8 million leaflets RR4 "Housing Benefit New Rules" were made available and posters were displayed in post offices. Further publicity is not considered necessary.

The closing date for the receipt of applications was originally 31 March 1989 but this was extended by a full three months to 30 June to ensure optimum take-up. As the scheme was intended to assist people only during the transition to the new scheme in April 1988 it would be inappropriate to extend the deadline any further.

It was originally estimated that up to 300,000 people might be eligible for payment. Up to 8 June 477,687 applications had been received and 198,916 awards made but some 26,000 applications have yet to be decided pending return of inquiry forms for housing benefit details from local authorities. Final figures will not, therefore, be available until all applications have been received and processed. Given the uncertainty which attaches to the original estimate it is not possible to calculate meaningful take-up estimates.

HEALTH

Contraception

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will indicate what steps are being taken to prevent prescription, in Britain, of the Copper 7 IUD and other contraceptive devices by drug companies wishing to test such products before making them available on the United States market; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: There is no question of pharmaceutical companies or manufacturers, whether based in the United Kingdom or overseas, themselves prescribing licensed products for patients. Medical treatments, including the use of devices such as IUDs, can be prescribed only by qualified medical practitioners on the basis of their clinical judgment of the patient's individual needs.

All clinical trials of IUDs in the United Kingdom are now subject to the provisions of the Medicines Act 1968 in which a clinical trial certificate, or exemption from holding a clinical trial certificate, must be obtained by the manufacturer, unless a registered medical practitioner has initiated the trial, in which circumstances he takes full responsibility for its conduct.

Family Practitioner Committees

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a table showing for 1983, 1985, 1987 and 1989, the number of family practitioner comittee chairmen who were contractors, distinguishing between general practitioners, dentists, pharmacists and opticians.

Mr. Mellor: The information for 1985, 1987 and 1989 is contained in the table. Before 1 April 1985 family practitioner committee chairmen were not appointed by the Secretary of State and the information requested is not available centrally.

| | 1 April 1985 | 1 April 1987 | 1 April 1989 |
|---|---|---|---|
| General Medical Practitioners | 18 | 12 | 7 |
| General Dental Practitioners | 5 | 2 | 1 |
| Ophthalmic Opticians | 3 | 1 | — |
| Pharmacists | 1 | 1 | — |

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what powers he is allowing regional health authorities to implement the proposal contained in "Working for Patients" to replace family practitioner committee administrators with general managers or chief executives.

Mr. Mellor: We have not asked regional health authorities to implement our intention that general managers should be appointed in all family practitioner committees, although we have asked them to provide a complete service to FPCs, through the personnel directorates, for the process of recruitment and appointment. The responsibility of shortlisting and selection falls to a panel led by the FPC chairman, subject to approval by the National Health Service management executive.

Self-Governing Hospitals

Mr. Michael Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when Doncaster royal infirmary made a decision as to whether to seek self-governing status; whether medical or other staff were consulted on this decision; how many employees at the infirmary supported seeking self-governing status; how many employees in the infirmary are also employed on private health treatment; and under whose signature the letter expressing an interest in self-governing status was sent.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when Montagu hospital made a decision as to whether to seek self-governing status; whether medical or other staff were consulted on this decision; how many employees at the hospital supported seeking self-governing status; how many employees in the hospital are also employed on private health treatment; and under whose signature the letter expressing an interest in self-governing status was sent.

Mr. Mellor: We have recieved an expression of interest in self-governing status for the Doncaster royal infirmary, Montagu Hospital, Mexborough and from Trent regional health authority. We were not privy to the internal discussions on the matter. Those with an interest will have an opportunity to express their views at a later stage if those expressing interest decide to proceed with an application.

NHS Reform

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who will pay the contract fee when a general practitioner budget holder refers a woman to a hospital for maternity services under his White Paper proposals.

Mr. Mellor: Inpatient maternity services fall outside the scope of the general practitioner practice budget scheme and therefore district health authorities will be responsible for securing such services through contracts.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) who will pay the contract fee when an employee of the local education authority refers a child for psychiatric services under the proposals of his White Paper;

(2) who will pay the contract fee when a social worker refers a child patient for care at a psychiatric hospital under the proposals of his White Paper.

Mr. Mellor: Under the proposals in the White Paper "Working for Patients" contracts for hospital and community health services will be between NHS bodies. We do not propose that agencies outside the NHS such as social services departments or education authorities should enter into contracts or be charged for services.

The responsibility for arranging the provision of psychiatric services, including those to which social workers or education authority employees refer children, remains that of district health authorities, which will in future secure this provision by placing appropriate contracts.

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions have taken place between his Department and the Greenwich health authority about the possibility of hospitals in the area being run as self-governing trusts.

Mr. Mellor: None, so far.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the units which expressed interest in self-governing status include or provide maternity services.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 28 June 1989]: We understand that about 90 of the units which have expressed an interest in self-governing status include or provide maternity services.

Cot Deaths

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, further to his answer of 21 April, Official Report, columns 343-44, what progress has been made in his Department's discussion with the Medical Research Council on the funding of further work on the usefulness and effectiveness of temperature monitors and alarms to reduce the number of cot deaths.

Mr. Freeman: The position on research into sudden infant death was discussed at a meeting between the Department and the Medical Research Council (MRC) on 17 April. Subsequently the Department asked the MRC to commission a critical review of the literature, including that on the relationship between sudden infant deaths and infant temperature. The MRC has specifically been asked for advice on the type of device which would reliably monitor infant temperature changes and the value of an intervention study designed to test the effectiveness of such a device in monitoring changes and preventing "cot deaths".

Pharmaceutical Prices

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average discount under the current pharmaceutical price regulation scheme; and how much it is estimated to have saved the National Health Service during 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Mellor: Discounts do not feature in the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme. The amount deducted from payments to pharmacies in respect of discounts is on average some 8·3 per cent. of the basic price of medicines. As regards the resulting savings I would refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North (Mr. Wilson), on 20 June at column 97.

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost to the National Health Service of brand name drugs dispensed by retail pharmacy contractors during the calendar year 1987.

Mr. Mellor: Based on a one in 200 sample of prescriptions, the net ingredient cost of named drugs dispensed by retail pharmacists during the calendar year 1987 is estimated to have been £1·3 billion, without taking account of other factors such as pharmacists' fees and container allowances.

"Working for Patients"

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received to date on the White Paper "Working for Patients" from Yorkshire; and how many have criticised the Government's proposals.

Mr. Mellor: We have received many comments on the White Paper proposals, covering a wide range of issues from differing viewpoints. We are taking these carefully into account as the implementation process goes forward. It would not be possible, except at disproportionate cost, to identify separately those received from Yorkshire.

Competitive Tendering

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been achieved in Yorkshire as a result of competitive tendering in the National Health Service.

Mr. Freeman: In respect of domestic services, catering and laundry the costs of services within Yorkshire regional health authority were reduced by an average of 19 per cent. as a result of the competitive tendering initiative, giving net savings of £8·75 million which could be ploughed back into improved patient care. Additional benefits have been the setting of clearer performance standards, introduction of more flexible and innovative services, and more systematic monitoring of service provision.

Food Poisoning

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of food poisoning of people living in Southwark have been notified in each of the last 10 years; and if he will specify what sort of poisoning.

Mr. Freeman: The table shows the number of notifications of food poisoning received for the London borough of Southwark from 1979 to 1988. Information about the suspected food involved in each case is not readily available.

| Year | Number of Cases |
|---|---|
| 1979 | 46 |
| 1980 | 44 |
| 1981 | 45 |
| 1982 | 75 |
| 1983 | 58 |
| 1984 | 83 |
| 1985 | 91 |
| 1986 | 83 |
| 1987 | 78 |
| 1988 | 156 |

Waiting Times

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average waiting time for an orthopaedic operation (a) at the Leicester general hospital, (b) in Trent region and (c) nationally.

Mr. Moller [holding answer 28 June 1989]: We do not have information on average waiting times for those awaiting admission to hospital centrally. The numbers on the waiting list are analysed by time waited and a percentage distribution based on this information is provided in the published statistics. The figures for England, the Trent region and Leicestershire district are given in the booklet "Hospital In-Patient Waiting Lists —England at 30 September 1988", a copy of which is in the Library. We do not collect information by individual hospital.

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library copies of all letters and circulars sent to regional health authorities about the streamlining of regional health authorities' operations and services and of the preliminary replies from regional health authorities due in by 5 May.

Mr. Moller [holding answer 26 June 1989]: The chief executive of the National Health Service wrote to regional general managers on 22 March about the delegation of regional health authority functions in line with the Government's proposals set out in chapter 2 of "Working for Patients". Copies of his letter (EL(89)MB/59) have been placed in the Library. The preliminary replies from regional health authorities are statements of general intention which are subject to further discussion within authorities, with their staff-side interest, and within the Department. It would not be appropriate to publish these, or correspondence relating to them at this stage. However, authorities' final proposals, due on 30 September 1989, will be public documents.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Organic Farming

16. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what financial incentives are made available for farmers wishing to transfer to organic farming methods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: No financial incentives are available specifically to assist with conversion to organic farming. However, farmers wishing to convert may be able to take advantage of the provisions for fallowing under the set-aside scheme. In addition, I am considering the possibility of organic options under the European Communities extensification scheme.

Fur Farming

17. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has discussed fur farming in the European Community Council of Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier to the hon. Members for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells), for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon) and for Bristol, South (Ms. Primarolo).

Battery Hens

18. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about battery caged poultry.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Our legislation on battery hens is based on the EC directive which is due for review in 1993. My Department has asked the Farm Animal Welfare Council to consider what practical welfare improvements we could press for at that time.

Irradiated Food

19. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has carried out into the nutritional effects of irradiation on food.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply of my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary to my hon. Friend the Member for Holland with Boston (Sir R. Body) on 22 June at column 85.

29. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from consumer groups in favour of the principle of food irradiation.

Mr. MacGregor: A number of consumer groups have recognised that, with proper controls, this technology has benefits for consumers.

43. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has met the British Medical Association to discuss food irradiation.

Mr. MacGregor: My officials, together with officials from the Department of Health, have recently met representatives of the British Medical Association to discuss food irradiation.

52. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations he is having with consumer organisations about the introduction of food irradiation.

63. Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he has taken to ensure that consumer interests are considered and protected in any decision on food irradiation.

Mr. MacGregor: There is always full consultation with consumer organisations over food safety policies. Both Ministers and officials have been involved in recent discussions with organisations over food irradiation, and there will be plenty of opportunity for further consultations given that both the primary legislation and the legislation thereafter will have to be discussed and approved by Parliament.

58. Mr. Conway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a statement on the proposals of the working group established to devise a control framework for food irradiation in the United Kingdom.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made in the debate on food safety, research and health on 21 June 1989 at columns 347-59. A copy of the report of the working group of officials is in the Library of the House.

Food Legislation

20. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations he is having with interested organisations about changing the legislation on food.

Mr. MacGregor: Officials in my Department have undertaken extensive consultations with interested consumer, enforcement and trade organisations on possible changes to our food legislation. We shall introduce new legislation as soon as the parliamentary timetable permits.

27. Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about his plans to introduce legislation on food.

Mr. MacGregor: Work on the detailed preparation of new food legislation, which we announced in October 1987, is well advanced. The Government will introduce proposals for new legislation as soon as the parliamentary timetable permits.

60. Mr. Waller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the progress of his consultations on changes to food law.

Mr. MacGregor: Officials of my Department and that of my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health, have undertaken consultations with a very large number of interested consumer, enforcement and trade organisations. Work on the preparation of new primary food legislation is well advanced and we shall introduce new legislation as soon as the parliamentary timetable permits.

Farm Woodland Scheme

21. Mr. Lord: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers have expressed an interest in participating in the farm woodland scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: In the first eight months of the farm woodland scheme, nearly 900 farmers have applied to participate in the scheme. I regard this as a very encouraging start to this new scheme.

64. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will indicate the uptake of the farm woodland scheme.

Mr. MacGregor: In the first eight months of the farm woodland scheme nearly 900 farmers have applied to plant about 6,200 hectares of trees during the next three years throughout the United Kingdom.

Organic Farming

22. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any proposals for bringing about an increase in organic farming methods.

30. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new initiatives he will take to increase the percentage of organically grown food.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government are encouraging in various ways the development of organic farming in response to consumer demand, for example through its strong support for the United Kingdom register of organic food standards.

Country Landowners Association

23. Mr. Favell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the president of the Country Landowners Association; and what matters were discussed.

51. Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the Country Landowners Association to discuss land value.

Mr. MacGregor: I last met the president of the Country Landowners Association on 9 June when a wide range of issues was discussed.

Whaling

24. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is in a position to outline his Ministry's reaction to the recommendations made at the 41st annual meeting of the International Whaling Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The major decisions of the International Whaling Commission concerned the adoption of resolutions co-sponsored by the United Kingdom calling upon Japan, Iceland and Norway to reconsider their plans to take whales for scientific research purposes.

and rejection of Japan's request for a catch quota of 320 minke whales for its small coastal whaling boats. I strongly welcome these decisions as upholding the spirit of the present moratorium on commercial whaling. These and the preparatory work for the comprehensive assessment needed for the review of the moratorium next year are essential to protect and enhance the status of the world's depleted whale stocks.

Aujesky's Disease

25. Mr. Alexander: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will endeavour to ensure that the European Economic Community gives Aujesky's disease category 1 protection in order to protect the British pig industry against future outbreaks of the disease.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 2 May to my hon. Friend the Member for Harborough (Sir J. Farr) at column 81.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

26. Mr. Janman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of eligible land has been entered into the environmentally sensitive areas scheme.

Mr. MacGregor: The proportion of eligible land which has been entered into the ESA scheme in England is 93 per cent.

46. Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give details of the total land area covered by environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. MacGregor: The total land area covered by ESAs in England is 333,470 hectares split as follows:

| | Total area of ESA (Ha) |
|---|---|
| Broads | 29,870 |
| Pennine Dales | 15,960 |
| Somerset Levels | 26,970 |
| South Downs | 53,340 |
| West Penwith | 7,210 |
| Breckland | 94,030 |
| North Peak | 50,250 |
| Shropshire Borders | 21,000 |
| Suffolk River Valleys | 32,150 |
| Test Valley | 2,690 |

Animal Health

28. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with the European Community Commission over the proposals for harmonised animal health rules in respect of both intra-Community trade and imports from third countries.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I met Commissioner MacSharry on 20 June. I said that, in the context of the single market, the Government supported the Commission's objective of achieving a uniformly high animal health status throughout the Community and that we also agreed on the need for common high standards for imports from third countries. I said that our view remained that until serious diseases such as foot and mouth disease were eradicated, effective controls on movements of animals and animal products from affected parts of the Community to parts which are free would be required to prevent disease spread, including an appropriate level of checking by member states of destination and quarantine where necessary.

Beef Cows

31. Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the latest forecast of beef cow numbers in the United Kingdom for June 1990.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The future herd size depends upon a number of factors, not all of which can be foreseen, and it is not our practice to publish forecasts.

Agricultural Research Centres

32. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many agricultural research centres are funded by his Ministry.

Mr. MacGregor: Agricultural research is commissioned within my Department at 11 experimental husbandry farms, eight experimental horticultural stations, the farm building development centre, the field drainage experimental unit and the feed evaluation unit plus the ADAS central science laboratories and the central veterinary laboratories. My Department also commissions agricultural research externally with the eight institutes of the Agricultural and Food Research Council plus short-term contracts with a large number of universities, colleages, polytechnics and other establishments.

Fishing

33. Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to improve the fishing opportunities currently available to south-west England fishermen; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I am very much aware of the difficulties faced by fishermen in the south-west of England. At the Fisheries Council on 21 June we secured an important amendment to restrictions on beam length that will greatly assist our inshore beam fleet, and we secured a commitment from the Commission to review urgently the 1989 total allowable catch for Channel cod and other precautionary TACs. I have already taken steps to deal with the problem of quota hopping.

Straw Burning

34. Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy on the control of the burning of straw and stubble.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department's policy is to reduce the level of straw and stubble burned in the field by encouraging farmers to adopt alternative disposal methods where practicable, while at the same time reminding those farmers who continue to employ burning to observe the NFU code and local byelaws. Our annual straw survey indicates that, between 1983 and 1988, the proportion of straw disposed of by burning fell from 37·7 per cent. to 23·8 per cent., and there has also been a substantial reduction in complaints and prosecutions.

Farming (Employment)

35. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the trend in regular full-time employment in the farming industry since 1978.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Between June 1978 and June 1988 the number of all those engaged in agriculture on a regular full-time basis in the United Kingdom declined by just under 21 per cent. or nearly 85,000. Within this total the number of full-time workers declined by nearly 31 per cent. (almost 61,000) of whom about 53,300 were hired workers and 7,400 family workers, while the number of full-time farmers, partners and directors fell by some 24,000 or just over 11 per cent.

NFU

36. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss means of improving farmers' returns.

50. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the president of the National Farmers Union; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. MacGregor: I last met the president of the National Farmers Union on 21 June when we discussed various agricultural matters.

Potato Marketing Board

37. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the future of the Potato Marketing Board;

40. Mr. Hague: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to announce a decision about the future of the Potato Marketing Board.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is yet in a position to make a statement on the outcome of the review of the Potato Marketing Board.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply given to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 14 June at column 411.

56. Mr. Hind: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Potato Marketing Board; what matters were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I last met the chairman of the Potato Marketing Board on 8 March 1989, to discuss the board's response to the Government's consultation paper on future potato market policy.

Apple Sprays

38. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to review the safety of apple sprays.

Mr. MacGregor: A programme for the review of approved active ingredients was announced on 16 March. Pesticides used on apples will be covered in the review of each relevant active ingredient.

Small Farmers Association

39. Mr. Ames: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Small Farmers Association, and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My right hon. Friend has not met the chairman recently. But he is kept regularly in touch with the Small Farmers Association's views.

EC Sheep Regime

41. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has about discussions on the European Economic Community's sheep regime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: At the Agriculture Council on 19 and 20 June, discussions on the reform of the sheepmeat regime revealed that major differences of view continue to persist among member states. The Council will return to this subject at a subsequent meeting.

62. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the renegotiation of the sheepmeat regime to be concluded.

Mr. MacGregor: Discussions on this subject at the last Agriculture Council revealed that major differences of views continue to persist among member states. Negotiations may, therefore, be protracted.

Dairy Farming

42. Mr. Knox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he is next due to meet the chairman of the Milk Marketing Board to discuss the dairy sector.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My right hon. Friend and I have regular contacts with the chairman of the Milk Marketing Board to discuss various issues affecting the dairy industry.

Research

44. Mr. Michael: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make it his policy to increase the resources devoted by his Department to scientific research into those aspects of (a) environmental concerns and (b) food production which come within the scope of his Department's responsibilities.

Mr. MacGregor: My Department has been increasing the resources devoted to environmental and food safety research, based on a number of considerations including the advice of the priorities board for research and development in agriculture and food.

Cold Storage (Audits)

45. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to ensure that the Reading, Berkshire Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce cold storage audited figures are properly audited by independent accounting officers.

Mr. Donald Thompson: All the intervention board's expenditure is subject to independent audit by the National Audit Office.

Torry Research Station

47. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last visited the Torry research station; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I last visited Torry research station on 31 August 1988 and discussed the work of the station.

Forestry Commission

48. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Forestry Commission; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. MacGregor: I last met the chairman of the Forestry Commission on 14 June when a wide range of forestry matters was discussed.

Fisheries Council

49. Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the latest Fisheries Council meeting.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Gloucestershire, West (Mr. Marland) on 22 June at columns 248–49.

Royal Society for the Protection of Birds

53. Mr. Hanley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. MacGregor: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary and I had a meeting with the chairman and other representatives of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds on 17 November last year. We discussed several topics of mutual interest.

Nature Conservancy Council

54. Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Nature Conservancy Council; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary met the chairman of the Nature Conservancy Council on 7 November last year when they discussed a wide range of subjects.

National Institute for Agricultural Botany

55. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to ensure that voluntary premature retirement schemes are offered to staff at the National Institute for Agricultural Botany.

Mr. MacGregor: We are considering this question.

Forestry

57. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the Association of Professional Foresters to discuss forestry in England and Wales.

Mr. MacGregor: I have not had the opportunity to meet representatives of the Association of Professional Foresters.

Council for the Protection of Rural England

59. Mr. Latham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the Council for the Protection of Rural England; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary met representatives, including the chairman, of the Council for the Protection of Rural England on 22 March, when they discussed a number of issues of mutual concern.

Poultry

61. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the poultry section of the agricultural industry.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The market for poultry meat weakened in the early part of this year, but chick placings for table poultry have fallen in recent months; and due to this and to other factors, the market has now firmed again, with wholesale prices now at or above the levels of a year ago.

Tenant Farmers

65. Mr Ken Hargreaves: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Tenant Farmers Association; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I last met the chairman of the Tenant Farmers Association on 31 May when we discussed various matters relating to the tenanted sector.

Staging Posts

66. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's view of the increasing use of staging posts to enable livestocks to be transported long distances prior to slaughter.

Mr. Donald Thompson: EC legislation requires that animals in international transport should be offered food and water at suitable intervals and should not be left for more than 24 hours without being fed and watered.

Under our legislation exporters are required to provide details of arrangements made for feeding and watering animals on long international journeys. The staging points used for this purpose are authorised by the United Kingdom and the country in question.

Set-aside Scheme

67. Mr. Doran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the use of set-aside land for forestry.

Mr. Donald Thompson: In the first year of the scheme, about 800 hectares of land have been set aside to woodland, either directly or through the farm woodland scheme. I recently invited applications for the second year of set-aside, and since farmers have now had more time to plan for tree planting, I expect enhanced interest in this option. I welcome increased planting of trees on arable land as a contribution to the reduction of surpluses, to the enhancement of the landscape and to helping to meet our timber requirements in the longer term.

Women's Farmers Union

68. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the president of the Women's Farmers Union; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 25 May to my hon. Friend the Member for Maidstone (Miss Widdecombe) at column 740.

Nitrates

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received recently concerning nitrates in water supplies; what action he has taken; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Beverley (Mr. Cran).

Waste Dumping (British Coal)

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy on the dumping by British Coal of solid sludge and liquid waste into the sea and on the development of alternatives to sea dumping; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Licences for the disposal at sea of colliery waste are granted only where practical land-based means of disposal are not available. In particular, the sea disposal of spoil by tipping on Durham beaches creates an environmental problem and I am anxious to see it stopped as soon as possible. As a condition of the sea disposal licence issued by the Ministry, British Coal has reassessed the availability and cost of disposal of this waste on land in the area, by analysing a range of options.

I am now asking British Coal to study in more detail the land-based options already analysed which appear to merit further work, and to report to me. I intend this to provide the Ministry with a basis for a final decision on whether a practicable and environmentally preferable alternative to sea disposal exists.

Liquid colliery waste which is discharged to sea across Durham beaches is subject to control by the Northumbrian water authority. I consider, with the support of the authority, that it would be in the interests of protection of the land and marine environments for British Coal's more detailed studies to incorporate an assessment of the scope for disposal of these tailings on land in an environmentally satisfactory way. I am pleased that British Coal is prepared to take on this further assessment.

Horticultural Trades Association

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the Horticultural Trades Association; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Secretary in another place met representatives of the horticultural industry including the Horticultural Trades Association (HTA) on 31 May to discuss research and development.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Greenhouse Effect

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what specific proposals his Department has put forward for consideration and enactment, in order to hold down and reduce greenhouse gas emissions in developing countries, since the seminar on the greenhouse effect held by the Prime Minister on 26 April.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Government proposed a global climate convention, applicable to all countries, at the United Nations in New York on 8 May. At the Helsinki review meeting of the Montreal protocol on 3 May my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment outlined the support we could offer developing countries which are trying to avoid the use of CFCs. My Department has stepped up efforts to increase aid for forestry and is examining the scope for more support for energy efficiency.

Non-governmental Organisations

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the non-governmental organisations associated with overseas development which received financial support from his Department in 1988-89, and the sum received by each organisation in that year.

Mr. Chris Patten: Figures for 1988-89 are not yet available. I shall let my right hon. Friend know when they are.

EMPLOYMENT

Remploy

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the amount of the subvention paid to Remploy in the years 1975, 1979, 1984 and 1989.

Mr. Lee: The subvention paid to Remploy Ltd. for current expenditure in the following financial years was:

| | £ |
|---|---|
| 1974-75 | 10,114,000 |
| 1978-79 | 22,530,000 |
| 1983-84 | 44,572,000 |
| 1988-89 | 53,714,000 |

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has about plans by the Remploy company to close a number of its factories.

Mr. Lee: Other than Rutherglen, I am not aware of plans to close specific Remploy factories.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of the cost of employing disabled people employed by Remploy was provided by the Government and what proportion by the company in the years 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989 to date.

Mr. Lee: The proportion of the cost of employing people with disabilities at Remploy provided by the Government in each of the following financial years was:

| | Percentage |
|---|---|
| 1984-85 | 100 |
| 1985-86 | 100 |
| 1986-87 | 94 |
| 1987-88 | 87 |
| 1988-89 | 90 |

The remainder was provided by the company from its trading surplus.

Disabled People

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what responsibility the Government have to provide employment for disabled people in local areas.

Mr. Lee: The Secretary of State approves facilities which local authorities set up to provide employment for people with severe disabilities ordinarily resident in their areas. He also has powers to direct local authorities in the extent of this provision. My Department is using local labour market information to allocate its resources for providing employment for people with severe disabilities with the aim of producing an equitable distribution of resource, although this will take some time to achieve. We are planning in the future to pay closer attention to geographical provision as well as to the needs of individuals.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list in the Official Report the number of long-term unemployed people, male and female, indicating in each instance how many are under the age of 25 years in Yorkshire and in each of the parliamentary constituencies of Yorkshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The information is available from the Library. The following table shows for Yorkshire and for each parliamentary constituency of Yorkshire the total number of unemployed claimants in April 1989, who had been unemployed for over 12 months, analysed by sex and separately identifying those aged under 25 years. In the year to April 1989 long-term unemployment fell by an average of 28·1 per cent. in the parliamentary constituencies concerned.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many new jobs have been created over the past five years in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the rest of the European Economic Community and (c) the European Free Trade Area; and what assessment he has made of the reasons for the differences in these figures.

Mr. Lee: The latest available information is given in the following table. The EFTA unemployment rates are not directly comparable with those for the United Kingdom and the EEC because of differences in the definitions, methods of compilation and timing of the statistics.

The unemployment rate in the United Kingdom remains lower than that of the majority of our European partners.

| | Unemployment rate Per Cent. |
|---|---|
| United Kingdom (Apr) | 6·9 |
| EEC (Apr) | 9·3 |
| EFTA[1] | 2·8 |

[1] Excluding Iceland, Liechtenstein.

Note: Rates for United Kingdom and the EEC are seasonally adjusted comparable rates produced by the Statistical Office of the European Communities.

The rate for the EFTA is based on unadjusted unemployment for the latest available month for each country.

The Government have placed great stress on creating the right economic conditions in which enterprise can flourish and jobs can be created. Since 1980 the United Kingdom economy has been the fastest-growing major economy in Western Europe and we are now well into our eighth successive year of sustained growth. As a result of this, growth in employment over the past five years has been better than any other European country.

Council for Social Aid

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on what date consideration was first given to withdrawing the contract for the Council for Social Aid, Manchester, as an ET manager; and when the final decision to cancel the contract was made.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 26 June 1989]: The full extent of CSA's financial position became clear on 3 May with a report released by its accountants. Between that date and 18 May CSA Ltd. made unsuccessful efforts to raise additional funds. The decision to terminate the contract was made on 19 May.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

University Lecturers

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many university lecturers are at each level of the promotion scale, expressed in total numbers and percentages; and if he will give the same information for each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Jackson: Information is not immediately available in the form requested. Information which is available is listed in the table.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many university lecturers have been at the top point of the promotion scale for (a) five years or more and (b) 10 years or more.

Mr. Jackson: This information is not readily available.

Pupil-Teacher Ratio

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the most recent available figure for the pupil-teacher ratio nationally.

Mr. Butcher: In January 1988 the overall pupil-teacher ratio in maintained schools in England was 17·0.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms Offences

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many and which notifiable offences involving firearms have been committed by licensed possessors of shotguns;

(2) how many and which notifiable offences involving firearms have been committed in which licensed pistols have been used;

(3) how many and which notifiable offences involving firearms have been committed in which licensed rifles have been used.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The police do not report to the Home Office whether or not firearms used in crime are held legally. The available information is published annually in table 3.6 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", and most recently in the issue for 1987, Cm 498; corresponding information for 1988 will be published in the autumn.

Litter

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people were (a) charged and (b) convicted of litter offences in 1987 and 1988;

(2) how many people were (a) charged and (b) convicted of litter offences in the Basildon area in 1987 and 1988.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is in the table.

Information for 1988 is not yet available.

Persons proceeded against or convicted of litter offences: England and Wales 1987

| | England and Wales | [1] Billericay |
|---|---|---|
| Prosecutions for litter offences | 1,888 | 2 |
| Total found guilty | 1,694 | 2 |

[1] Data is not collected centrally for Basildon alone but for the whole of the Billericay petty sessional division.

Murder and Manslaughter

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) charged and (b) convicted of (i) murder and (ii) manslaughter in each year since 1982.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested in respect of England and Wales is published annually in volumes 1 and 2 of the "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", supplementary tables, copies of which can be found in the Library. Information for 1988 is not yet available.

Football Matches (Public Order)

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of persons (a) charged and (b) found guilty of public order offences at football matches in the following age groups (i) 10 to 14, (ii) 15 to 18, (iii) 19 to 24, (iv) 25 to 30 and (v) 30 years and over in 1987 and 1988.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is not available from the records held centrally.

Holloway Prison

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list existing facilities for the treatment of prisoners who are psychiatrically ill or known to be drug dependent at Her Majesty's prison, Holloway; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Most of the psychiatrically disturbed inmates of Holloway prison are remanded there for the purpose of assessment for the courts. Their care during this time is provided by the prison medical and nursing staff. Four of the five medical officers are registered under section 12 of the Mental Health Act 1983 or possess a diploma in psychiatric medicine. Over one third of the 65 nurses in post are psychiatrically qualified. The future arrangements for housing such inmates are being assessed.

If on reception at Holloway a person is identified as having a history of drug misuse she is offered the treatment that the medical officer, in her individual clinical judgement, considers necessary. In reaching her judgment the medical officer would have full regard to the possible merit of substitution or other therapies. Such an inmate would be located in one of the medical units until free of symptoms. Counselling and group therapy would be available in the medical unit and continue on normal location. Where indicated, individual psychotherapy with a visiting consultant psychotherapist would also be available.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of permanent medical staff currently employed at Her Majesty's prison Holloway; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The total number of permanent medical staff currently employed at Her Majesty's prison Holloway is as follows:

1 Principal Medical Officer
1 Senior Medical Officer
3 Medical Officers
46·5 Nurses
2 Hospital Officers

A further two hospital officers are attached to the prison hospital as supernumeraries and will join the permanent staff on successful completion of a four-week induction course. A drive to recruit additional nurses is well advanced, and Holloway is one of the priority establishments for the deployment of newly recruited hospital officers with suitable nursing qualifications.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the prison population at Her Majesty's prison, Holloway, for the latest date available; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what was the total number of women being held on C wing at Her Majesty's prison, Holloway, for the latest date available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: At unlocking on Thursday 29 June the population at Her Majesty's prison Holloway was 466, including 137 in C wing.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the total number of incidents of self-inflicted injury which have been recorded at Her Majesty's prison, Holloway, in (a) 1987, (b) 1988 and (c) current figures for 1989; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what was the total number of suicides which have occurred at Her Majesty's prison, Holloway, in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No suicides have occured at Her Majesty's prison Holloway during the last five years. The available information on numbers of incidents of non-fatal self-injury relates to financial years and is as follows:

| | Number |
|---|---|
| 1986-87 | 149 |
| 1987-88 | 209 |
| 1988-89 | 85 |

Welford Road Prison (Moves)

Mr. Van: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were moved from Welford Road prison to (a) Stafford prison, (b) Ashwell prison, (c) Winson Green prison and (d) Littlehey prison for the weeks ended (i) 12 May, (ii) 19 May, (iii) 26 May, (iv) 9 June, (v) 16 June and (vi) 23 June; and what were the reasons for the moves.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is as follows:

Numbers of prisoners moved from Her Majesty's prison Leicester to:

| | Her Majesty's prisons | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Stafford | Ashwell | Birmingham | Littlehey |
| Week ending: | | | | |
| 12 May | 10 | — | — | 4 |
| 19 May | — | 4 | — | — |
| 26 May | — | 2 | — | — |
| 9 June | 7 | 3 | — | — |
| 16 June | 8 | 5 | — | — |
| 23 June | 9 | — | 10 | — |

All these transfers comprised normal allocations to training prisons except for the 10 who were sent to Her Majesty's prison Birmingham to relieve overcrowding at Leicester.

Drugs

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many reported drug finds there were in each of the prisons in England and Wales during the last 12 months.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 23 June 1989]: The following numbers of finds made in prisons of drugs or of substances believed to be drugs have been notified for the year up to 31 May 1989:

Cannabis represented about 92 per cent. of the above finds.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Tourism

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the outcome of the review of tourism policy in Northern Ireland, commissioned last October.

Mr. Viggers: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave on Thursday 29 June to the hon. Member for North Down, (Mr. Kilfedder) Official Report, Vol. 155, col. 499.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

RENAVAL Programme

Ms. Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the applications which have been submitted by the Department of Trade and Industry to the European Commission for funding under the RENAVAL programme for assistance to shipbuilding areas.

Mr. Atkins: The Government have made applications to the Commission under article 3(2) of the RENAVAL regulation, EEC regulation No. 2506/88, for Plymouth, Gibraltar and Strathclyde.

Shipbuilding (Redundancies)

Ms. Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the total number of redundancies in the shipbuilding and shiprepair industries in Tyne and Wear during the period 1 January 1979 to 31 December 1988.

Mr. Atkins: Information about redundancies in the shipbuilding and shiprepair industries in Tyne and Wear is not available. However, information provided to the Department of Trade and Industry suggests that employment in these industries in Tyne and Wear fell by some 19,000 between 1 January 1979 and 31 December 1988. This figure is likely to be an overestimate of the number of redundancies.

Ms. Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the total number of redundancies in the shipbuilding and shiprepair industries in Merseyside during the period 1 January 1987 to 31 December 1988.

Mr. Atkins: Information about redundancies in the shipbuilding and shiprepair industries in Merseyside is not available. However, information provided to the Department of Trade and Industry suggests that employment in these industries in Merseyside has risen by about 600 between 1 January 1987 and 31 December 1988.

Coats Viyella

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether Coats Viyella has made any application for financial or other assistance in transferring production from C. V. Carpets, Greenhill Mills, Batley, to Northern Ireland; and what representations he has received concerning this transfer of production; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 26 June 1989]: No; none.

TRANSPORT

Rail Workers (Remuneration)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the average pay for each of the main grades of workers on the railways, London Underground and bus services over each of the last 10 years, the percentage increase each year and the percentage increase in the retail price index and in national average earnings for each of those years.

Mr. Portillo: I regret that the information requested is not available.

European Tourism Year

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Government have any plans to increase investment in transport and, in particular, rail to coincide with an anticipated influx of visitors in European Tourism Year 1990.

Mr. Portillo: It is for British Rail to make plans for rail investment. If it thinks that European Tourism Year will result in additional traffic that is profitable for it, I am sure that it will take that into account.

Severn Bridge

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has now received the report of the inspector who conducted the inquiry into the Government's proposals to increase toll charges on the Severn bridge.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. It is being considered.

Humber Bridge

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has now reached a decision on the inspector's report following last year's inquiry into toll charges on the Humber bridge; and if there have been any discussions with the bridge authorities concerning the oustanding debt.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The decision was issued on 28 May. Discussions with the bridge board about its debt will be arranged.

Industrial Action

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the implications for British Rail's investment plans of industrial action on the railways.

Mr. Portillo: Industrial action can only damage the revenue of the railway and the confidence of its customers. It is for the board to decide how to meet its external financing limit in view of the revenue losses.

Roads (Liverpool)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department has given for road building and improvement in Liverpool; and if he will list the Liverpool city council plans it was allocated for, for each of the last five years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [pursuant to his reply 27 June 1989, c. 376]: The following should be added to the table:

| Major schemes accepted for TSG 1985-90 | Years TSG allocated |
|---|---|
| Hunter Street improvement | 1985-86, 1986-87, 1987-88, 1988-89, 1989-90 |
| Urban Traffic Control | 1988-89, 1989-90 |
| Park Road Relief Road | 1988-89, 1989-90 |

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the total available funding for 1989-90 for supporting voluntary organisations in Wales in the social services field under section 64 of the Health Service and Public Health Act 1968; and what was the corresponding figure in each of the previous three years.

Mr. Grist: The information is as follows:

| | £ |
|---|---|
| 1986-87 | 1,126,202 |
| 1987-88 | 1,145,680 |
| 1988-89 | 1,133,998 |
| 1989-90 | 1,696,653 |

Funds for voluntary organisations in the social services field are also available under section 26 of the Development of Rural Wales Act 1976. The figures are as follows:

| | £ |
|---|---|
| 1986-87 | 594,616 |
| 1987-88 | 725,049 |
| 1988-89 | 811,527 |
| 1989-90 | 965,245 |

Cervical Smears

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average time taken by each Welsh health authority to process cervical smear tests and provide the results for the patient and her general practitioner; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Information for 1988-89 is currently being collected by the Department from Welsh health authorities. I shall write to my hon. Friend once the results have been collated.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy infected cattle, at non-European Economic Community-approved slaughterhouses in Wales, have been identified.

Mr. Peter Walker: Four cases have been reported of which two proved positive and one negative; on the other one the result of testing is still awaited.

HEALTH

Abortion

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many babies were born alive in 1987 and 1988 and to date in 1989 at 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30 and 31 weeks' gestation.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not available. Gestation period is recorded at the registration of still births but not live births.

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the dates of implementation of the nine recommendations contained in the Select Committee on the Abortion (Amendment) Bill 1974-75; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report those recommendations contained in the Select Committee on the Abortion (Amendment) Bill 1974-75 which were implemented (a) in part and (b) in full; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The information is as follows:

Select Committee recommendation with implementation and date

1. Counselling of women
   In full in July 1977 (HC(77)26)

Select Committee recommendation with implementation and date

2. Examination of the Women
   In part in March 1976 (SI 1976 No. 15)

3. Certification and Notification
   In part in March 1981 (SI 1980 No. 1724)

4. Disclosure of Information
   In full in March 1976 (SI 1976 No. 15)

5. Private Sector Arrangements
   In part in September 1975 through the system of "assurances" which proprietors of approved places are required to give to the Secretary of State

6. Foreign Women
   In part in December 1975

7. National Health Service—Termination after the 20th week
   Discussed with Regional Medical Officers in 1975 and 1983

8. Referral Agencies
   In full in March 1977

9. The Use of Foetuses and Foetal Material for Research (the Peel Report)
   The Peel Code of Practice issued in 1972 was voluntarily accepted by the professions. The Department ensures that arrangements for supply of foetal material for research from private sector places carrying out abortions comply with the Code of Practice.

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will seek to obtain for his departmental library a copy of the hearings and report from the United States Judiciary Committee on the Human Life Bill of the 97th Congress; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Department is obtaining a copy of this report.

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has as to the medical circumstances which created the need for abortions to be performed in emergency to save the life of the mother in those cases which have arisen in 1986, 1987 and 1988; and if he will indicate the number of times each of those conditions has been the relevant factor.

Mr. Freeman: There were two abortions performed in England and Wales in 1986 with mention of ground 5 of the 1967 Abortion Act, which allows an abortion to be performed in emergency in order to save the life of the pregnant woman, on the notification form. In 1987 there were three such abortions, and in 1988 there were six.

Further details relating to the medical circumstances which created the need for these abortions to be performed cannot be released for reasons of maintaining confidentiality.

Mr. Ames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the reasons for the two non-National Health Service abortions in 1987 over 25 weeks gestation.

Mr. Freeman: The informatin requested cannot be released for reasons of maintaining confidentiality.

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the grants awarded in 1988-89 to voluntary organisations under his Department's general scheme of section 64 grants.

Mr. Freeman: Our section 64 general scheme provides both core grants, to assist national voluntary organisations with their administrative costs, and project grants, which are experimental or innovative. In 1988-89, 237 organisations were awarded grants. These are listed in the table.

Grants to voluntary organisations under S64 of the health services and Public Health Act 1968—general scheme (subhead D2(1)A) 1988-89 outturn

THE ARTS

Museums (Fire Alarms)

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many and which national museums do not have adequate fire alarms (a) at their main gallery and (b) at any storage warehouse; what proposals he has to remedy this defect; how many do not currently meet fire regulations; when they were last inspected for safe electrical wiring; and what was the result of these inspections.

Mr. Luce: All national museums and galleries have fire alarm and precaution systems which, since the institutions untied from the Property Services Agency, are subject to inspection by the appropriate local authority fire officer. Fire alarm systems, which are often combined with security systems, are upgraded and updated as and when necessary, in consultation with the fire officer. A completely new fire and security system is being installed in the National gallery to coincide with the opening of the Sainsbury wing and the British museum is also planning to replace and upgrade its present system.

Institutions carry out regular inspections of their wiring, and replace it when necessary. Work is in progress, for example, on a major new high voltage ring main system serving all three of the South Kensington museums.

Directors very rightly treat these basic safety matters as of high priority.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Supply-side Measures

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what have been the Government's main supply-side measures over the last 10 years; and what have been their practical results.

Mr. Major: The Government have undertaken a very wide range of measures over the past decade which have contributed to freer and more flexible markets and have improved the competitiveness of the economy. These include the privatisation programme, deregulation, liberalisation of financial markets, tax reform, improved incentives, promotion of enterprise and reforms in housing, education, and industrial relations. The cumulative result has been a positive transformation in our economic performance and prospects, with buoyant investment, profitability, and output and employment growth.

Personal Savings

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he is doing to improve the savings ratio.

Mr. Lilley: The rise in interest rates over the past year will encourage higher saving and lower borrowing.

Pound Coins and Notes

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has of the number of pounds sterling coins and notes which are in circulation (a) in Scotland and (b) in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lilley: The total number of £1 coins in circulation in the United Kingdom is estimated at 842 million. There are no statistics available on the number of £1 coins in circulation in Scotland. At the end of February 1989 there were 102 million Bank of England £1 notes recorded as outstanding, but none of these is in active circulation anywhere in the United Kingdom. Certain Scottish and Northern Irish banks retain a privilege to issue their own bank notes; the numbers of each denomination of their notes in circulation is a matter for them.

Finance Bill

Dr. Godman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow can expect an answer to his letter, dated 12 May, regarding clause 167 of the Finance Bill and the Royal National Lifeboat Institution.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Shortly.

Investment

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will show for 1988 the total level of fixed investment by industrial and commercial companies in (a) plant and machinery, (b) dwellings, (c) company cars, (d) other vehicles, (e) other new buildings and works, (f) purchases less sales of land and existing buildings and (g) all fixed assets.

Mr. Major: Total fixed investment by industrial and commercial companies in 1988 is estimated at £37,461 million. The analysis by type of asset is not yet available. An analysis will be published in the 1989 edition of the "United Kingdom National Accounts" in September, but will not distinguish between company cars and other vehicles.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest projections for the growth of manufacturing investment in 1989.

Mr. Major: The latest Department of Trade and Industry investment intentions survey published in June projected manufacturing investment in constant prices to rise by 15 per cent. in 1989 on a year earlier. The latest CBI quarterly trends survey published in April confirms this buoyant outlook.

Italian Consumer Price Index

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to the reply by the Economic Secretary to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury on 26 June, he will indicate what local government taxation costs are included in the Italian consumer price index.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 29 June 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to his question of 26 June, at column 297, which stated that the Italians do not include rates or their equivalent in their consumer price index.

Ivory

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action Her Majesty's Customs and Excise proposes to take in respect of the ivory earrings deposited with them by the Prime Minister after her visit to Africa.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 29 June 1989]: Customs and Excise use articles made from parts and derivatives of endangered species for educational, publicity and display purposes. The goods deposited by the Prime Minister have been added to the pool of items from which they may draw.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Human Rights

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights in the last five years in West Germany;

(2) how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights in the last five years in Canada.

Mr. Eggar: None.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has made complaining about the denial of human rights and the use of torture in the last five years in Ethiopia.

Mr. Eggar: We have made many representations about human rights to the Ethiopian authorities over the last five years. The latest occasion was my right hon. Friend's meeting with the Ethiopian Foreign Minister on 20 June. However, the precise information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

People-to-People Relations

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy towards people to people links between citizens in the United Kingdom and those abroad and, in particular, links with people in the Soviet Union and the countries of the eastern bloc; and what measures are being taken to encourage people-to-people relations.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are strongly committed to increasing direct contacts between people in this country and those in the Soviet Union and eastern Europe. The success of this policy depends, however, on the approach adopted by the other countries involved. In some cases direct contacts are developing rapidly as east European Governments lift longstanding restrictions on their citizens. But in other cases little or no progress has been made because the Governments concerned still prevent their own people from travelling abroad and discourage Western visitors.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the forthcoming business in the European Community Council of Ministers.

Mr. Eggar: The usual forecast was deposited in the House earlier today. At present five meetings of the Council of Ministers are planned for July.

The Economic and Finance Council will meet on 10 July to consider the Commission's second quarterly review of the economic situation in the Community.

The Foreign Affairs Council meets on 17 and 18 July. It will discuss issues relating to the current renegotiation of the Lomé convention, and receive reports from the Commission on EC relations with the United States and the Gulf Co-operation Council. It is also likely to discuss the draft broadcasting directive. The Council may also discuss relations with Eastern Europe, in particular the negotiation of a trade and co-operation agreement with Poland.

The Internal Market Council in 18 July will discuss a number of measures relevant to the completion of the single market.

The Agriculture Council will meet on 24 and 25 July to discuss reform of the sheep regime, New Zealand butter and sheep, and adaptation of agricultural structures policy (Objective 5(A)). It may also discuss bovine somatotropine compound feedingstuffs and pesticide residues.

The Budget Council on 28 July will give a first reading to the 1990 Community Budget.

International Coffee Agreement

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current state of negotiations on a new international coffee agreement.

Mrs Chalker: The international coffee agreement (1983) expires on 30 September 1989. Intensive discussions have taken place since mid-1988 but have failed to result in a consensus on the content of a new agreement. On 3 July the International Coffee Council will consider two draft resolutions for extension with economic provisions. If neither resolution obtains the required majority, the Council may adopt a resolution providing for the 1983 agreement to be extended without economic provisions. With its Community partners the United Kingdom has supported the principle of extension of the 1983 agreement as part of a transition to a new agreement.

It has been the practice to lay the text of any agreed resolution for extension of an international commodity agreement before Parliament for 21 sitting days before the United Kingdom deposits an instrument of acceptance with the United Nations. Given the parliamentary recess, there will not be 21 sitting days between 3 July and 1 October. We cannot wait until Parliament sits again in the autumn, because under the terms of article 68 of the current ICA, contracting parties who have not notified the United Nations of their acceptance by 1 October 1989 will cease to be members of the ICA.

I have therefore decided to place in the Library of the House today copies of the two draft resolutions to be considered by the Council on 3 July. Once the final text of the Council resolution is known, I will ensure that it is laid before Parliament for as much of the usual 21-day period as possible.

ENVIRONMENT

Community Charge

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if community charges are payable by a single person who is a resident member of staff in a boarding school during term time and who also rents a home elsewhere which is only occupied out of term time.

Mr. Gummer: All adults, unless they are exempt, will pay a personal community charge to the charging authority in which they have their sole or main residence. Individuals with more than one home will pay a personal community charge to the authority where they mainly live and may be liable to a separate standard charge on any other domestic property they own or lease if it is no other person's main residence.

Environmental Assessment

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the booklet on guidance for developers and others on environmental assessment to be published.

Mr. Howard: We hope to send this booklet to the printers shortly.

Rose Theatre

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the title to the site of the Rose theatre held by Imry Merchant Ltd.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The hon. Member may approach the developers, Imry Merchant Developers plc for the details.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what sums his Department has paid to the developers Imry Merchant Ltd. in compensation for any delays experienced at the site of the Rose theatre.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: None so far.

Water Purity

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Dewsbury of 14 June, Official Report, column 417, if he will publish his response to the reasoned opinion of 14 April.

Mr. Howard: Both the European Commission and the Government regard the detailed, formal correspondence on infraction proceedings as confidential. To publish the United Kingdom response to the Commission's reasoned opinion would be a breach of that confidentiality.

Council House Sales

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the number of appeals to the district valuer against right-to-buy valuations made in each London borough during (a) 1988 and (b) the first quarter of 1989, indicating the numbers resulting in reductions.

Mr. Trippier: The information requested is as follows:

Planning Authority Membership

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the planning authorities on which members of those authorities (a) do not have a requirement to live or work in the area in which those authorities have planning jurisdiction and (b) do not have to live within the area of their planning jurisdiction as a result of their election.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 29 June 1989]: Except in areas covered by the Peak District and Lake District national parks, the Broads Authority and the English urban development corporations, the planning authority is the local authority. Section 79(1) of the Local Government Act 1972 requires that candidates for election to office as a member of a local authority should (a) be a local government elector for the area of the authority or (b) have occupied as owner or tenant land or premises in the area for the whole 12 months preceding the election or (c) have worked in the area during the preceding 12 months or (d) have lived in the area during the whole of the preceding 12 months.

DEFENCE

NATO Naval Exercises

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if there has been any change in Soviet naval responses to NATO naval exercises since President Gorbachev announced changes in Soviet military strategy towards defensive defence.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The reduced Soviet response to NATO naval exercises, which was evident before the announced change in military doctrine towards "defensive defence", has since continued.

Soviet Naval Forces

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if there have been any changes in the deployment of Soviet naval forces since President Gorbachev announced changes in Soviet military strategy towards defensive defence.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The lower level of Soviet naval activity worldwide, evident before the announced change in Soviet military strategy towards "defensive defence", has since continued.

British and French Ships (Docking)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if reciprocal insurance arrangements exist for British/French ships docking at British/French bases.

Mr. Neubert: No. Any claims arising from the activities of a vessel of either navy visiting the other country would be dealt with in accordance with well-established international procedures.

Soviet Submarines

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the number of incidents of detection of Soviet submarines in the vicinity of (a) the United States navy base at Holy Loch and (b) British naval bases in 1978; and whether the frequency of such incidents has increased since President Gorbachev announced changes in Soviet military strategy towards defensive defence.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I presume that the hon. Member intended to refer to 1987. The answer is (a) nil; (b) nil. Since the announced change in Soviet military strategy towards "defensive defence" there have been no such detections.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of research into radiation and nuclear submarine personnel.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no research specifically being undertaken into radiation and nuclear submarine personnel. The study to which I presume the hon. Member refers is part of the general study being undertaken by the Medical Research Council environmental epidemiological centre at Southampton univerity into mortality and morbidity among all submariners in the machine-manufactured submarine environment. The study, which began in 1988, is due to finish next year. It is too early to comment on any possible findings.

Rosehearty Range

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many bombing and firing runs have been made on Rosehearty range in each year since 1979.

Mr. Neubert: Bombing and firing runs have been made on Rosehearty range as follows:

1979 to 1986—No records available.
1987—8,332 passes.
1988—8,547 passes.
1989 (to May)—4,363 passes.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what increases in the hours of aerial bombing and firing activity at Rosehearty bombing range are planned for the month of July; on which dates these activities will take place; how many and what types of aircraft will take part; and what is the purpose of the additional activity.

Mr. Neubert: From 8 to 23 July, while Tain range is closed for maintenance work, the operating hours at Rosehearty range will be as follows:

Monday 0900-1630 and 1730-2200 (normally 0830-1200 and 1300-1630)
Tuesday 0900-1700 (normally 0830-1200 and 1300-1630)
Wednesday 0900-1630 and 1730-2200 (normally 0830-1200 and 1300-1630)
Thursday 0900-1700 (normally 0830-1200 and 1300-1630)
Friday 0900-1700 (normally 0830-1200 and 1300-1630)

The range will close for maintenance from 24 July until 11 August (except for 2 and 3 August).

Aircraft types using the range will be Jaguar, Buccaneer, F111, Tornado and Hawk. It is not possible to say in advance the numbers of aircraft involved, but the range utilisation is not expected to be greater than normal.

A local press release about the evening opening will be made during the week beginning 3 July.

Low Flying

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the special procedures to be followed by military pilots in low flying area 14C.

Mr. Neubert: Special procedures apply to aircraft operating in the coastal area between Aberdeen and Rattray Head because of intensive civilian helicopter activity in the area.

ROF Enfield

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he was aware of British Aerospace's proposals to close the former Royal Ordnance factory at Enfield at the time when the factory was sold to British Aerospace.

Mr. Sainsbury: No.

Tornado Aircraft

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the decision was taken to divert aircraft off the Royal Air Force Tornado production line in order to meet orders from Saudi Arabia and Oman; and what has been the impact on the timing of deliveries of Tornado aircraft to the Royal Air Force of these changes.

Mr. Salisbury [holding answer 14 June 1989]: Details of the decision to divert a small number of Tornado aircraft to meet orders from Saudi Arabia were announced during the RAF debate on 26 February 1986 at column 960. As the House has been informed, the diversion will have a temporary effect on the build up of the RAF's Tornado force.

I understand that Oman's order for Tornados has been postponed for the time being; the question of a consequent possible delay in the delivery of aircraft to the RAF does not, therefore, arise.

United States Warships (Visits)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list United States foreign naval warship visits to British ports from June 1987 to the present date, the time at which they visited, and the type of vessel involved.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 26 June 1989]: The following United States naval warships have visited British ports since June 1987:

| Port | Ship | Type | Dates |
|---|---|---|---|
| Thurso | McCoy | Frigate | 13 to 15 July 1987 |
| Leith | Capondanno | Frigate | 25 to 28 September 1987 |
| Portsmouth | Augusta | Submarine | 19 to 22 February 1988 |
| Portsmouth | Mendel Rivers | Submarine | 22 to 25 April 1988 |
| Plymouth | Portland | Dock Landing Ship | 13 to 15 June 1988 |
| Glasgow | Portland | Dock Landing Ship | 17 to 21 June 1988 |
| Leith | Portland | Dock Landing Ship | 30 June to 6 July 1988 |
| Portsmouth | Mississippi | Cruiser | 4 to 7 July 1988 |
| Loch Ewe | King | Destroyer | 5 to 6 July 1988 |
| Portsmouth | Sc Morrison | Frigate | 7 to 12 July 1988 |
| Leith | Elrod | Frigate | 11 to 15 August 1988 |
| Faslane | Baton Rouge | Submarine | 12 to 15 August 1988 |
| Liverpool | Elrod | Frigate | 2 to 6 September 1988 |
| Scapa Flow | Puget Sound | Destroyer Tender | 8 to 10 September 1988 |
| Portsmouth | Ly Spear | Submarine Tender | 16 to 22 September 1988 |
| Portsmouth | Semmes | Destroyer | 23 to 27 September 1988 |
| Portsmouth | Forrestal | Aircraft Carrier | 24 to 27 September 1988 |
| Newcastle | Portland | Dock Landing Ship | 28 September to 2 October 1988 |
| Newport | Annapolis | Frigate | 30 September to 2 October 1988 |
| Portsmouth | Mt Whitney | Amphib Command Ship | 2 to 6 October 1988 |
| Leith | Grapple | Salvage Ship | 8 to 13 October 1988 |
| Rosyth | Hayler | Destroyer | 25 October to 2 November 1988 |
| Faslane | Phoenix | Submarine | 1 to 9 November 1988 |
| Portsmouth | Albequerque | Submarine | 3 to 8 February 1989 |
| Southampton | Dahlgren | Destroyer | 19 to 22 March 1989 |
| Plymouth | Hayler | Destroyer | 19 to 22 March 1989 |
| Fairlie | McInery | Destroyer | 16 to 18 April 1989 |
| Portsmouth | Preble | Destroyer | 19 to 23 May 1989 |

Nuclear Weapons

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if there has been any increase in the number of the Royal Navy's tactical nuclear weapon capable ships since 1980; and if there are any plans in existence or under consideration to increase this capability.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No; I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for West Bromwich, East (Mr. Snape) on 27 June at column 385.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Atlantic Salmon

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what amounts of Atlantic salmon have been imported into (a) Great Britain, and (b) the United Kingdom in the last five years.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Atlantic salmon are not distinguished from other types of salmon in the statistics on overseas trade. The tonnages of all types of salmon imported, including prepared or preserved salmon, are shown in the table:

| | Imported into: | |
|---|---|---|
| | Great Britain Tonnes | United Kingdom Tonnes |
| 1984 | 27,770 | 28,107 |
| 1985 | 25,472 | 26,096 |
| 1986 | 33,978 | 34,482 |
| 1987 | 31,695 | 32,075 |
| 1988[1] | 25,684 | 25,975 |

[1] The figures for 1988 are not precisely comparable with those for earlier years due to the introduction of a revised classification for overseas trade statistics.

Shell Fish

Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department intends to take to assess the possible effects of the proposed long sea outfall from Rossall point to the Lune Deep on shell fish in Morecombe bay and adjacent coastal areas.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department has already assessed the design dilution and dispersion characteristics of the proposed outfall. We will maintain our routine monitoring of the contaminent levels in fish and shell fish in the eastern Irish Sea. In addition, information will be obtained as appropriate on the quality of shell fish in Morecombe bay from work undertaken by other relevant organisations.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what information his Department holds on the chemical quality of shell fish harvested in Morecombe bay and adjoining coastlines with particular reference to compounds identified as black, grey or red list; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what information is held by his Department on the bacteriological quality of shell fish harvested in Morecombe bay and adjoining coastlines; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what information is held by his Department on the virological quality of shell fish harvested in Morecombe bay and adjoining coastlines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave on 20 February to the hon. Member for Bootle (Mr. Roberts) at column 534.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many individual farmers or landowners receive annually in hill livestock compensatory allowance payments more than £25,000, £50,000, £100,000 and £200,000.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information requested is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the total loss to United Kingdom farmers of limiting hill livestock compensatory allowance payments to 90 livestock units; and at what stock level a farmer would be less well off under such a restriction than under the present system.

Mr. Donald Thompson: If HLCA payments to producers were limited to 90 livestock units per holding, we estimate that the total loss to United Kingdom farmers would be about £30 million per year under the existing scheme arrangements. The producers disadvantaged by any such limitation would be those with more than 90 beef cows or 600 breeding ewes (or a combination of cows and ewes in excess of 90 livestock units). Producers below these limits would be unaffected.

SCOTLAND

Alloa Sheriff Court

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average delay in bringing cases to trial in Alloa sheriff court.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The present period between the pleading diet and the trial diet in summary criminal cases at Alloa sheriff court is 15 weeks.

EMPLOYMENT

"New Life for Urban Scotland"

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he intends to answer the written question tabled by the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan on Tuesday 13 June, relating to the New Life for Urban Scotland programme.

Mr. Fowler: I have replied to the hon. Member today.

Inner Cities

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to introduce a scheme, as part of the New Life for Urban Scotland programme, whereby long-term unemployed people will be asked to work for employers on a benefit-only basis; what guarantee of employment will be attached to such arrangements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: On 9 March, in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre Forest (Mr. Coombs) Official Report, column 616, I announced that my Department will be piloting a scheme for employers to guarantee to interview long-term unemployed people in return for help in selecting and preparing them for jobs. As part of the scheme, unemployed people will have the option, on an entirely voluntary basis, of trying out a job for a short period of time while they are still drawing benefit. I shall be announcing full details of this scheme shortly.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 155

SESSION 1988–89

19th June—30th June 1989

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
